THIS WORK is designed to give a short, but comprehensive view of the world.

Some attempts have already been made, 'tis true, to settle the situation of the chief towns in the several quarters of the world; but the situation of the respective countries and provinces in which they lie, has generally been omitted; nor has the constitution of the government, the forces, the produce, or the religion of the several countries been mentioned in any abstract of this kind; which defects are supplied in the present undertaking; and the first meridian, which was formerly placed at the Canary Islands, is here fixed at London, the metropolis of these kingdoms, agreeable to Moll's modern maps, the most correct that are extant: The longitude also is reckoned both east and west from the first meridian, whereby the trouble of running many thousand miles round the globe, to the eastward, to find places that lie but a little to the westward of us, is saved. And in the beginning of the work is an introduction to the study of geography, with directions for the use of the Terrestrial Globe. The genealogies of the several Kings and Princes now reigning, with an account of their present families, are added also; and where any kingdom or people have changed their masters of late years, and become subject to another dominion, such alterations are taken notice of. And lastly, the situation of more than a thousand remarkable places are added, not to be found in any work of this nature; and the whole ranged in alphabetical order, so that any place may be turn'd to in an instant; and notwithstanding these additions and improvements, the whole is comprehended in a Pocket Volume; and will, 'tis presumed, be a very useful and entertaining companion to such Gentlemen as have a taste for history and geography, and desire to have a general view of the world, without diverting too much from such pursuits, as they apprehend of more importance. And the reader may rest assured, that scarce any thing is taken upon trust here, but the situation and distances of places have been carefully calculated and settled agreeable to the correctest maps, without following implicitly any writer whatever.

✠ *The editors of this new Dublin edition beg leave to inform the reader, that they have added, A compleat geography of IRELAND, including a topographical, descriptive and historical account of that kingdom, at least so far as such a work would allow; also, several remarkable places in N. America, which have been omitted in the London edition. These additional Articles are all marked thus ; and such other additions as have been made are included in crotchets. Hence the intelligent reader may readily perceive how much superior this edition is to the London.

AN INTRODUCTION TO GEOGRAPHY.

THE Terrestrial Globe, consisting of earth and water, rests upon nothing, but appears equally surrounded by the heavens on every part; and is represented by the artificial Globe, which shews what proportion of the surface is water, and what is land, and the situation of the several nations which inhabit it.

On the artificial globe are described the following circles:
1. The Equator, and the circles parallel to it. 2. The First Meridian, and the rest of the Meridional Lines, usually 24 in number. 3. The Zodiac, including the Ecliptic. 4. The Horizon. 5. The two Tropics. 6. The Arctic and Antarctic circles. And a line is supposed to pass through the center of the Globe, called its Axis, round which it moves every 24 hours; the ends or extremities of which Axis are called the Poles of the earth.

For though the Terrestrial Globe is usually treated of, according to appearances, as if the sun, moon, and stars rose every day in the east, and set in the west, it is generally known that the earth turns round upon its own axis, from west to east, every 24 hours, which occasions those appearances.

The Equator divides the Globe into two equal parts, or Hemispheres, the one north, and the other south on which circle are marked the degrees of longitude from the first Meridian, either east or west.

The Parallel Lines are so called from their running parallel to the Equator, of which there are nine in number (inclusive) between the Equator and either Pole, at 10 degrees distance

distance from each other, every degree of latitude being 60 geographical miles, and every 10 degrees 600 of the same miles; consequently, there are 5400 such miles (or 6000 English miles) between the Equator and either Pole, which is one quarter of the circumference of the Globe.

The First Meridian is represented by the brazen Circle, in which the Globe moves, crossing the First Meridian. Horizon at right angles, and dividing the Globe into the eastern and western Hemispheres. Upon this Circle are marked the degrees of latitude, which begin at the Equator, and are counted northward to the North or Arctic Pole, which is 90 degrees from the Equator. And, in like manner, the degrees of southern latitude are counted from the Equator to the Antarctic or South Pole.

The Meridional Lines described on the Meridional Lines. Globe, are 15 degrees (or one hour) asunder. From the First Meridian to the right-hand we reckon Eastern Longitude, and from the First Meridian to the left-hand we reckon Western Longitude, and from the Equator to either Pole we count the Latitude; if towards the North, or upper end of a map, we call it North Latitude; and if towards the South, or lower end of the map, we call it South Latitude. From whence it appears, that Longitude is nothing more than the distance one place is from another, east or west; and Latitude the distance of one place from another, north or south of the Equator.

The Zodiac is that circle which cuts the Zodiac. Equator obliquely, and is divided into 12 signs, through which the sun is supposed to pass within the space of 12 months, or 365 days, 6 hours (but in reality it is the earth that moves round the sun;) and in the Zodiac are the constellations which give name to the Signs. The Annual motion of the sun. Ecliptic is a line passing through the middle of the Zodiac, and shews the sun's, or rather the earth's orbit, or circle in which it moves.

The Horizon divides the Globe into the Horizon. upper and lower Hemispheres, terminating our views every way at sea, or upon an extensive plane, forming the upper and lower Hemisphere, the one

one visible, and the other hidden from us ; and the plane of this or any other circle described on the Terrestrial Globe, may be continued or extended till it marks a circle on the concave sphere of the heavens ; the first is called the plane of the Sensible Horizon, which seems to touch the surface of the earth ; the other is called the Rational Horizon, supposed parallel to the former, and to be extended to the heavens.

The place where any one stands, is the Center of his Horizon and Hemisphere, and the Poles of his Horizon are the same as two imaginary points in the heavens called the Zenith and Nadir ; the Zenith being the vertical point directly over his head ; and the Nadir that part of the heavens under his feet, diametrically opposite to the Zenith.

The Tropics describe the utmost limits of the Sun's course ; the Tropic of Cancer encompassing the Globe $23\frac{1}{2}$ degrees north of the Equator ; and the Tropic of Capricorn $23\frac{1}{2}$ degrees south of the Equator.

The Polar Circles are drawn $23\frac{1}{2}$ degrees distance from each Pole.

The Globe also is divided into five Zones, viz. one Torrid Zone, two Frigid Zones, and two Temperate Zones.

The Torrid Zone is that space which lies between the two Tropics, so denominated from the excessive heat of the climate.

The two Frigid Zones lie within the Arctic and Antarctic circles.

The northern temperate Zone lies between the Tropic of Cancer and the Arctic Circle ; and the southern Temperate Zone between the Tropic of Capricorn and the Antarctic circle.

The Elevation of the Pole is the height of the Pole above the Horizon, and is always equal to the latitude of the place. For example : If the south of England lie in 50 degrees of north latitude, the North Pole is of course elevated 50 degrees above the Horizon there ; for which reason, the latitude of a place, and the elevation of the pole, are used promiscuously to express the same thing.

The terms used in Geography to express the different situation of any people in respect of the place where we are, are these three, viz. 1. The Periæci. 2. The Antæci. 3. The Antipodes.

1. The Periæci are situate under the same parallel, but opposite Meridians. It is midnight with them when it is noon with us; but the length of days and their seasons are the same. These are found by turning the horary index 12 hours, or turning the Globe half round.

2. The Antæci are situate under the same meridian, but opposite parallels. These have the seasons opposite to ours; it is the middle of winter with them, when it is midsummer with us; but they have the same noon-day. These are found by numbering as many degrees on the opposite side of the equator as we are on this. Their longest day is our shortest, and so vice versa.

3. The Antipodes lie under opposite Meridians, and opposite Parallels. These have different seasons, and different days and nights. When it is summer with us, it is winter with them; and when it is noon with us, it is midnight with them; and their longest days are our shortest. These are found by turning the horary index 12 hours from the given place, or turning the Globe half round, and then counting as many degrees on the opposite side of the Equator, as the given place is on this.

The inhabitants of the earth also have different denominations, from their shadows falling different ways at noon-day, and are called Amphiscii, Ascii, Heteroscii or Periscii.

1. The Amphiscii inhabit the Torrid Zone, between the two Tropics. These have their shadows both north and south at noon-day. When the sun is south of them, their shadows are north; and when the sun is north of them at noon-day, their shadows are south. These are also called Ascii, because twice every year the sun is vertical at noon-day, and then they have no shadow.

2. The Heteroscii are those who inhabit either of the Temperate Zones, and have their shadows always one way at noon-day. Those in the northern Temperate Zone have their shadows always north, and those in the southern Temperate Zone have their shadows always south, at noon-day.

3. The Periscii are those who inhabit that part of the Globe within the Polar Circles. These have their shadows every way while the sun is above their Horizon all the 24 hours, as it is several months every year, when the sun is on that side of the Equator next them.

INTRODUCTION.

The Circumference of the Globe is 360 degrees, or 21,600 geographical miles round, and the diameter 7200; but if we compute by English miles, it is about 24,000 miles round, and the diameter about 8000. And when there are 24 Meridional Lines upon the Globe, these Lines are 1 hour or 15 degrees, asunder. Those who reside 15 degrees east of us, have the sun one hour before us; those who live 15 degrees west of us, have the sun an hour after us. The Meridional Lines, as they approach either Pole, incline nearer to each other, inso-much that a degree of longitude, that makes 60 geographical miles when measured on the Equator, makes but 37 miles when measured in 52 degrees of latitude. However, every degree of longitude is always 4 minutes of time, and 15 degrees of longitude are consequently 60 minutes of time, or one hour, whether the distance of miles between the Meridional Lines are more or less; and there are tables which shew how many miles a degree of longitude makes in every latitude, which may be found also by measuring the distances between the Meridional Lines. There are tables also which shew the different climates, and the length of days in each; but these may be shewn also upon the Globe, as will appear in the following Geographical Problems:

To find the Sun's place in the Ecliptic.

Observe the day of the month in the calendar on the Horizon, and opposite to it you will find the sign and degree in which the Sun is.

The hour being given in any place, to find what hour it is in any other part of the world.

Rectify the Globe for the given place, and bring it to the Meridian; then fix the index at the given hour, and turn the Globe, and bring the places successively to the Meridian, and the index will shew the hour at the place required.

Thus, when it is 4 o'clock at London, it will be 5 at Naples, 6 at Constantinople and Petersburg, 10 at Bengall, 11 at Batavia, and near 12 at night at Pekin; 12 at noon at Barbadoes, and 11 in the morning at Port-Royal in Jamaica.

The

I N T R O D U C T I O N.

The day of the month being given, to find the places on the Globe where the Sun is in the Zenith that day.

Observe the Sun's place in the Ecliptic, and bring it to the Meridian; then mark the degree over it, and turning the Globe round, all the places which pass under that degree will have the Sun in the Zenith that day.

The hour being given at one place, to find at what place the Sun is in the Zenith at that hour.

The Sun's place in the Ecliptic being brought to the Meridian, and the degree over it marked, bring the given place to the Meridian, and setting the index to the given hour, turn the Globe till the index come to the upper 12, and the place of the earth which stands under the observed degree in the Meridian, has the Sun at that moment in the Zenith.

The day and hour being given to find the places where the Sun is then rising, setting, or in the Meridian.

Find the place where the Sun is vertical at the given hour, rectify the Globe for the latitude of that place, and bring it to the Meridian; then all those places that are in the west Semi-circle of the Horizon have the Sun rising, and those in the east Semi-circle have the Sun setting; and at all the places under the Meridian it is noon-day.

To find the length of the day in any place.

Elevate the Pole according to the latitude of the given place, find the Sun's place in the Ecliptic, which being brought to the east side of the Horizon, set the index at noon, and turning the Globe about, till the said place in the Ecliptic touch the west side of the Horizon, and wherever the index points, reckon the number of hours between the same and the upper figure of 12, and that is the length of the day.

Eastern and western Hemispheres. The earth is usually divided into the eastern and western continents; the eastern, which we inhabit, comprehends Europe, Asia, and Africa; the western continent contains only America.

The waters also are thrown into three grand divisions:

Seas. 1. The Atlantic ocean, which divides Europe and Africa from America; this is generally about 3000 miles wide. 2. The Pacific Ocean or South Sea, which divides America from Asia; this is generally about 10,000 miles over. 3. The Indian Ocean, which separates the East-Indies from Africa, and this is generally 3000 miles over. In all these seas, at a distance from land, the winds always always fit easterly between the Tropics, and something beyond, except under the Equator, or near it, where they are variable, as they are also in above 30 degrees of north or south latitude.

Europe, the least division of the Eastern Europe's situation. Continent, is situate between 36 and 72 degrees of north latitude, and between 10 degrees west, and 65 degrees of eastern longitude, being about 3000 miles long from north to south, and 2500 miles broad from east to west; bounded by the Frozen Ocean (part of the Atlantic) on the north, and by Asia on the east; by the Mediterranean Sea, which separates it from Africa, on the south, and by another part of the Atlantic Ocean on the west.

Europe is thrown into three grand divisions, Grand divisions. viz. I. The north or upper division, consist- North. ing of, 1. Russia or Moscovy. 2. Sweden. 3. Denmark and Norway, and, 4. The islands of Britain, Iceland, Greenland, and those of the Baltic.

II. The middle division, which consists of, Middle. 1. Poland. 2. Germany, and the hereditary dominions of the house of Austria, contiguous to it. 3. The Low Countries, or Netherlands. 4. France, with its late conquests and acquisitions on the Rhine.

III. The southern division, which compre- South. hends, 1. Turkey in Europe (the ancient Greece chiefly) the tributary provinces of Moldavia, Walachia, the Crim and Lesser Tartary. 2. Switzerland, with the Grisons and the rest of their allies and subjects. 3. Italy, Spain, and Portugal, and 4. The islands of the Mediterranean, consisting of those in the Archipelago, Sicily, Sardinia, Corsica, Majorca, Minorca, and Ilica.

Asia is situate between 25 and 148 degrees of eastern longitude, and between the Equator Asia situation. and 72 degrees of north latitude, bounded by the Frozen Ocean on the north, by the Pacific Ocean on the east, by the Indian Ocean on the south, and separated from Africa by the Red Sea on the south-west, and by the Archipelago, the Euxine Sea, &c. which separate it from Europe, on the north-west.

This quarter also is thrown into three divisions, viz. I. The empire of China, Chi- Grand division. nesian Tartary, and the Oriental Islands on Eastern division. the east.

The Spanish dominions comprehend, 1. Old Mexico. 2. New Mexico. 3. Florida. 4. Terra Firma. 5. Peru. 6. Chili. 7. Patagonia, or the Terra Magellanica. 8. Paragua and La Plata. 9. The Amazons country. And, 10. The Spanish islands; of which the most considerable are Cuba, Hispaniola, Porto-Rico, and Trinidad. Spanish dominions.

II. The second grand division of America, is that subject to Portugal, containing that large maritime country of Brazil, extending from the river Amazon under the Equator, to the river La Plata, which lies in 35 degrees of south latitude, being upwards of 3000 miles in length from north to south, but scarce 200 miles wide. Portuguese territories.

III. The third grand division of America is subject to Great-Britain, and lies along the eastern coast of North America, from 30 to 51 degrees of north latitude, comprehending, 1. Georgia. 2. South Carolina. 3. North Carolina. 4. Virginia. 5. Maryland. 6. Pennsylvania. 7. The two Jerseys. 8. New York. 9. New England. 10. New Scotland, and New Britain. 11. The islands belonging to Britain, viz. Jamaica, Barbadoes, St. Christophers, Newfoundland, &c. and lastly Hudson's Bay, or British Canada, which, lies north of the rest, and at some distance, being separated from them by French Canada. British dominions.

IV. The French claim the fourth grand division of America, which, according to their maps, extends from the Gulph of Mexico to the north of Canada, i. e. from 28 to 52 degrees of north latitude, being 1500 miles in length from north to south, and make their extent from east to west very little less, for their maps lay them down between the British dominions, on the east, and New Mexico on the west, comprehending most part of Florida and Canada; to which countries they have given the names of Louisiana, and New France. The islands of Caen, and some countries on the adjacent continent of South America, which lie near the Equinoctial, also are subject to France, as is part of the island of Hispaniola, Martinico, Gaudalope, and several more of the Caribbee islands. French dominions.

The Dutch are possessed of Surinam on the coast of Guiana or Caribiana in South America, of some of the Caribbee Islands, and others on the north coast of Terra Firma; of which those of Curassow, Aruba, and Dutch.

Denmark is also possessed of the island of St. Thomas, one of the Caribbees.

I shall conclude this introduction with a general description of Old England, our native country, the state whereof it concerns us to be acquainted with more than that of any other nation.

ENGLAND.

The southern division of the island of Great-Britain, is situated in the Atlantic Ocean, between two degrees east, and six degrees odd minutes western longitude, and between 49 degrees, 55 minutes, and 55 degrees, 55 minutes north latitude, being of a triangular figure, bounded by Scotland on the north, the German sea, which separates it from Germany, and the Netherlands on the east, by the English channel, which divides it from France, on the south, and by St. George's channel, which separates it from Ireland, on the west, being exactly 360 geographical miles in length from north to south, and 300 in breadth from east to west, in the south, but scarce 100 broad in the north.

The air is much warmer here than in the countries under the same parallel, viz. in the Netherlands and Germany; and generally healthful, unless in the fens and marshy grounds.

There are very few mountains; the highest hills are in Wales, and in the west and north of England. The rest of the country consists of moderate hills and valleys, woodlands, enclosed pasture-grounds and meadows, extensive corn fields and plains, which feed innumerable flocks of sheep, horses, and neat cattle.

Holderness in Yorkshire, and the fenny part of Lincolnshire, produce the largest oxen; and Yorkshire, in general, furnishes us with the finest breed of horses for the saddle; and there are a great many royal forests, chases, and parks, which afford variety of deer and other game, in every part of the kingdom.

The soil is either clay, gravel, or sand; the clays produce excellent wheat and beans; the gravel and sand, rye, barley, peas, and oats; and the light lands of late years have been improved and made as valuable as the clays, by sowing them with turnips, clover, cinquefoil, &c. especially in wet years; but a wet season does not agree with the clays: There is usually a great scarcity of wheat in such years; but then there is plenty of other grain and pasture.

The timber growing in England, is oak, ash, elm, beach, and hornbeam. The walnut tree is used in cabinets and other fine works; besides which there are poplar, arbores, sycamore, maple, hazle, willow, horse-chestnut, and other trees, which do not come under the denomination of timber, but serve, however, for shade, ornament, and inferior uses.

There are large plantations of hops, especially in Kent and Essex: And in other countries there are plantations of flax and hemp; but in these England does not abound. In Kent are extensive orchards of apples and cherries. In Devonshire and Herefordshire also, are vast quantities of apples, of which excellent cyder is made, such as no other counties will produce; and if the trees are transplanted, they degenerate.

Most of the fruits of Europe have been introduced here; but we have scarce any that are natural to the soil; and those that have been brought from warmer climates have not that delicious flavour they had in their native soil. And as we have introduced foreign fruits, so we have all manner of plants, roots and herbs, that are found in the kitchen-gardens of our neighbour nations.

In Essex and Cambridgeshire are large plantations of saffron; and in Bedfordshire, fields of woad or wad for dying. It has been computed that the arable lands sown with wheat annually produce thirty-four millions of bushels; and the lands sown with barley produce as much; and the lands sown with horse-grain, such as peas, beans, oats and vetches, produce as much as both the former.

Those that have made an estimate of the nation's income, compute, that there are forty millions of acres of land in the kingdom, whereof ten millions are arable, which, at five shillings per acre, yield annually 2,500,000*l.* fourteen millions of pasture, meadow, fens, and wood grounds, which, at ten shillings per acre, yield 7,000,000*l.* sixteen millions in forests, chases, and heaths, high-ways, common and waste grounds, which, at two shillings per acre, yield 1,600,000*l.* and one million of houses, exclusive of lands, which yield 4,000,000*l.*; that our exports and coasting trade produce annually 6,000,000*l.* and our manufactures produce 8,000,000*l.*; which made the whole national income at that time 29,100,000*l.* but as this computation was made by Dr. Davenant fifty years ago, we may, considering the improvements that have been made in lands, the increase of buildings, and the multiplication of the people people, add 4,000,000*l.* more to the national income, and then it amounts to 33,100,000*l.* The same gentleman computes, that there were then six millions of people in England, which, at 5 pound a-head, expend 30,000,000*l.* 3,000,000*l.* raised for the support of the government, and 2,000,000*l.* more to discharge the interest of the debt of 75,000,000*l.* contracted in the late wars; which makes our expences to exceed the national income near 2,000,000*l.* but as our people are much increased since that estimate, so the interest of the public debts is very much diminished, by reducing the interest of the public debt to 3, and $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.; therefore our expences possibly, do not much exceed the national income. Nor did Dr. Davenant, in his calculations, consider the Fisheries, which are certainly a very valuable branch of business, and add considerably to the wealth of the nation, tho' they are not so considerable as those of the Dutch.

There are scarce any lakes in England: Those in Cumberland, and some in Lincolnshire and the Isle of Ely, which have only the appearance of lakes in winter, are the chief. The most considerable navigable rivers are, 1. The Thames, which runs generally from West to East, on which the cities of London and Oxford stand. This river is navigable for ships as high as London, which is one of the greatest ports in the world.

2. The Medway, which unites with the Thames near its mouth, and receives the largest men of war as high as Chatham, where are the finest docks, yards, and magazines of naval stores in Europe.

3. The Trent, which runs from the S. W. to the N. E. cross England, dividing it into North and South; and being united with several other streams near its mouth, is call'd the Humber, discharging itself into the German ocean.

4. The Severn, rising in North Wales, and running for the most part South, falls into the Irish sea; on which stand the cities of Worcester and Gloucester.

The heads of those great rivers, or of others which fall into them, lie so near together, that it would be very easy to unite them by canals, and have a communication by water from sea to sea quite through the kingdom, which would be of infinite advantage to trade, land-carriage going deep into the profits of every kind of manufacture, especially the woollen, the manufacturers being forc'd to fetch their wool in waggons frequently from the most distant parts of the kingdom.

There

INTRODUCTION.

There are in England and Wales fifty-two counties, two archbishoprics, twenty-four bishoprics, two universities, twenty-nine cities, if the four bishoprics of Wales are to be accounted such, but these are little better than villages at present, upwards of eight hundred towns, and near ten thousand parishes; in which are about 7,000,000 of people. There are scarce any manufactures in Europe which are not brought to great perfection in England. And as to the woollen manufacture, it exceeds any thing of that kind in other nations both in goodness and quantity, notwithstanding every other state has of late years endeavour'd to excel in it. The silk manufacture also is equal to that of France or any other country: our dyers are very numerous, and not exceeded by any other nation, either in the beauty or durableness of their colours: and the printers and stainers of cottons have brought that art to great perfection: our printers of books print them as beautifully as the Dutch or any people whatever; but still, books cannot be afforded so cheap here as in other countries, the workmen there taking less wages than they do in England. Our most eminent engravers and statuaries have been foreigners, but we can now boast of some very good ones among the natives: and many of our mechanics excel other nations in their watches, clocks, locks, and edge-tools: their cabinet-work also is much admir'd: and the manufacture of glass is brought to great perfection, viz. coach-glass, looking-glass, perspectives, drinking-glasses, &c. The gold-smiths and silver-smiths, braziers, carpenters, and upholsterers, hatters, tailors and shoemakers, do not only furnish England with every thing that is wanted of this kind, but vast quantities are exported to foreign countries, as well as to the British plantations. The skreen and chair-makers contribute to the adorning and furnishing the dwelling-house. Our ship and house carpenters, masons, bricklayers and smiths, are equal to the most ingenious foreigners, and employ a multitude of hands; as do the tanners, coach-makers, wheel-wrights and saddlers. The multitudes employ'd in husbandry contribute still more than any other set of men to the supporting and enriching the nation. The grazier and farmer do not only feed and cloath the numerous inhabitants, but incredible quantities of corn, as well as woollen manufactures, are exported abroad, and many thousand ships are annually victualled and fitted out for distant voyages, or the defence of the kingdom; which brings me to consider a little more particularly our foreign traffic, which is vastly great, some of it carried on by companies, and the rest by private merchants. The Hamburg merchants were first incorporated, anno 1296: these export broad-cloth, druggets, long-ells, serges, and several sorts of stuffs, tobacco, sugar, ginger, East-India goods, tin and lead, which are consumed in Lower Germany; from whence they import great quantities of linen-yarn, kid-skins, tin-plates, and other articles.

The Russia merchants export coarse woollen cloths, long-ells, worsted, stuffs, tin, lead, and tobacco; and import from Russia, hemp, flax, linen, linen-yarn, Russia-leather, tallow, furs, iron, pot-ashes, and naval stores.

The Eastland company trade to all the countries within the Sound, viz. Norway, Sweden, Poland, Livonia, Prussia, Pomerania, and Mecklenburg; but this trade as well as that to Norway and Denmark, is in a manner laid open. To these countries we carry some of our cloth, and other manufactures; but send chiefly ready money for their iron, copper, timber, and naval stores; and the Turkey merchants export broad-cloth, long-ells, tin, lead, iron, sugar, and some bullion. And they import great quantities of raw silk, grogram-yard, dying-stuffs, drugs, soap, leather, cotton, fruit, and oil.

The East-India company export bullion to a very great value, lead, cloth, and some other English manufactures: and import raw and wrought silks, calicoes, chints, tea, China-ware, cabinets, &c. All the wrought silks and calicoes being exported again.

The African and Guiney merchants purchase Negroes with the manufactures and produce of England, and transport the Negroes to the British plantations in America: they bring home also gold-dust, ivory, red-wood, Guiney-grain, &c.

The African company, 'tis said, never traded for more than 5 or 6000 Negroes annually: but since that trade has been laid open, 30,000 and upwards have been purchased in a year,

The Canary company export bays, kerseys, serges, Norwich stuffs, stockings, hats, fustians, haberdashery wares, tin, hard-ware, herrings, pilchards, pipe-staves, &c. And they import Canary wines, logwood, hides, indigo, cochineal, and other produce of Spanish America.

The Hudson's-bay company export woollen goods, haberdashery wares, knives, hatchets, arms, and other hard-ware; and import great quantities of beaver skins, and other skins and furs.

The

INTRODUCTION.

The trade to Italy is carried on by separate merchants, who export broad cloth, long-ells, bays, druggets, callimancoes, camblets, and other stuffs, leather, tin, lead, fish, pepper, and East-India goods; and they import raw and wrought silk, wine, soap, olives, oil, anchovies, and dyers wares. The balance for thrown silk, to Piedmont only, amounted at one time to 200,000 pounds.

The merchants that trade to Spain export broad cloth, druggets, bays, long-ells, callimancoes, and other stuffs, tin, lead, leather, fish, corn, and haberdashery wares: and they import wine, oil, salt, and fruits. From this trade, 'tis computed, England did receive a greater balance than from any other: But the French have the greatest share of this trade at present.

To France our merchants used to export tobacco, horn-plates, tin, lead, flannel, and corn; and they imported from thence wine, brandy linen, fine cambrics, lace, lawn, brocades, velvets, and other rich silk manufactures; but these last articles are now run in upon us, or brought by the way of Holland. This trade with France is the most disadvantageous of any to England; it were better we had no trade with them; but scarce any thing is liked by the Quality, either to drink or wear, but what is French.

To Flanders our merchants export some serges, flannels, and stuffs, sugar, tobacco, tin, and lead; and import from thence fine cambrics, lawns, lace, linen, thread, and tapes, to a very great value; so that the balance is very much against us.

To Holland we export broad-cloth, druggets, long-ells, stuffs, leather, corn, coals, India and Turkey re-exported goods, sugars, tobacco, rice, ginger, pitch, tar, and the produce of our plantations; and we import lace, cambrics, fine holland, linen, thread, tapes, incles, whalefins, madder, argol, toys, clapboard, wainscot, India spices, (viz.) nutmegs, mace, cloves, and cinnamon.

To Ireland the merchants export fine broad-cloth, silk, ribbons, gold and silver lace, cutlery wares, pewter, hops, coals, tobacco, sugar East-India goods, hollands, and whatever they wear almost, except linen and coarse woollen; and we import from thence woollen and linen-yarn, and wool in the fleece. And many of their noblemen and gentlemen, residing in England, most part of their rents are returned hither, and spent here. The Irish export to Holland, France, Flanders, Portugal, and the West-Indies, great quantities of beef, butter and tallow.

INTRODUCTION.

From England are exported to the Sugar Islands, in America, all manner of cloathing, both linen and woollen, and furniture for their houses; and we take the produce of those islands in return, which, besides sugar, yield ginger, indigo, rum, molasses, coffee, and formerly the cacao or chocolate-nut was cultivated in Jamaica.

To the Tobacco Plantations, on the continent of America, also, are exported all manner of cloathing and furniture, receiving tobacco in return, which is great part of it re-exported.

To Carolina, the same species of goods are carried as to the Tobacco Plantations; and we receive from thence vast quantities of rice and skins, pitch and tar; and the country produces some silk. There are hopes also, that we may receive wine from thence, the country producing grapes spontaneously. And the olive-tree thrives here, which, if cultivated, may furnish us with oil, in another age.

Our merchants export all manner of cloathing and furniture to the northern colonies, (viz.) Pensilvania, the Jerseys, New York, and New England; which they pay for with logwood, and the produce of Spanish America, with which they carry on a clandestine trade frequently, and send over hither all the silver they can pick up on those coasts.

As to the constitution of the government, England is a limited monarchy; the power of making and altering laws, and raising taxes, being lodged in the king, lords, and commons. Anciently, the lords had a great influence on the whole state, and have sometimes brought the crown very low. Afterwards, the commons grew up to great power, and had no small share in the direction of the government; but the crown has since found means to engage the other branches of the legislature so effectually in its interests, that it has met with very little opposition from either of late years.

Until the reign of King Charles II. there were no standing forces in England, unless the gentlemen-pensioners, and the yeomen of the guard may be reckoned such; and, in that reign, the regular troops did not amount to 4000 men. In the reigns of King William and Queen Anne, the standing forces, in time of peace, were limited to 7000, or thereabouts.

As to the administration of justice; this is the business of the courts in Westminster-hall, (viz.) the court of Chancery, the courts of King's-bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, courts of the respective Corporations, the Sheriffs, and other inferior courts; the last resort in all civil causes being to the House of Peers. But how just and equitable soever the laws of England may be, and however impartially administered by the respective courts, such is the expence of coming at justice, that it is much more prudent to lose a small sum, than to go to law for it. And where a man has a rich adversary to contend with, he will be obliged to spend vast sums to come at his right, and perhaps be kept in suspense many years, be his cause ever so just.

The ecclesiastical Government is in the archbishops and bishops, who administer justice in their respective courts, in matters relating to ecclesiastical affairs, by their chancellors, officials,

By

INTRODUCTION.

officials, archdeacons, and other officers; and these courts also take cognizance of all causes relating to tithes, wills, administrations, and marriage-contracts. In the court of Chancery, and the Ecclesiastical courts, witnesses are examined on interrogatories, and their depositions taken in writing, on which the judge founds his decrees; but in the courts of common law, the witnesses are examined viva voce, and cross-examined in court, and on their evidence, a jury of twelve substantial freeholders, return'd by the sheriff, determine every fact; nor can the judges reverse or alter their verdict, unless some corrupt or indirect practices appear to have been used in obtaining it.

Of the CONVOCATION.

Whenever a parliament is called, the king always convokes a national synod of the clergy, to consider of the state of the church, directing his writs to the archbishop of each province, to summon all bishops, deans, archdeacons, &c. to meet at a certain time and place. And thereupon, the archbishop of Canterbury directs his mandate to the bishop of London, as dean provincial, to cite all bishops, deans, archdeacons, to appear at a certain day, directing him, that one proctor be sent for each cathedral and collegiate church, and two for the body of the inferior clergy of each diocese. The convocation of the clergy of the province of Canterbury usually assemble in St. Paul's cathedral, in London, and from thence adjourn to the chapter house, or Westminster.

The upper house, in this province, consists of twenty-two bishops, of whom the archbishop is president. And the lower house consists of all the deans, archdeacons, one proctor for every chapter, and two proctors for the clergy of each diocese; in all 166.

The archbishop of York may hold a convocation of his clergy at the same time; but neither the one nor the other has been suffered to enter upon business for many years, tho' they are always regularly summoned to meet with every parliament, being looked upon as an essential part of the constitution.

Of the ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.

The highest ecclesiastical court is that of the Delegates; which

INTRODUCTION.

which consists of commissioners appointed by his majesty, under the broad seal, to hear appeals from inferior courts.

The next court is that of the Arches, to which are directed appeals in ecclesiastical causes in the province of Canterbury. Here the judge alone determines the cause, without a jury: and all process, in this court, runs in the name of the judge.

In the court of Audience, the archbishop avocates a cause to his own hearing.

The Prerogative court takes cognizance of wills, and intestates estates.

The court of Peculiars takes cognizance of causes in certain parishes, exempt from the jurisdiction of the bishop of any diocese.

The bishop of every diocese hath a court held in his cathedral, that takes cognizance of wills, intestates estates, &c. where his chancellor is judge; and where the diocese is large, he hath commissaries in the distant parts, who sit as judges in the places assigned them; and these are called Consistory courts.

Every archdeacon also hath his court, and judges of causes of an inferior nature within his jurisdiction.

Of the PARLIAMENT.

Every Parliament is summoned by the king's writs to meet, fifty days before they assemble; a writ is directed to every particular lord, spiritual and temporal, commanding him to appear at a certain time and place, to treat and advise of certain weighty affairs relating to church and state.

Writs also are sent to the sheriff of every county, to summon those who have a right to vote for representatives, to elect two knights for each county, two citizens for each city, and one or two burgesses for each borough, according to ancient custom.

Every candidate for a county, in England, ought to be possessed of an estate of 600 l. per annum; and every candidate for a city or corporation, of 300 l. per annum.

The lord chancellor, or keeper for the time being, is always speaker in the house of Peers, but the commons elect their speaker, who must be approved by the king. No Roman Catholic can sit in either house, nor any member vote till he has taken the oaths to the government.

The

INTRODUCTION.

The twelve judges and the masters in chancery, sit in the house of Peers, but have no vote ; but the judges give their opinions in points of law when it is required ; and the masters in chancery are usually employed upon messages to the commons, and carrying down bills. The commons send up all messages and bills by some of their own members. The lords have the privilege of making proxies to vote for them in their absence, but the commons have not.

The commons only have the power of introducing money bills, in which they will not suffer the lords to make any alteration, tho' they may reject the whole.

The commons can impeach any peer of the realm, but the lords only can try them for capital offences, either upon an indictment, or an impeachment, and the whole house are made judges of the offence, tho' the trial be in the intervals of parliament.

Any member of the commons may move to bring in a bill, which, if agreed to, he prepares it with some of his friends, and presents it to the house, and it being read a first time, the speaker reads an abstract of the bill, and puts the question if it shall have a second reading ; and upon the second reading, it is usually committed to a committee, or thrown out.

When the committee has gone thro' the bill, the chairman makes his report at the side-bar, reading all the alterations made by the committee, which are either agreed to, or rejected by the house, as the question is put on every one of them ; and the question's being again put, whether the bill so amended shall be engrossed and read a third time, on a farther day, and resolved in the affirmative, the speaker at that day puts the question, if the bill shall pass ; which if agreed to, is then carried to the lords.

There must be forty members present to constitute a house of commons, and eight in a committee.

If a bill be rejected, it can't be brought in again the same sessions.

The members direct their speeches only to the speaker, and if any one answers, the first is not allowed to reply the same day. And if a bill be debated in the house, no member can speak to it more than once the same day, unless the house be turned into a committee, and then every man may speak to it as often as he pleases, if the chairman think proper.

The commons give their votes by ay's and no's, and if it be uncertain which is the greater number, the house divides. If

INTRODUCTION.

the question be to bring any matter into the house, as a bill or petition, then the ay's go out; but if it relates to any thing the house is already possessed of, the no's go out. If it be in a committee, they change sides; the ay's taking the right, and the no's the left hand of the chair.

Where the houses differ about a bill, or any other matter, a conference is demanded in the painted chamber, where a deputation from each house meet, the lords sitting covered at a table, and the commons standing bare. If they agree, the bill usually receives the royal assent; but the king may reject it.

A bill for a general pardon coming from the crown, is read but once, in either house; tho' every other bill is read three times.

After an adjournment of either house, things continue in the same state they were in 'till the next meeting, and may then be resumed; but by a prorogation the session is ended, and all bills that did not receive the royal assent, are lost.

The parliament was formerly dissolved by the king's death, but now they shall continue sitting, or assemble, if they are not sitting; and continue so till dismissed by the successor.

In the house of Peers every lord gives his vote (beginning with the youngest) declaring he is Content or not Content. And here all things are carried by a majority, as in the house of Commons.

Of the COURTS OF JUSTICE.

The court of Chancery, of which the lord chancellor or keeper is the sole judge, is a court of Equity, and examines chiefly into frauds, breaches of trust, and secret uses; and moderates the rigor of the common law in many cases. The proceedings are by bills, answers, and decrees; the witnesses are examined in private, but its decrees can only bind the persons of the suitors, and not their lands or goods; so that if a man chuses to lie in prison rather than obey a decree of the court of chancery, there is no remedy for it.

The lord chancellor hath twelve assistants, usually called masters in chancery; the first whereof is the master of the rolls, so called from his being keeper of the rolls, or records belonging to the court of chancery; and, in the absence of the chancellor, he hears causes at the rolls, and sometimes in the court of chancery; he hath also in his gift the offices of the Six Clerks.

The office of the Six Clerks, is to inroll commissions, pardons, patents, &c. which pass the great seal, and they are attornies tornies for the suitors in all cases depending in this court. And under these clerks are sixty more, who dispatch all the business of that office. And there are two examiners in the court of chancery, who examine all witnesses on their oaths, and take their depositions.

INTRODUCTION.

The court of Chancery issues out commissions for charitable uses, inquiring into such frauds and abuses as may have been committed, where estates or money have been given to any charitable use, obliging the trustees to perform their trust, according to the intent of the respective donors.

The Masters in chancery sit on the bench with the Lord Chancellor, three at a time, by turns; and to them are usually referred matters of account, but never the merits of any cause.

The court of king's-bench takes cognizances of all criminal causes, viz. treasons, felonies, and breaches of the peace, and can examine, controul, and correct the judgments and proceedings of other courts, not only in pleas of the crown, but in all pleas, real, personal, and mix'd, except those of the Exchequer. There are four judges in this court, viz. the lord chief justice, styled, lord chief justice of England, and lord chief justice, by way of eminence, who is created by patent, as well as the three puisne judges: they all hold their places for life. The salary of the chief justice being 4000 l. per annum, and of each of the other judges 1500 l. per annum.

This court grants prohibitions to other courts, both ecclesiastical and civil, when they exceed the bounds of their jurisdiction. All matters of fact, relating either to civil or criminal causes, are determined here by a jury.

The court of Common Pleas takes cognizance only of civil causes; and real actions are pleadable no where else: neither can fines be levied, or recoveries suffered in any other court. The judges of this court are the lord chief justice of the Common Pleas, and three other judges; the salary of the chief 2000 l. and of each of the puisne judges 1500 l. per annum. They are created by patent for life. None but serjeants at law can plead in this court; and the trial of all facts are by a jury.

In the court of exchequer are tried all causes relating to the public revenues, as well as those of private right between party and party; and the Exchequer is a court of equity, as well as a court of law; where suitors proceed by way of bill and answer. The salary of the lord chief baron is 2000 l. per annum, and the other three barons have a salary of 1500 l. per annum each, and enjoy their places for life.

The

INTRODUCTION.

The counties of England being divided into six circuits, two of the twelve judges are assigned to go each of the circuits twice a year, when they hear and determine all criminal as well as civil causes, at the assizes held for the respective counties, in spring and autumn. All facts being tried by a jury, as they are in the courts of, common law in Westminster-hall.

Wales, also, is divided into circuits, and two judges appointed annually to hear and determine causes in each.

In every city, both civil and criminal causes are tried in the court of the mayor and aldermen, in trivial matters; but they determine no capital cases, nor pleas of land; and causes may be removed from thence to the superior courts. And in towns that are incorporated, the magistrates have the like power of holding courts, and determining causes.

The lords of manors also hold courts-leet, and courts-baron, where their tenants are obliged to attend and receive justice, in some few cases: but the business of courts-leet is chiefly to present and punish nuisances; and at courts-baron, the conveyances, and alienations of the copy-hold tenants are enrolled, and they are admitted to their estates on a descent or purchase. There are also Sheriffs-courts, and Hundred-courts, held in all parts of England, where little matters are controverted; but these inferior courts are the plague of every neighbourhood, the suit being managed by little rascally pettifoggers, who commit more robberies, under the colour of law, than all the highwaymen in England: and what renders these oppressions still the more grievous is, that they are usually exercised on the poorest people, unable to defend themselves, who are surprised into an execution, and their beds taken from under them, where the matter in dispute is but for a trifle. If courts of conscience were erected in the country, as in London, for the recovery of small debts, a great deal of this barbarity might be prevented. Several courts of conscience have been erected in other parts of the kingdom, by act of parliament, since the former impressions of these sheets, and other places may have them on application to parliament.

Justices of peace are appointed in every county, who have in a great measure the government of it; and the only qualification required for that office is an estate of 100l. per annum, no matter whether he understands a syllable of law, tho' he is intrusted with a power of putting great part of the statute-law in execution, in relation to the poor, the highways, vagrants, treasons, felonies, riots, the preservation of the game, &c. In capital offences indeed, they only commit or bind over the offender sender to take his trial at the assizes; but in most other cases they determine matters finally at their quarter-sessions, especially in relation to the poor. And indeed the justices, even out of sessions, have a very great power over the lower sort of people, as to their settlements and removals. A justice of peace usually acts as arbitrarily in his division as any prince in Europe in his territories, and it is in vain for a poor man to oppose him, however oppressive or unjust his proceedings may be; but never were such oppressions exercised more frequently than when the power of pressing soldiers was committed to them: If a labouring man was about to marry, he was surely sent for a soldier, to prevent bringing a charge upon the parish; and justices, constables, and other officers, have often sent poor men away from their families only to gratify their revenge, or serve a present turn: many of them have been thrown into dungeons, and almost starved, before the officers came to take them off their hands; and some of them have been found such miserable objects, that neither the sea or land officers would entertain them.

As to the office of high constable, or petty constable, it consists chiefly in serving the justices warrants and orders, and keeping the peace, and apprehending vagabonds; but they can't detain an offender any longer than they can conveniently have him before a justice of the peace.

The lord lieutenants, and deputy lieutenants, had heretofore a considerable power and influence in their respective counties; but since the increase of our standing forces, the militia under their command have been seldom mustered or exercised; when they are, every estate of 300l. per annum, finds a trooper, and every estate of 50l. per annum, a foot soldier, and people of smaller estates join to furnish out a horse or foot soldier. The pay of a horseman being 2s. 6d. a day, and that of a footman 1s. For the providing arms and ammunition, the lord lieutenant, and, in his absence, the deputy lieutenants, are empowered to levy, annually, a fourth part of each man's proportion of the tax of 70,000l. per month, on the whole kingdom. And where the militia are required to march out of their respective counties, they are empowered to levy a month's pay for every soldier, which is to be repaid by the government; but the month's pay raised soon after the revolution, when the fleet under admiral Torrington was defeated, and the militia were required to march towards the sea coast, is not yet repaid.

the foot of the Pyrenees, 32 m. S. W. of Narbonne, and 10 m. S. of Carcassone; a bish. under the archb. of Narbonne.

ALEXANDRIA, E. lon. 8. 52. lat. 44. 45. a city of Italy, in the pr. of Alexandria, in the D. of Milan, sit. on the river Tenaro, 45 m. S. W. of Milan, and 40 m. N. W. of Genoa; a bish. under the archb. of Milan, sub. to the K. of Sardinia, to whom it was yielded by the house of Austria, in consideration of his services against France, and confirm'd to him by the peace of Utrecht, anno 1713.

ALEXANDRIA, E. lon. 31. 15. lat. 30. 40. a great city and port town of the Lower Egypt, in Africa, sit. 14 m. W. of the most westerly branch of the river Nile, and 120 m. N. W. of the city of Grand Cairo. The old town was about 7 m. in circumference; built by Alexander the Great, and still called Scandria by the Turks, but, except one long street which faces the harbour, it is only a heap of ruins at this day; there is little left standing but part of the walls, which have great square towers, at 200 paces distant, and a little tower between them; every one of the great towers could contain 200 soldiers, and had a cistern in it, to which the water of the Nile was conveyed; and the cisterns still serve to receive the rain water, and what is brought them from the Nile; for Alexandria stands in a barren, desert country, where there are neither springs nor rivers, though it was once the capital of Egypt, and had the greatest trade of any town in the world, when the spices and treasures of the East-Indies were brought hither, and from hence distributed all over Europe; which was, in a great measure, lost when the Portuguese found the way to the East-Indies, round Africa, about the year 1400; however it has still a good foreign trade. The land on which the town stands is so low, that the seamen can hardly discern it till they are very near, which was the occasion of erecting the celebrated Pharos, or high watch-tower here, so often mentioned in history. The gates of the town are still composed of Thebaic and Granite marble; but the finest piece of antiquity left, is Pompey's pillar, being one entire piece of Granite marble, seventy feet high, and twenty-five in circumference. Alexandria, and the rest of Egypt is sub. to the Grand Signior, who seems, however, to have a limited authority, being often obliged to submit the administration of the government to the humours of the petty princes of Egypt.

ALEXANDRETTA. See SCANDERBON.

ALFELD, E. lon. 9. 50. lat. 52. a town of Germany, in the bish. of Hildeshiem and cir. of Lower-Saxony, 10 m. S. of Hildeshiem.

ALGARVA, the most S. W. pr. of Portugal.

ALGER, or Algeri, E. lon. 8. 40. lat. 41. 30. a city on the N. W. coast of the island of Sardinia, 16 m. S. of Sassari, a bish. under the archb. of Sassari; sub. to the K. of Sardinia.

ALGIERS, kingdom, is sit. between 30 and 37 degrees of N. lat. and between 1 degree W. and 9 degrees of E. lon. bounded by the Mediterranean on the N. the K. of Tunis on the E. by Mount Atlas on the S. and by the river Mulvia, which separates it from the empire of Morocco, on the W. extending 600 miles from E. to W. along the coast of Barbary, for the most part mountainous. The whole country is divided into the following provinces, viz. 1. That of the Tlemsan on the W. 2. Titterie on the S. 3. Constantina on the E. of Algiers. The Turks, who have the government of this K. in their hands, do not consist of 7000 men; the Moors, or natives of Africa, have no share in it. The Arabs, who live in tents, are distinct people from either; and these the Turks suffer to be governed by their own laws and magistrates, but interpose when they see fit. The Dey of Algiers is an absolute monarch, but elective: his son never inherits by descent; the right of election is in the Turkish soldiers only; and he is frequently deposed and put to death by them, if they apprehend he does not consult the interest of his electors, or if he wants success it is fatal to him. They have murdered four of their Deys, and deposed two, within the space of twenty years. They are not at all subject to the Grand Signior, though they pay some regard to him as the head of their religion. The revenues of the government arise from the tribute paid by the Moors and Arabs; a detachment of the army being sent into each province annually to collect it; and the prizes they take at sea, sometimes equal the taxes they lay upon the natives. The Dey has several thousand Moors in his service, both horse and foot; and every one of his beys, or viceroys, in the provinces, has an army of them under his command.

ALGIERS, E. lon. 3. 20. lat. 36. 40. the cap. of the K. of Algiers, and a good port, sit. near the mouth of the river Safran, on the Mediterranean Sea, opposite to the island of Majorca; it stands on the side of a hill, rising gradually from the shore, 300 m. W. of Tunis, and upwards of 400 m. E. of Gibraltar: it is defended by a pier, or mole, 500 paces in length, extended from the continent to a small island, where they have a castle, and large batteries of guns, which have not been able, however, to protect them from bombardments by the Christian powers, whose subjects they have plundered and carried into slavery, for these people subsist chiefly by the prizes they make of Christian ships that are not at peace with them. The houses of the town are contiguous, and computed to contain one hundred thousand Mahometans, fifteen thousand Jews, and two thousand Christian slaves. The country about Algiers is adorned with gardens and fine villas, where the many fountains and rivulets are no small addition to the pleasure of the inhabitants who resort thither in the hot season.

* ALGONQUINS, an Indian nation in N. America, who inhabited about the banks of the Three Rivers; they now shelter themselves between the lakes Ontario and Huron, from the cruelties of the Iroquois.

ALHAMA, W. lon. 4. lat. 37. a small city of the pr. of Granada in Spain, surrounded with hills, and sit. 25 m. S. W. of Granada.

ALICANT, W. lon. 30 min. lat. 38. 35. a large sea-port town in the pr. of Valencia in Spain, the castle on a high rock, and almost impregnable; it is sit. 60 m. S. of Valencia, and about as many N. of Cartagena; it has a great foreign trade in wine and fruit. The castle was taken by the English in the year 1706, and held out a siege of two years almost, against the French and Spaniards; and surrendered, at last, upon honourable terms, after part of the rock, on which the castle stood, was blown up, and the governor killed.

ALOST, E. lon. 4. lat. 51. 5. a town in Austrian Flanders, sit. on the river Dender, 15 m. N. W. of Brussels, and as much S. E. of Ghent.

ALLOWAY, W. lon. 3. 45. lat. 56. 10. a port town of Mentieth in Scotland, sit. on the river Forth, 5 m. E. of Sterling; remarkable for its fine castle, the seat of the earl of Mar, and for the coal mines near it.

ALPS, the highest mountains in Europe, which separate Italy from France and Germany, there being but few passes, and those of difficult access, which are the chief security of Piedmont, the king of Sardinia's country, against France: the Swiss also possess great part of these mountains, which secure them against the attacks both of the Germans and the French. Hannibal attempting the passes of the Alps on the side of Piedmont, in the winter season, when he invaded Italy, lost most of his elephants here: and here the present king of Sardinia resisted the united forces of France and Spain near Coni, in the year 1744, and compelled them to abandon Piedmont, and retire into France.

ALSATIA, a pr. of Germany, sit. between the river Rhine on the E. and Lorrain on the W. Switzerland on the S. and the pal. of the Rhine on the N. now subject to France. See STRASBURGH the capital.

AMASIA, the N. division of the Lesser Asia, lying on the S. shore of the Euxine Sea.

AMAZONS, their country is supposed to have been situated in that part of the Lesser Asia now called Amasia, on the banks of the Euxine Sea.

AMAZON, a river, which rises in Peru, in S. America, near the Equator, and, running eastward a course of 3000 miles and upwards, within 4 degrees of the Equator, falls into the Atlantic Ocean by several channels, giving the country through which it passes the name of Amazonia, or the country of the Amazons. This river overflows annually, like others between the tropics, and is then 150 miles broad at the mouth. Orellana sailed the whole breadth of South America, from W. to E. on this river; and, arriving at the Atlantic Ocean, returned to Spain; from whose account of it, confirmed by later voyages, it appears to be the greatest river in the world, if we consider the length of its course, or the depth of its water.

AMBAMARJAM, or Ambara, E. lon. 35. lat. 13. the capital of Abyssinia, or Ethiopia Superior, is sit. on the E. side of a lake, out of which the river Nile rises.

AMBER, a river which rises in the S. W. part of Bavaria, runs to the N. E. by Landsberg and Dachau, and falls into the Isar, a little above Landshut.

AMBERG, E. lon. 12. lat. 49. 25. the capital of the upper or Bavarian pal. in Germany, sit. on the river Ilz, 30 m. N. of Ratibon; a fortified town, sub. to Bavaria.

AMBLETEUSE, E. lon. 1. 30. lat. 49. 40. a little port town of France, sit. 5 m. N. of Boulogne, in Picardy.

AMBOS, E. lon. 1. lat. 47. 25. a town of Orleans, in France, sit. on the river Loire, 10 m. E. of Tours, and 30 m. S. W. of Blois.

AMBOYNA Island, E. lon. 126. S. lat. 3. 40. sit. 300 m. S. W. of Ternate, the chief of the Molucca

A M

Islands, and 100 m. N. W. of the Banda Islands, being about 70 m. in circumference; here the Dutch have a strong castle, garrisoned by 7 or 800 men. This island being conveniently situated between the Molucca Islands, which produce cloves, and the Banda Islands, where only mace and nutmegs grow, the English and Dutch had each of them their factories here, the beginning of the 17th century, in the reign of king James I, but the Dutch forcibly expelled the English factors, in time of peace; tortured and put to death several of them, invaded and usurped the dominion of the Spice Islands, which had submitted to the English, and have kept the possession of them ever since, monopolizing the fine spices, and excluding all the rest of the world from them.

AMBRESBERRY, W. lon. 1. 40. lat. 51. 20. a market town in Wiltshire, 6 m. N. of Salisbury.

AMBY, E. lon. 5. 45. lat. 50. 56. a town of the Netherlands, in the pr. of Limburg, sit. on the E. side of the river Maes, opposite to the city of Maastricht.

AMELBURG. See OMMENBURG.

AMELIA, E. lon. 13. 20. lat. 42. 40. a city in the Pope's ter. in Italy, sit. on a mountain, 50 m. N. E. of Rome, and 25 m. S. W. of Spoleto.

AMERICA. See the INTRODUCTION.

AMERSFORT, E. lon. 5. 20. lat. 52. 25. a town of the pr. of Utrecht, in the United Netherlands, sit. on the river Ems, 25 m. S. E. of Amsterdam, and 14 m. N. E. of Utrecht.

AMERSHAM, W. lon. 40. min. lat. 51. 40. a market town in the co. of Bucks, 27 m. almost W. of London, and 12 m. S. E. of Aylesbury; sends 2 members to parliament.

AMIENS, E. lon. 2. 30. lat. 49. 50. the capital of the pr. of Picardy, in France, sit. on the river Somme, 65 m. S. of Calais, and 80 N. of Paris. It is a large beautiful town, and a bish. under the archb. of Rheims, and has some manufactures of woollen and linen, but not equal to those of Abbeville.

AMORGO, E. lon. 26. 15. lat. 37. an island of the Archipelago, 90 m. N. of Candia.

AMOUR river, the source whereof is in Siberia, in about 120 degrees of E. lon. and 54 degrees of N. lat. runs E. through Chinesian Tartary, and falls into the bay of Corea, in the Pacific Ocean, in about 150 degrees of E. lon.

AMOY, E. lon. 118. lat. 25. an island of the pr. of Fokien, on the S. W. coast of China, where the English had lately a factory, but have abandoned it, finding themselves much more imposed upon here by the Chinese, than at Canton.

AMPHIPOLIS, or Strymon, E. lon. 40. 5. lat. 41. 30. a town of European Turkey, once the capital of Macedon, sit. on the river Strymon, 70 m. N. E. of Salonichi.

AMPURIAS, E. lon. 2. 50. lat. 42. 15. the capital of the dis. of Ampouzdán in Catalonia, in Spain, sit. near the sea-coast, at the mouth of the river Fluvia, 60 m. N. E. of Barcelona.

AMSTERDAM, E. lon. 4. 30. lat. 52. 20. the capital of the pr. of Holland, and of the United Netherlands, sit. on the river Amstel, and an arm of the sea called the Wye, a little to the eastward of the Zuyder-Sea, 200 m. and upwards E. of London, 230 N. E. of Paris, and upwards of 400 m. W. of Vienna, 12 m. E. of Haerlem, and 30 N. E. of Rotterdam. The city lies almost in the form of a crescent; it is the greatest port of the known world; no where are such numbers of merchant-ships seen, and yet of the most difficult access, it being scarce possible for a loaded ship, or man of war, to enter the harbour; and, indeed, the whole Zuyder-Sea is so shallow and full of sands, that scarce any but their own flat-bottomed vessels can cross it; but then this is their great security against foreign enemies, whose men of war scarce ever venture to pursue them beyond the Texel, and other entrances into this sea. The foundations of this town are laid upon vast piles of timber drove into the morass, on which it stands, at a prodigious expence; the Stadthouse alone has upwards of 13000 piles of wood, 'tis said, to bear up the foundations. The first mention of this town in history, is about the year 1300, when it was a poor fisher town. In 1585, it appears to have been the chief town of trade in these provinces, when they began to fortify it; and great additions were made to the fortifications in the year 1672, when Lewis XIV. invaded the country. The houses are built with brick or stone, the streets spacious and well paved, and through most of them run canals planted with trees; the town is computed to be half as big as London, including the fortifications; in it are people of almost every nation and every religion in Europe, who are all tolerated in their respective persuasions, but none admitted to any share in the government but the Calvinists, or Presbyterians; all of them, however, apply themselves with the utmost diligence to heap up wealth, tormenting both body and soul (in the words of a late writer) to get an estate, not to enjoy it, but to have the pleasure of dying rich; money, the idol of the world, is adored most in this country, where it supplies the place of birth, wit, and merit.

ANAGNI, E. lon. 13. 45. lat. 42. a city of Italy, in the Campania of Rome, sit. 32 m. E. of Rome; the see of a bish. sub. to the Pope.

ANDALUSIA New, a pr. of Terra Firma, in S. America, lying on the coast of the Atlantic Ocean, opposite to the Leeward islands, having the river Oronoco on the W.

ANDAMAN islands, sit. in 92 degrees of E. lon. and between 10 and 15 degrees of N. lat. on the E. side of the entrance of the bay of Bengal. The inhabitants of these Islands are a harmless inoffensive people, living chiefly on rice, fruits, roots and herbs, with which they furnish the shipping that come that way, seldom eating any flesh; tho' some of our voyage-writers have represented them as cannibals.

ANDES mountains run almost the whole length of S. America, through the countries of Peru and Chili, parallel to, and but a little distance from, the Pacific ocean, esteemed the highest land in the world, being covered with snow in the warmest climate, and from thence called the Sierras Nevada, or the snowy mountains.

ATHENS, E. lon. 24. 15. lat.
38. the capital of Achaia anciently, and now Livadia, a pr. of Turkey, in Europe, and the city called Setines. It stands in the middle of a large plain, near the river Ilissus, about 40 m. E. of the isthmus of Corinth, being at present about 4
m. in circumference, and containing about 10000 souls, three parts whereof are Christians; and though it be no longer the seat of the Muses, the natives are observed to have a good share of wit. The present town does not lye round the castle as anciently, but on the N. W. side of it;
the temple of Minerva in the castle is still entire, having been converted into a Christian church, and since into a Turkish mosque, which late travellers assure us, is, without comparison, the finest temple now in the world: this city as well as all the rest of Greece, is now sub. to the Turks.

BAHAMA, or Lucaya islands, sit. in the Atlantic ocean, between 21 and 27 degrees of N. lat. and between 73 and 81 degrees of western lon. are very numerous, but there are about 12 of them of a considerable extent. The gulph of Florida, or Bahama, through which the Spanish galleons sail in their way to Europe, lies between these islands and the continent of Florida. America.

BAHAMA proper, which gives its name to the rest, is sit. between 78 and 81 degrees of W. lon. and between 26 and 27 degrees of N. lat. These islands were discovered by Columbus, anno 1492, in his search of America. The island of St. Salvador, one of the Bahama islands, was the first land Columbus discovered when his men despaired of finding any, and were about to throw him overboard, which occasioned his giving the island the name of St. Salvador: but see more of these islands in the description of the island of Providence, now fortified by the English, and commands the rest of the Bahama islands.

BAHAREN island, E. lon. 50. lat. 26. an island in the Persian gulph in Asia, where was one of the most considerable pearl fisheries in the world, but disused at present.

BALDIVIA, or Valdivia, W. lon. 30. S. lat. 40. a port town of the pr. of Chili, in S. America, sit. 300 m. S. of St. Jago, and 100 m. N. E. of the island of Chiloe. This town was founded by that celebrated Spanish general Baldivia, about the year 1551, after he had spent upwards of eleven years in the conquest of that valuable country of Chili, and built St. Jago, the capital, and many other towns. To this he gave his own name, and reserved the country about it to himself, there being greater plenty of gold in the neighbouring mountains than in any part of America; but he had the misfortune after all his conquests to be defeated and taken prisoner by the Chileans, who put him to death, 'tis said, by pouring melted gold down his throat, after which he seemed to have so insatiable a thirst. The Chileans afterwards recovered Baldivia, and many other towns, driving the Spaniards out of the inland country, but they remained however possessed of several places on the coast. The Dutch, and after them the English, attempted to settle at Baldivia, but were compelled to retire from thence, either by the Spaniards, or natives, or both; and the Spaniards are masters of Baldivia at this day.

BALDOC, 15 min. W. lon. lat. 51. 55. a market town in Hertfordshire, sit. 38 m. N. of London, 4 m. E. of Hitchin, and 7 m. W. of Royston.

BANDA, or Lantor, E. lon. 128. S. lat. 4. 30. This is the chief of the Banda islands, where nutmegs grow: they are all of them very small, scarce any of them 20 m. long, and have the island of Ceram on the N. the island of Celebes or Macassar on the W. and the ocean on the E. and S. and lies S. E. of Amboyna 170 miles. The mace covers the nutmeg as the husk covers a nut. These islands have been always much esteemed on account of their producing these spices. The Arabs first brought them to Egypt and the coasts of the Levant, and from thence they were distributed all over Europe. The Portuguese having found the way to Asia round the cape of Good Hope, about the year 1500, traffick'd with the natives of India, and brought these spices to Europe. The Dutch invaded these islands about the year 1609, when the natives put themselves under the protection of the English, and acknowledged the K. of England their sovereign; but the Dutch expell'd both the natives and the English, usurp'd the dominion of them, and keep possession of them to this day, excluding all other nations from these

E. of St. Vincent, being 25 m. in length, and 15 in breadth, a level country, generally with some small hills, and but little wood upon it. They produce sugar, rum, cotton, indigo, and ginger; their fruits, oranges, citrons, pine-apples, guavas, plantains, &c. The coasts might easily be made defensible; but the money designed for the fortifications is otherwise applied. The sugar-works are upon the decline at present, which, with the oppression of some of their governors, hath induced some of the richest planters to remove. A college has been built and endowed here by the late Col. Codrington, and other benefactors; but it has not yet answer'd the pious intention of the founders. The number of white inhabitants may be about 20,000, and there may be 100,000 negroes. They receive most of their corn, cattle, flesh, and salted fish from the northern colonies, and their cloaths and furniture from England. They are subject to hurricanes here in the months of July

July and August; but not so much as in the other Caribbee islands. The trade-wind at all other times blows constantly from the eastward.

BLAREGNIES, E. lon. 3. 55. lat. 50. 30. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, sit. in the pr. of Hainalt, 7 m. S. of Mons. Here the English and their Allies commanded by the D. of Marlborough and Prince Eugene of Savoy, obtained a victory over the French, commanded by the Marshals Villars and Boufflers on the 14th of September, 1709; the French were encamped in the woods of Sart and Sanfart, where they had cut down trees and thrown up a triple entrenchment for their defence, and it cost the allies several thousand men before they could drive them from their entrenchments. The armies consisted of 120,000 men of each side, whereof 20,000 at least were killed, and the French made an orderly retreat at last, though their general Marshal Villars was wounded and disabled in the beginning of the action. This battle is sometimes called the battle of Malplaquet, from another village near the place of action.

The inhabitants are of several nations, viz. English, Portuguese and Indians, amounting to about 50,000. In the year 1663, the K. of Portugal transferred the property and dominion of this island to Charles II. K. of England, as part of the portion of the Infanta Catharine, Princess of Portugal, on her marriage with him; and K. Charles made a present of it to the English East-India company, who have been in possession of it ever since. The president of the English factory at Surat, is usually governor of the island, and appears like a sovereign prince, attended by his guards, &c. This place is exceedingly well situated for a trade on the continent of India, and is indeed the principal settlement the English have in this part of the world. It was very unhealthy for many years, but governor Bohun, by draining the bogs and swamps, made it as healthy as any of the English settlements on this coast.

BORNE, W. lon. 20 min. lat. 52. 40. a market town of Lincolnshire, 30 m. S. of Lincoln.

BORNEO island, sit. between 107 and 117 degrees of eastern lon. and between 7 degrees 30 min. N. lat. and 4 degrees of S. lat. the form of the island almost round, and computed to be two thousand five hundred m. in circumference, containing consequently, a greater number of acres than any island in the known world. The Indian ocean separates it from China and India on the N. and N. W. and from the Philippine islands on the N. E. The island of Celebes or Macassar, lies on the S. E. of Borneo, Java on the S. and the island of Sumatra on the W. The sea-coast is usually overflowed for half the year, during the continuance of the rains, and when the waters retire, the coast remains covered with ouse and mud, for which reason their towns consist either of floating-houses in the mouths of their rivers, or houses built upon pillars a great height from the surface; and such a floating town there is in the mouth of the river Banjar, where the English East-India company have their factors, from whence they import chiefly pepper, though sometimes the merchants of the country bring down diamonds and other precious stones, and some gold, or our people purchase them of the Chinese, who carry on a great trade with the natives as well as foreigners, BORNEO town, E. lon. 111. 30. lat. 4. 30. lies on a bay of the sea on the N. W. part of the island. This is not a place of any great traffic, foreigners usually resorting to the S. E. part of the island, which is under the dominion of the Sultan of Caytongee, whose capital lies about 100 m. up the river Banjar, for the island is divided into several kingdoms, of which the most powerful Prince assumes a superiority over the rest, at least this is the case in that part of the island near the coast, which is inhabited by Mahometans. Those of the inland country are Pagans, and have different forms of government, but of these we have little knowledge; the people are very swarthy, but not black, and go almost naked. Our East-India company having attempted to build forts upon the coast, near Banjar, their factors were murdered or expelled, but they have since accommodated matters, and are permitted to trade thither again.

BORNHOLM, E. lon. 15. lat. 55. 15. an island in the Baltic sea, sit. 10 m. S. E. of the co. of Schonen, in Sweden, and 43 m. N. E. of the isle of Rugen.

BOSPHORUS, or, strait of Constantinople, divides Europe from Asia. It is about a m. broad between Constantinople on the European side, and Scutari on the Asian side, where the Grand Seignior has a palace, and frequently goes thither attended by the ladies of the Seraglio; and it is indeed so near the city, that it is look'd upon as a suburb of Constantinople.

BOSSINEY, W. lon. 5. lat. 50. 40. a borough town of Cornwall, sit. on the Irish channel, 15 m. N. W. of Launceston, and 210 W. of London; sends two members to parliament.

BOSSORA, or Bassora, E. lon. 47. lat. 30. a port town of Asiatic Turkey, in the pr. of Eyraea Arabic, sit. on the W. side of the river Euphrates, about 40 m. N. W. of the gulph of Persia, or Boffora. It stands 3 m. W. of the river, but has a communication with it by a navigable canal, to the end whereof large ships come up from the sea. The city is about 12 m. in circumference, and surrounded by a wall and other works, and was taken from the Arabs by the Turks about 160 years ago: however they capitulated to be governed by a prince of their own, and enjoy many other privileges; and as it is a free port is more resorted to than any town on that side of Turkey, by foreign merchants.

The English and other European nations have factories here, where they purchase silks and lacquered ware as in China.

CADIZ, W. lon. 6. 40. lat. 36. 30. a city and port town of the pr. of Andalusia, in Spain, sit. at the N. W. end of the island of Leon, or Lyon, opposite to port St. Mary's on the continent, 270 m. S. W. of Madrid, 60 m. S. W. of Seville, and 40 m. N. W. of Gibraltar. The island it stands upon is in length about 18 m. the S. W. end about 9 broad, and the N. W. end, where the town stands, is not 2 m. broad. It has a communication with the continent by a bridge, and with the opposite shore forms a bay 12 m. long and 6 broad, but about the middle of the bay are two points of land, one on the continent, and the other on the island, so near together that the forts upon them, called the Puntal and Matagorda, command the passage; and within these points is the harbour, which it is impossible for an enemy to enter, till he has taken these forts; and for this reason the English, anno 1702, landed on the continent near St. Mary's, in order to attack the Puntal, which not being able to reduce, they re-imbarked without effecting any thing; but the earl of Essex had better success in the year 1596, when he landed on the island, took the town, plundered it of a prodigious treasure, and burnt the galleons in the harbour. The city has about 5000 houses in it, and the best foreign trade of any town in Spain, for the galleons annually take in their loading here, and return hither with the treasures and rich merchandize of Peru and Mexico. Cadiz is the see of a bish.

CAIRO, GRAND, E. lon. 32. lat. 30. the capital of Egypt, in Africa, is sit. in a plain at the foot of a mountain, 2 m. E. of the bank of the river Nile, and 100 m. S. of the mouth of that river. The town is 10 m. in circumference, and may contain a million of inhabitants, and some have computed them at five millions, which must be a mistake, though 'tis certain they are very numerous, 30 or 40 people frequently lodging in one house. Their private buildings make a mean appearance on the outside, but are often very richly furnished and adorned within, and their chief mosques or temples very magnificent. The castle stands on the top of a hill on the S. side of the city, and is 3 m. round, of great antiquity, but hardly so ancient as the natives give out, who imagine it was built by the Patriarch Joseph, and shew a well near the top of it near 300 foot deep, to which they have given the name of Joseph's well, and is the only well almost in the country. There is a grand Bazar, or market-place, in the middle of the city, but the streets are generally narrow, except the Khalis, or Grand Canal, which runs through the middle of it from one end to the other, into which they let the water of the river Nile when it rises to a certain height, and from this canal the water is let into others and distributed to the adjacent fields and gardens. The Khalis remains dry one half of the year, and appears a spacious street. The plague usually visits Cairo once in 3 or 4 years, and is observed to decrease as the waters of the Nile rise. Either on the site of this city, or near it, it is supposed that ancient Egyptian Babylon stood. The English and other Europeans have have their consuls and factors here at this day, for the protection and management of the Turkey trade on that side.

CAIROAN, E. lon. 9. lat. 36. a town of the K. of Tunis, in Africa, sit. on the river Magrida, 80 m. S. of Tunis.

CALAIS, E. lon. 2. lat. 51. the capital of the Pais Reconquis, in the pr. of Picardy, in France, sit. on the coast of the English channel, 22 m. S. E. of Dover, 140 N. of Paris. Taken by Edward III. K. of England, anno 1347, and lost in the reign of Q. Mary, anno 1557. It was anciently a good harbour, but is so choaked up that it will not admit of any vessels of burthen at present. The town is well fortified, and a citadel commands both town and country, but its greatest strength is in its situation among the marshes. It may be overflowed on the approach of an enemy; there is a canal running from it to St. Omers, Graveline, Dunkirk, Bergues and Ypres. It consists but of one parish, and yet the inhabitants are computed at 4000.

CALATAJUD, W. lon. 2. 5. lat. 41. 15. a city of Arragon, in Spain, sit. on the river Xalo, 50 m. W. of Saragossa.

CALEDONIA, W. lon. 79. lat. 8. a settlement the Scots made on the W. side of the gulph or river of Darien, in S. America, anno 1698. It stood on a peninsula inaccessible almost to an enemy, and from whence they could not have been driven by the Spaniards, if the English E. India company had not made an interest in the English court to prohibit their colonies in America affording them any provisions or assistance; which orders obliged them, anno 1700, to abandon a colony that would have been of infinite service to Great-Britain in the late wars. Caledonia also was the ancient name of part of Scotland.

CALENBURG CASTLE, E. lon. 9. 40. lat. 52. 20. capital of the D. of Calenburg, in Lower Saxony, in Germany, sit. on the river Leine, 15 m. S. of Hanover, and sub. to the D. of Brunswick Lunenburg, Elector of Hanover and K. of England.

CALICUT, E. lon. 75. lat. 11. 20. a town sit. on the Malabar coast in the hither peninsula of India, in Asia, 300 m. S. of Goa, and 320 m. S. W. of Fort St. George, sub.

to its own Prince; but the English have a factory here, from whence they import pepper and other Indian merchandize. This was the first land the Portuguese discovered in India, when they found the way by the Cape of Good Hope, anno 1498.

* CALLAN, an antient borough town in the co. of Kilkenny, and pr. of Leinster, in Ireland, which returns two members to parliament, and hath a barrack for one company of foot. It is sit. 7 m. S. W. from Kilkenny, and 68 m. S. W. of Dublin.

CALLIFORNIA, is sit. between 116 and 138 degrees of W. lon. and between 23 and 46 degrees of N. lat. It lies almost in the form of a cone reversed, and is either an island or peninsula, most probably the latter, which has the Pacific Ocean on the N. W. and S. and the gulph of Callifornia, which separates it from the Mexico's on the E. unless it be joined to that continent by a narrow isthmus on the N. W. The Spanish missionaries from Mexico have lately visited most parts of Callifornia, and made many profelites to Christianity, who acknowledge the K. of Spain for their sovereign; and they relate that it is a fine fertile country, producing all the necessities and conveniences of life. Sir Francis Drake in his voyage round the world, visited the N. W. part of this country, and took possession of it in the name of Q. Elizabeth, but the English never attempting to settle any colonies there since, it may be esteemed sub. to the K. of Spain.

CANADA, or New France, in N. America, is bounded by Eskimaux, or New-Britain, and the British colonies on Hudson's bay on the N. and by the river of St. Lawrence, the Iroquois or five Indian nations, the Huron and Illinois lakes on the E. and S. and by unknown lands on the W. the chief town whereof is Quebec. [Canada, in 1753, had not more than 45,000 inhabitants; of which, 15,000 were fighting men. Quebec had 15,000 inhabitants and 500 soldiers, or more than at Trois Rivieres and Montreal, their other two settlements here. Louisiana has not one twelfth the number of men as Canada; whereas the English colonies contain between nine hundred thousand and a million of souls, among whom 90,000 men may be reckoned for defence; but a few united are an overmatch for divided numbers. The French claim this country by Verrozani's discovery in 1524, which was 27 years after that of Sebastian Cabot, sent out by K. Henry VII. of England.]

degrees of N. lat. in the Atlantic ocean, the most easterly of them about 150 m. from cape Non, on the coast of Biledulgerid, in Africa.

CANARY proper, which gives its name to the rest, is sit. in 16 degrees of W. lon. and between 27 and 28 degrees of N. lat. and is about 150 m. in circumference; the chief town Palma, from whence comes the excellent palm-sack we meet with, for the chief produce of these islands are those rich wines, which from them have obtain'd the name of Canary wines, and of these 'tis computed ten thousand hog-heads are sent annually to Britain in time of peace. They may be well called the fortunate islands also, from the pureness and temperateness of the air, which in this warm climate is constantly refreshed with cool sea breezes. They were first discovered by the Carthaginians, but lay concealed afterwards for many ages from the rest of the world, till they were again discovered, anno 1405, by the Spaniards, who remain in possession of them at this day. There were then some people on these islands, but could not tell which was their mother country, or indeed whether there were any other countries; nor did their language, manners or customs, resemble their neighbours on the continents of Africa or Europe, or any other part of the world, but they were of an olive complexion, like the people on the coast of Barbary, in Africa.

CANDAHOR, E. lon. 67. lat. 33. capital of a ter. of the same name; formerly subj. to the Mogul, but at present to Persia, sit. 450 m. N. W. of Lahor, and 500 m. S. W. of Meshed. Asia.

Africa on the S. generally reckoned to lie in Asia. There is no considerable river in the island, but many little rivulets, of which Lethe is one of the largest; and here is the celebrated mount Ida, which takes up great part of the middle of the island, and notwithstanding the fine descriptions we meet with of it in the ancient poets, it is only a huge barren rock, destitute of trees and herbage, though the valleys beneath are well replenished with all manner of excellent fruits, and the villages numerous.

CANDIA, or Mutium, E. lon. 35. lat. 35. 30. the capital of the island of Candia, is sit. on the sea coast on the N. side of the island, in a plain at the foot of the mountain; once an excellent harbour, but now choaked up so that only small vessels can approach it. It is but the skeleton of a city now, which was large and well peopled while subject to the Venetians, when it had a flourishing trade, and was celebrated for its strength and beauty, but is at present a heap of ruins, in which condition it has remained ever since it was taken by the Turks, anno 1669, after it had endured a siege of twice the duration of that of Troy, having been stormed fifty-six times, and near two hundred thousand Turks killed under its walls. It is still sub. to the Turks.

CANDISH, a pr. of the Hither India, in Asia, bounded by Chitor and Malva on the N. Orixia on the E. Decan on the S. and Guzarat on the W. sub. to the Mogul.

CANDY, E. lon. 79. lat. 8. the capital of the island of Ceylon, in India, sit. in the middle of the island, sub. to the K. of Ceylon.

CANEA, E. lon. 24. lat. 35. 36. is a sea-port town on the N. side of Candia, esteemed the second in the island, and sit. 100 m. W. of the city of Candia. It is a pretty good harbour, but the fortifications as much out of repair as they are in the other towns of Candia, and in all the Grecian islands, subject to the Turks.

CANTON, E. lon. 112. 30. lat. 23. 25. a large populous wealthy city and port town of the pr. of Quantum or Canton in China, in Asia, sit. on the river Ta, 50 m. from the Indian ocean, upwards of a thousand m. S. of the capital city of Pekin. Canton is a very secure and commodious harbour, and the only port at present to which the European merchants resort, and from whence they import raw and wrought silks, China ware, tea, cabinets, and other lacquered ware, gold dust, copper, rhubarb, &c. This city is walled and fortified, and is said to exceed all the cities of Asia, in temples, courts, and palaces, and must be immensely rich, all the trade of this large empire with the European nations, centring here. Notwithstanding their trade with the Christians is so considerable, they will not suffer a Christian to come within the walls of the town; they are admitted no farther than the suburbs.

The island is 4 m. long and one broad, the W. end of it a vast high rock, inaccessible by sea, on which is the town of Caprea. The rock is covered with a fruitful soil, producing corn, and all manner of delicious fruits. This island the Emperor Augustus chose for his retirement, and it was the residence of Tiberius several years, where he is said to have had palaces and pleasure houses suitable to every season of the year, with a great variety of gardens and groves, but the works under ground were the most extraordinary, diary, the rocks were all undermined, and there were grottos, galleries, high-ways, bagnios, and subterraneous retirements suitable to his taste, which, with the magnificent buildings on the surface, made it appear like one continued city at a distance, of which there still remains great ruins. These works having been demolished by the Romans after the death of Tiberius, in detestation, 'tis said, of the unnatural scenes that had been acted there. The city of Caprea is the see of a bish. at present.

E. of Porto-Bello; one of the largest and best fortified towns of S. America, with a very secure and capacious harbour, the entrance whereof is so very narrow, that not more than one ship can enter it at a time, and well defended by castles and platforms of guns. It was however taken by the English admiral Sir Francis Drake, anno 1585, and by Pointi the French admiral, anno 1697. But great additions having been made to the fortifications, and a numerous garrison of veteran troops in the place, the English were obliged to retire from before it, anno 1741, after they had made themselves masters of most of the forts and harbours, for which several reasons were assigned, besides the strength of the place, as the mortality among the troops, the want of skill in the commanders, and the differences between the admiral and general.

CELEBES, or Macasser island, is sit. between 116 and 124 degrees of E. lon. and between 2 degrees N. and 6 degrees S. lat. being 500 m. long, and generally 200 broad. The air of this island is hot and moist, and lying under or very near the equator, subject to great rains above 6 months in the year. It has the Philippine islands on the N. the Molucca and Banda islands on the E. and the island of Borneo on the W. The natives are most remarkable for their skill in poisonous drugs and herbs, which abound in this island, as well as opium. They poison their darts which they blow through hollow trunks, and the least wound they make is mortal.

The Dutch joining with the natives against the Portuguese, first expelled them and then usurped the dominion of the island, where they have such strong fortresses and numerous garrisons, that they treat the natives, both princes and people, as their slaves; though it was a great while before they could effect this, the inhabitants being generally a brave hardy people, and are hired by most of the Indian nations and Europeans who have settlements in that part of the world, to serve in their troops. The chief reason the Portuguese and the Dutch after them had for subduing this island was, that it lay near the Molucca and Banda islands, where the cloves and nutmegs grow; and they could never secure the possession of those fine spices, unless they were masters of this island; and still if any other nation nation should join the natives and expel the Dutch from hence, it would be no difficult matter to come in for a share of those spices, which they robbed the English of in time of full peace.

It is usually divided into 16 provinces, which will be described in their alphabetical order as they occur. In these provinces it is computed there are 155 capital cities, 1312 of the second rank, 2357 fortified towns, and upwards of ten millions of families, which may amount to fifty millions of people, and some have computed them at fifty-eight millions. There are several very large rivers, and where these are wanting, the whole country is cut through with navigable canals, and a brisk trade driven on them from one end of the K. to the other. There is a long wall of stone 1500 m. in length, which the Chinese built to defend themselves against the incursions of the Tartars, but the Tartars notwithstanding made a conquest of their country about 100 years since, and they are now governed by Tartar princes, who permit them however to retain their own laws, obliging them only to cut off their hair, and as to religion they were all Pagans, and so no great change made in it. The Popish missionaries had once made a considerable number of profelytes amongst them, but have lately been expelled the K.

It is still in the Connaught circuit; and hath its present name from Richard and Thomas de Clare, sons of the earl of Gloucester, to whom K. Edward I. granted this county. It is remarkable for breeding more horses than any other co. in Ireland. It is towards the N. part rocky and coarse, particularly in the barony of Burrin, where Oliver Cromwell's soldiers said, there was neither water to drown a man, wood to hang him, or earth to bury him. Thomond gave title of earl to the elder branch of the noble family of O'Brien, descended from Brian Boree monarch of Ireland. It contains 428,187 Irish plantation acres, 3800 houses, 76 parishes, 9 baronies, and 1 borough, and returns four members to parliament.

COCHIN-CHINA, sit. between 104 and 109 degrees of E. lon. and between 10 and 17 degrees of N. lat. bounded by the K. of Tonquin on the N. by the Indian ocean on the E. and S. and by the K. of Cambodia on the W. being upwards of 400 m. in length, and 150 broad; the chief produce of this country is silk and rice. The countries within the tropics will scarce produce any other grain, and the periodical rains supply them with water for their rice fields, and among their animals they have great numbers of elephants, which are the greatest strength of their armies. The king is an absolute prince, and the sentences of the magistrates arbitrary, being restrained by no written laws. Their religion is downright Paganism, and they are as superstitious as any people, great observers of times and seasons, and of lucky and unlucky days, and omens. Wives are purchased here as in China, they are not stinted to any number, and men of the best quality will offer their daughters to merchant-strangers for their mistresses. Asia.

COLOGNE, E. lon. 6. 40. lat. 50. 50. the capital of the archb. of Cologne, and of the circle of the lower Rhine, in Germany, sit. on the river Rhine, 45 m. E. of Maestricht, 62 N. of Triers, and 400 m. N. W. of Vienna. It is one of the largest and most elegant cities of Germany, and has a great trade, especially in wines; but the strength of its fortifications are not much to be depended on; K. Charles II. being pleased with the situation of the town, spent the two last years of his exile here.

The government of the city is lodged in the magistrates and burghers, consisting of six burgo-masters, seven aldermen, and 150 common-council-men, who continue for life, and two of the burgo-masters are regents annually by turns, but then the aldermen are appointed by the elector, without whose concurrence no law can be made, and the elector appoints the judges in criminal cases; he also claims the command of the militia, and the defence of the city, so that it appears to be a mixed government. The inhabitants are for the most part Roman catholics, but many of the principal merchants and tradesmen are Protestants, of whom the Lutherans have a church allow'd them in the city; but the Calvinists are obliged to go as far as Mulheim, two miles on the other side of the Rhine, to their publick worship. The elector has two palaces in the city, but usually resides at Bonn, 10 m. S. of Cologne.

The elector is much the most powerful of all the spiritual electors, for the present Prince is not only archb. of Cologne, but bish. of Munster, Osnabrug, Paderborn and Hildesheim, in most of which he is absolute, except in some imperial cities or sovereign states, which are govern'd by their respective tive magistrates, and are indeed for many republics within his dominions. The revenues of Cologne are computed to amount to 130,000 l. per annum; and the revenues of the rest of his territories to as much more at least. His family will be taken notice of hereafter among the rest of the German princes.

It. on the western shore of the Bosphorus, or Strait of Constantinople, in the pr. of Romania. The city is built in the form of a triangle, and the ground rising gradually from the shore, the whole town appears at one view from the sea. The serraglio, or palace, is built upon a point of the triangle, which runs out between the Propontis and the harbour, and underneath the palace are the gardens, which extend to the water side. It is surrounded by a wall of no great strength, about 12 m. in circumference, exclusive of Galata, and the other suburbs. The streets are narrow, and the private houses mean, built chiefly of wood, so that when a fire happens, thousands of them are sometimes destroyed; but the public buildings, palaces, mosques or temples, bagnios, and caravanseras for the entertainment of strangers, are many of them very magnificent. The chief mosque particularly, which was formerly the metropolitan church of St. Sophia, is said to be the finest temple in the world, covered with five extensive domes or cupolas.

There is a public market daily held at Constantinople for slaves of both sexes, where men purchase wives, concubines, and servants at pleasure, who have been either taken prisoners in Christian countries, or purchased by brokers of their friends. These brokers are generally Jews, who make a trade of purchasing children in Georgia, Circassia, and other Christian or Pagan countries, and selling them to the Turks, for no Mahometan is made a slave, and indeed they offer freedom to their Christian captives of the male sex, if they will apostatize, but as for the women, they will never part with them, or make them an offer of their liberty. It is not material, they think, what religion women are of, and oftner take Infidels, as they call them, into their embraces, than native Turks.

a port town of Turkey, in the pr. of Macedonia, sit. at the bottom of a bay in the European Archipelago, 200 m. W. of Constantinople, and 60 m. E. of Salonichi.

COPENHAGEN, E. lon. 13. lat. 55. 30. the capital of the K. of Denmark, sit. on the eastern shore of the island of Zealand, upon a fine bay of the Baltic sea, near the strait called the Sound, having a commodious harbour, not being distant above 16 m. from the coast of Schonen, in Sweden. The town is about 5 m. in circumference, and naturally strong, standing in a marshy ground, and fortified after the modern way. The harbour surrounded by forts and platforms, and the entrance so narrow, that but one ship can pass in at a time, but it appears that their fortifications cannot protect them against a bombardment at sea, nor are they secure on that side always against the attacks of a land army, for it seems the Baltic has been so hard frozen some years, that the Swedes have drawn their artillery over the ice, and laid siege to Copenhagen in the winter; and, as the town lies in a morass, it is more easily approached on the land side in winter, than summer.

summer. The buildings of this city make no great figure, but here is a univ. and an academy established for martial exercises and engineering, and others for the modern languages and mathematics. It was the see of an archb. but the Danes, like other Lutheran Sovereigns, have reduced their bishops and archbishops to superintendants, and stripped them of their lands and revenues, as well as their power. Copenhagen stands about 300 m. S. W. of Stockholm, 450 N. W. of Vienna, and 500 N. E. of London.

CORINTH, E. lon. 23. lat. 37. 30. a city of European Turkey, called by them Gereme, sit. near the Isthmus, between the gulphs of Engia and Lepanto, having Achaia on the N. and the Morea on the S. 50 m. W. of Athens, 80 m. E. of Patras, and 60 m. N. of Lacedemon, or Mistra. The buildings are not now contiguous, but intermixed with fields and gardens, which makes it look like a village. The castle is sit. on a high steep rock above it, of very difficult access. The country about it abounds with corn, wine and oil. From the castle there is one of the finest prospects in the world, having the sea in full view on the E. and W. and a fine country N. and S. The narrowest part of the Isthmus is about six miles over, and on a mount there, called Oneius, were anciently celebrated the Isthmian games; there are still the ruins of a town upon it, and of temples dedicated to the Sun, Neptune, Diana, Pluto, Ceres and Bacchus, and some remains of the wall built by the Lacedemonians, cross the Isthmus from sea to sea, to secure the Peloponnesian peninsula from the incursions of the Athenians, which the Venetians repaired when they were in possession of the Morea. The inhabitants of Corinth are most of them Christians, and it is the see of a Grecian archb. but sub. to the Turks, as all Greece and the Morea are at this day. The Venetians lost the Morea without fighting one battle for it, in the year 1715.

CORITA, W. lon. 5. 20. lat. 31. 5. a town of Spain, in the pr. of Leon, 23 m. E. of Salamanca.

* CORK, a co. in the pr. of Munster, in Ireland, has Limerick on the N. the sea on the S. Kerry on the W. and Waterford on the E. It was formerly a kingdom; and is the largest co. in Ireland, having more good and bad land in it than any other in that country. It abounds with the finest harbours in the world, well situated for foreign trade, and with many fine rivers, as the Blackwater, the Lee, the river Bandon, the Ilan, &c. and being inhabited by an industrious people, is both rich and populous; though tillage is too much neglected therein, the lands being mostly under pasture, the case of many other counties in Ireland. It contains 991,010 Irish plantation acres, 43,481 houses, 232 parishes, 19 baronies, and 12 boroughs, returns twenty-six members to parliament, and gives the title of earl to the eldest branch of the noble family of Boyle.

It is a port town, and equals any town in Ireland, except Dublin, in its trade, and is the see of a bish. [This city is governed by a mayor, recorder, and sheriffs: Its harbour is one of the finest in Europe; and hath the largest export in Ireland, particularly of beef, hides, tallow, butter, fish, and other provisions. It is partly situated on several islands formed by the river Lee, which are banked and quayed in, somewhat like the towns in Holland; and partly on rising grounds on the N. and S. sides of the river. The earl of Marlborough besieged and took it from K. James's army, in 1691, when the D. of Grafton, who served as a volunteer, was slain in an attack. It contains 8000 houses, and upwards of 70,000 inhabitants, is well built, and being the second city in the kingdom, is justly esteemed the Bristol of Ireland. It sends two members to parliament, and hath twelve companies of foot quartered in the barracks.]

E. and the Black-sea surrounding the rest, except a narrow isthmus which joins it to Little Tartary, the chief towns whereof are Baccaferai and Kaffa; the town of Crim, from whence it received its name, being reduced to a village. The Tartars which inhabit this Peninsula are sub. to the Turks, who were not able to defend them from the invasions and ravages of the Russians, in the years 1738 and 1739, though the Russians quitted the country again, as not tenable, being too far from their frontiers. The Cham or Han of Crim-Tartary, is obliged to furnish the Turks with a body of 30,000 men, when they take the field; they subsist on their plunder, having no other pay; every man takes two or three horses with him on their incursions, to carry off their slaves and booty, and whenever they lose a horse, they immediately feast upon him, inviting their comrades to the entertainment. When they are not at war, their chief traffic is in buying up children in Circassia, and other countries, and selling them to the Turks, who give them rice, coffee, raisins, dates, and cloathing, in return. The country is naturally fruitful, and produces excellent wine, where there are Christian or Jewish inhabitants; but this being a liquor prohibited the Mahometans, they do not cultivate the vine, or indeed any other produce of the earth any further than necessity compels them.

* CROAGH-PATRICK, an high mountain in the co. of Mayo, in the pr. of Connaught, in Ireland, from whence (as fabulous tradition says) St. Patrick drove all venomous creatures, such as serpents, &c. into the sea.

CROATIA, a frontier pr. of Germany, bounded by Sclavonia on the N. and E. by Bosnia on the S. and by Carniola on the W. sub. to the house of Austria.

CROCCEUS, or HOAMBO, a river of China, in Asia, rises in the mountains on the W. of the pr. of Suchuen, and runs along the frontiers of Tartary beyond the great wall, which it re-enters, and then runs S. between the provinces of Xansi and Xensi, and passing on E. through the provinces of Honan, Xantum and Nankin, after a course of near 2000 m. falls into the bay of Nankin, carrying with it a yellow low fort of slime or mud, from whence it is sometimes called the yellow river. And neither the waters of this, or any other of the Chinese rivers, are fit to drink till they are boiled, which is supposed to be one reason of boiling and infusing tea in them.

CROKEHORN, W. lon. 3. lat. 50. 50. a market town of Somersetshire, situate 23 miles S. W. of Wells.

CROMARTIE, W. lon. 3. 40. lat. 57. 40. capital of the shire of Cromartie, in Scotland, sit. on the German sea, at the mouth of the Frith of Cromartie, 12 m. N. E. of Inverness.

 CROWN-POINT, or FREDERICK FORT, W. lon. 72. 45. lat. 44. a fortification in N. America, built by the French, anno 1731, 120 m. S. of the river St. Lawrence, on the lake Champlain, where a bay and small river form a point on which it stands. It is fortified with 21 pieces of cannon; and from hence they supply their parties sent upon the English frontiers with necessaries. It stands 33 leagues N. of Albany in N. York. Near it general Johnson beat a party of French in 1755, and took their general prisoner. It is said that the proper name of this place is Scalp point, from an Indian battle which happened there, when many scalps were carried off.

CROYDON, W. lon. 5 min. lat. 51. 22. a market town in Surry, sit. 10 m. S. of London.

CRUZ, or CROIX ST. W. lon. 64. lat. 17. 30. one of the Caribbee islands in America, sit. in the Atlantic ocean, 60 miles S. E. of Porto Rico, sub. to France.

CUBA, an island of N. America, sit. in the Atlantic ocean, between 74 and 87 degrees of W. lon. and between 20 and 23 degrees of N. lat. being 800 m. and upwards in length from E. to W. and generally about 70 m. broad. A ridge of hills pretty well covered with wood, run through the middle of the island from E. to W. but the lands near the coast are generally a plain champaign country. There are a great many rivalets running from the hills N. and S. but they have a very

a very short course. There are also abundance of commodious harbours about the island, one particularly on the S. E. part of it, where the English admiral and general landed several thousand men, in July 1741, and encamped there, in a fine plentiful country; but the rainy season coming on, they lay there till most of them rotted, and then returned to Jamaica without attempting any thing. St. Jago in the S. E. part of the island, is esteemed the capital; but the Havannah on the N. W. is much more considerable, on account of its trade, and the rendezvous of the galleons annually on their return to Spain. It is not a very fruitful island, at least it produces little, through the sloth of the inhabitants; and were it not for its commodious situation and fine harbours, would have been abandoned probably by the Spaniards, as Hispaniola in a manner was, after they had destroyed the numerous Indian inhabitants. Cuba lies about 120 m. S. of Florida, 50 W. of Hispaniola, and 75 N. of Jamaica.

CUBA, or ALCUBA, W. lon. 8. 40. lat. 38. a town of Portugal, in the pr. of Entretajo and Guadiana, 30 m. S. of Evora.

CUBAGUA, W. lon. 64. lat. 10. 15. an island in America, sit. between the island of Margareta and Terra Firma, sub. to Spain.

CUCKFIELD, W. lon. 12 min. lat. 51. 5. a market town in Suffex, sit. 11 m. N. W. of Lewes.

CUENCA, W. lon. 2. 40. lat. 40. 12. a city of New Castile, in Spain, sit. 85 m. E. of Madrid. The see of a bish.

CULIACAN, W. lon. 113. lat. 24. capital of the pr. of Culiacan, in Mexico, in N. America, sit. near the Pacific ocean, opposite to the S. end of California, sub. to Spain.

CULLEMBACH, or CULLEMBERG, Marquisate, the N. E. division of the cir. of Franconia, in Germany.

CURASSOW, or CURACAO, W. lon. 68. 30. lat. 12. 30. an island of the Lesser Antilles, sit. in the Atlantic Ocean, opposite to Coro, or Venezuelo on the Terra Firma, in S. America, subject to the Dutch, from whence they carry on a clandestine smuggling trade with the Spanish settlements on the Terra Firma; a practice they complained of much in the Jamaica men, and used great endeavours to put a stop to it, which they had no sooner effected, than they fell into the same traffic themselves, and take care usually to send ships of such force, that they are out of danger of their Guarda Costas.

CURDISTAN, the ancient Assyria, lies part of it in Asiatic Turkey, and part of it in Persia, having Turcomania, or Armenia, on the N. and Byraca Arabic, or Chaldaea, on the S. in which pr. Nineveh anciently stood, on the eastern bank of the river Tygris, opposite to Mousul.

* CURLIEUS, a range of lofty mountains in Ireland, which divide the co. of Sligo and Roscommon, in the pr. of Connaught.

Cusco, W. lon. 70. S. lat. 13. the capital city of Peru, in S. America, during the reigns of the Incas or Indian emperors. It stands on a little hill in the midst of a spacious plain, surrounded by mountains, from whence fall four streams, which water the adjacent country, one of them running thro' the city, and supplying several canals in the chief streets. The principal buildings in it, when the Spaniards conquered the country, were the temple of the sun, and the emperor's palace. The temple of the sun was the richest on the face of the earth, both the ceiling and the walls being covered or lined with massy gold plate on the inside; at the E. end was the image of the sun, which covered the wall from top to bottom, consisting of one gold plate, which was twice as thick as the plates that covered the other walls. This image, falling to the share of a Spanish officer, 'tis said he played it away in one night; and tho' the Peruvians worshipped no other deity in this temple but the sun, yet were there images of all animals, birds, beasts, and fishes, of wrought gold, as big as the life, dedicated to the sun; and having more than were sufficient to adorn the temple, they were piled up in rooms adjoining to it in heaps, when the Spaniards arrived there. This city the Spaniards would probably have made the seat of their government, if it had not stood so far from the sea, for nothing could be more commodiously situated, as this was upon an eminence, in a pleasant fruitful country, abounding in springs and rivulets, most desirable things in a hot climate, where it never rains. Cusco is still a fine city, and the see of a bishop, and stands about 350 m. E. of Lima.

CUSTRIN, E. lon. 15. lat. 52. 40. a city of Brandenburg, in Germany, sit. on the river Oder, 45 m. E. of Berlin.

CUYO, a division of Chili, in S. America.

CYCLADES, a name given to certain islands that lie about the isle of Delos, in the Archipelago, sit. between Europe and Asia, and at length extended to all the little islands in those seas, who sent presents and contributed to the revenues of the temple in Delos, dedicated to Apollo and Diana, and said to be the place of their nativity.

CYDNIUS RIVER, in Cilicia, in the Lesser Asia; the waters whereof were so cold, that Alexander was near losing his life by bathing in them.

CYPRUS, an island sit. in the most easterly part of the Levant, or Mediterranean sea, between 33 and 36 degrees of eastern lon. and between 34 and 36 degrees of N. lat. 60 m. S. of the coast of Caramania, or Cilicia, and 30 W. of the coast of Syria, being about 150 m. long, and 70 broad; the chief town Nicosia, the seat of the Turkish Beglerbeg, or Viceroy, and formerly the residence of the K. of the island. Here is one of those mountains called Olympus, there is another of the same name in the Lesser Asia, and a third in Greece, but there are no springs or rivers but what the rains produce, which happening to fail them 30 years successively, during the reign of Constantine the Great, the inhabitants were obliged to abandon the island for some time; the soil however produces corn, wine, oil, wool, cotton, salt, and some silk; they have plenty also of flesh, fish, and fowl, and a pretty brisk trade, between the merchants of Europe and Asia; several European nations, particularly, the English, have their consuls and factors in this island. It was very populous while it was in the possession of the Christians, and had a great many good towns in it, but it is now so thinly inhabited, that half the lands lie uncultivated. The present inhabitants are Turks, Jews, Greeks, Armenians, and some few Latins. The Turks have the government, but the Greeks are most numerous. This island was dedicated to Venus; and her votaries, it is said, prostituted themselves to foreigners. It has been successively governed by the Egyptians, Phœnicians, Persians, Greeks, Romans, Saracens, Venetians, and Turks. Richard I. King of England, meeting with an un hospitable reception here, subdued the island, and transferred his right to it to Guy Lusignan, titular K. of Jerusalem, whose descendants transferred it to the state of Venice; from whom the Turks took it, anno 1570, and have remained in possession of it ever since.

CYRENE, the ter. of Barca, lying on the coast of Barbary, between Tripoly and Egypt, anciently so called.

DAGHESTAN, a country of Asia, bounded by Circassia on the N. by the Caspian sea on the E. by Chirvein, a pr. of Persia, on the S. by Georgia on the W. of which the chief towns are Tarku and Derbent, but the generality of the natives live in tents, wandering from place to place; and though they are but a small state, the country being mountainous and of difficult access, none of the neighbouring powers have been able to subdue them. When they find themselves hard press'd at any time by one power, they put themselves under the protection of another, as lately, when they were attacked on the side of Persia by Kouli Kan, they called in the Russians, and so well defended themselves, with a little assistance given them underhand, that Kouli Kan was obliged to retire, having lost great part of his army in their mountains. The towns of Tarku and Derbent, on the Caspian sea, are usually in the possession of the Russians.

DAHOME, a K. of Africa, which lies N. of Widah, or Fida, on the Guiney coast; the K. whereof lately made a conquest of Widah, and very much disturbed the Negroe trade of the Europeans.

DALEBURG, E. lon. 13. lat. 59. capital of the pr. of Dalia, in Sweden; sit. on the W. side of the Wener-Lake, 50 m. N. E. of Gottenburg.

DALECARLIA, a pr. of Sweden, bounded by Norway on the N. and DAM, E. lon. 7. lat. 53. 25. a town of the pr. of Groningen, in the United Provinces, sit. near the Dollart Bay, 12 m. N. E. of Groningen.

DAM, E. lon. 15. lat. 53. 30. sit. on the river Oder, in Pomerania, opposite to Stetin, sub. to the K. of Prussia.

DAMAN, a port town of the Hither India, in Asia, in the pr. of Guzurat, or Cambray, sit. on the W. coast of India, 80 m. S. of Surat, in 72 degrees 20 m. E. lon. and 20 degrees of N. lat. subject to the Portugueze.

DAMASCUS, or SCHAM, E. lon. 37. 20. lat. 33. 15. the capital city of

of the S. part of Syria, sit. 90 m. N. E. of Jerusalem, and 200 m. S. of Aleppo, in a pleasant fruitful plain, so extensive, that the mountains which encompass it are but just discernible, and exceedingly well watered by rivulets. The town is about 2 miles long, and encompassed with gardens for near 30 m. and there is scarce a garden which has not a fine quick stream running through it, with fountains, cascades, and other water-works. The natives will have this to be the seat of Paradise, and have a tradition, that Adam was formed of the dust of the neighbouring fields.

DAMBEA, E. lon. 34. lat. 15. the capital of Abyssinia, or Ethiopia, in Africa, sit. at the head of a lake, to which it gives name, 300 m. W. of the Red-sea.

DANTZICK, E. lon. 19. lat. 54. the capital of Regal Prussia, in the K. of Poland, sit. on the western shore of the river Wesel, or Vistula, which a little below falls into the Baltic-sea. It is an excellent harbour, and has the best foreign trade of any port within the Baltic. It stands 140 m. N. of Warlaw, and 70 m. S. W. of Koningsburgh. The town is large, and encompassed with a wall and fortifications, of a great extent. The houses are well built of stone, or brick, six or seven stories high, and the granaries, containing vast magazines of corn, and naval stores, are still higher, to which the shipping lie close and take in their lading; for the Dutch annually import from hence a great many thousand tuns of corn, timber, and naval stores, and other nations some, but the Dutch have the greatest share of this trade, paying for their merchandize with pickled herrings, the spices of India, sugars, brandy, and other produce of the more southern countries, whereas the English and other nations, are forced to purchase these things chiefly with treasure. The inhabitants are computed to amount to 200,000 souls, who are subject to a mixed kind of government. Their magistracy consists of thirty senators, who continue for life, four of them burgo-masters: besides these are 13 consuls, who elect the said burgo-masters out of their own body, and elect the judges and all other officers of the city, from whom there lies an appeal to the 13 consuls and 4 burgo-masters, and from them to the republic of Poland. The king annually nominates a burgo-master out of the consuls, to represent his person in the senate, and all sentences of death must be signed by him in the king's name. One hundred burgesses are elected to represent the people's grievances, and defend their privileges, and inspect the administration of the government; and the hundred, with the concurrence of the senate, present the clergy to vacant benefices. The established religion is the Lutheran, but Papists, Calvinists, and Anabaptists, are tolerated. The jurisdiction of the town extends 40 m. round the city, and they

D A

They maintain a garrison at their own expence, and coin money, with the effigies of the K. on one side, and the city arms on the reverse. They are said to be under the protection of Poland, but if they had not been protected by other powers against their enemies, their state had been subverted long since. In the year 1703, the English, the Dutch, and the K. of Prussia, entered into an alliance for their protection against the Swedes, who would have extorted a sum of money from them, as they did again in the year 1706, when the K. of Sweden threatened them with a visit, on his success against K. Augustus, if they refused to acknowledge Stanislaus for their K. But in the year 1734, when they took the part of Stanislaus against the present K. of Poland, and actually harboured and protected him in their city, having been purchased with French money, they were besieged by the Muscovites and Saxons, obliged to surrender, and forced to purchase their peace with several hundred thousand pounds, for suffering Stanislaus to make his escape out of the city during the siege.

DANUBE, one of the finest rivers in Europe, rises in the Black-forest, in the pr. of Suabia, in the S. W. of Germany, and running N. E. through Suabia, visits Ulm, the capital; then running E. through Bavaria and Austria, passes by Ratisbon, Passau, Ens, and Vienna; then entering Hungary, it runs S. E. from Presburg to Buda, and so on to Belgrade; after which it divides Bulgaria from Walachia and Moldavia, then discharges itself by several channels into the Black-sea, through the pr. of Bessarabia. It is so deep between Buda and Belgrade, that the Turks and Christians have fleets of men of war upon it, which frequently engaged during the late wars, and yet the cataracts below render it unnavigable to the Black-sea; and there are also several cataracts above Buda.

DARBY, W. lon. 1. 25. lat. 53. the capital of Darbyshire, sit. on the river Darwent, 100 m. N. of London; gives the title of Earl to the noble family of Stanley, and sends two members to parliament.

DARDA, E. lon. 20. lat. 46. 5. a town of Hungary, sit. on the W. side of the Danube, at the end of the bridge of Esseck, 80 m. N. W. of Belgrade.

DARDANELLS, E. lon. 27. lat. 40. 5. two castles at the entrance of the Hellespont, where all ships going to Constantinople are examined. Here formerly stood the castle of Sestos on the European side, and Abydos on the Asian side, the strait being about 2 m. over.

DARIEN, or Terra-firma proper, is a pr. of Terra-firma, in S. America, being a narrow isthmus, which joins the N. to S. America, and bounded by the N. sea on the N. by the gulph or river of Darien, which divides it from the pr. of Carthage-na, on the E. by the pr. of Popayan and the S. sea on the S. and by another part of the S. sea, and the pr. of Veragua on the W. lying between 78 and 83 degrees of W. lon. and between 8 and 10 degrees of N. lat. It lies in the form of a bow or crescent, about the great bay of Panama in the S. sea, and is 300 m. in length, and 60 in breadth, from sea to sea. This pr. if it be not the richest, is of the most importance to the Spaniards, and has been the scene of more action than any pr. in America, being situated both on the N. and S. seas; the gold sands found in some of the rivers, but above all, the wealth of Peru being brought hither, and from hence imported into Europe, has induced many enterprizing people to attempt Panama, Porto-bello, and other towns of this pr. in order to come in for a share of these treasures with the Spaniards, or dispossess them of the country. But it is very far from being a desirable place to inhabit, for it is generally mountainous and barren, excessive hot, and the low grounds overflowed with almost perpetual rains. The mountains so vastly high and difficult of access, that it takes up a great many days to pass them, though the isthmus be not more than 60 m. over. It was from these mountains the Spaniards first discovered the S. sea, or Pacific Ocean, anno 1513, and gave it the name of the S. sea, because they crossed the isthmus from the N. sea, though in reality the Pacific Ocean lies W. of the continent of America.

D E

8 and 13 degrees of E. lon. and between 54 and 58 degrees of N. lat. bounded by the sea called the Cate-gate, or Schaggerrach, which separates it from Norway, on the N. by the same sea, and the strait called the Sound, which separates it from Sweden, on the E. by the Baltic sea and part of Germany on the S. and by the German Ocean on the W. The country is generally a flat barren land, and thick foggy air, occasioned by the seas, which almost surround it, and their numerous lakes. The Peninsula of Jutland, was anciently called the Cimbric Chersonese, or the Peninsula of the Cimbria. What is now properly called Denmark, consists of Jutland, the islands of Zeland and Funen, and the little islands about them. As to the K. of Norway, the D. of Holstein, Oldenburgh, and Delmonhurst, these are indeed part of the K. of Denmark's dominions, but different countries.

The constitution of this K. has been frequently altered, sometimes their Kings have been hereditary, at others elective, sometime limited and restrained by the states, consisting of the nobility, clergy, gentry, and peasants; and at others absolute, as they have been ever since the year 1660; when the peasants, finding themselves grievously oppressed by the nobility and gentry, agreed to make the crown absolute and hereditary, in which they were joined by the clergy. And the K. having assembled the nobility and gentry in a garrisoned town, in a manner compelled them to resign their liberties into his hands.

The forces the K. of Denmark has usually on foot in Denmark, Norway and Holstein, amount to near 40,000; but most of them are maintained by other princes, to whom he lets them out, and receives a subsidy, almost equal to the pay of the troops besides, so that they rather add to the revenues of the crown than diminish it, though they are very burthensome frequently to the farmers of the country, on whom they are quartered while they remain at home.

The revenues of this Prince are computed to amount to about 500,000 l. per annum, arising from the crown lands, customs and other duties on beer, malt, corn, paper, a land tax, poll tax, &c. In Norway, the revenue arises from the tenth of the timber, tar, fish, oil, mines, and an excise, with the rest of the taxes enumerated in Denmark, and levied with much greater oppression, as they are a distant, and a kind of rival kingdom.

The produce of Denmark and Norway, consists chiefly in timber, pitch, tar, fish, oil, and lean cattle. They have very little corn, except rye; and the produce of the mines of Norway is not comparable to that of Sweden.

Their religion is Lutheran, no other tolerated; and the clergy depend on the state for their subsistence; the church lands having been seized by the government at the reformation.

DRUMLANERK, W. lon. 3. 33. lat. 55. 13. a town of Scotland, in the co. of Nithsdale, sit. on the river Nith, 15 m. N. of Dumfries.

DRUSENHEIM, E. lon. 8. lat. 48. 40. a town of Germany, in the pr. of Alsace, sit. on the W. side of the river Rhine, 4 m. S. E. of Hagenau, and 2 S. W. of Fort Louis.

* DUBLIN, a co. in the pr. of Leinster, in Ireland, has Meath on the W. and N. Kildare on the W. Wicklow on the S. and the sea on the E. It is a small, but a pleasant, fruitful, and well-improved country, especially towards the N. where it is flat and fertile, but towards the S. it is encumbered with mountains. It contains 123,784 Irish plantation acres, 19,907 houses, 24 parishes, 5 baronies, and 5 boroughs, and sends 15 members to parliament.

DUBLIN, W. lon. 6. 25. lat.

53. 20. the capital of the pr. of Leinster, and of the K. of Ireland, sit. at the mouth of the river Liffey, near the Irish channel, 60 m. W. of Holyhead, in Wales, and 270 m. N. W. of London. It is a beautiful city, pleasantly situated, in view of the sea on one side, and a fine country on the other; the seat of the government and the chief courts of justice. It would have been a commodious and secure harbour, but the mouth of it is so choaked up, that vessels of burthen cannot come up to the town. It is the see of an archb. and has a noble college, which makes a univ. of itself, having 600 students in it of all sorts, [the greater part of which has been most magnificently re-edified of late by means of large parliamentary donations. The town lies on both sides of the river, though formerly the S. side contained the city of Dublin, properly so called, which was first built by the Danes, as was also the N. side, which from them had the name of Ostman-town, corrupted into Oxman-town. It hath received several ample charters and privileges from the Kings of England, since the time of K. Henry II. who introduced the English laws into Ireland, and who held a court and parliament in this city. K. Richard II. erected it into a marquisate, in favour of Robert de Vere, E. of Oxford, whom he also created D. of Ireland, with many royal privileges, such as the coinage of money, &c. The civil government is now by a lord-mayor, two sheriffs, aldermen, &c. it sends two members to parliament, as doth the univ. The form of Dublin is almost a square, a figure which contains the largest area in proportion to the circumference. From the royal hospital at Kilmainham to the E. end of Lazer's-hill, it is two miles and a half long; and its greatest breadth is nearly as much; so that the circumference may be about ten English miles, but, on account of several out-lets, it is impossible to be exact. It contains 12,600 houses, which are very full of inhabitants, who are estimated at 150,000 souls. It lies mostly on a level, or rather low in respect of the adjacent country, a great part of the old town being built on a marshy foundation, especially near the river. The principal streets are well built, and very little inferior to those in London, being formed of the same materials. People of distinction usually reside either in St. Stephen's Green, one of the largest squares in Europe, being a m. in circumference, or in several fine streets adjacent thereto, built within a few years past; also in others on the N. side of the river, particularly Sackville-street, which excels, both in the taste of laying it out, and elegance of architecture, any thing of the kind in London. Many of the houses, built of late years for the residence of the nobility and gentry, "are," as M. Voltaire remarks of those of Paris, "more distinguished by their interior elegance, than by their exterior decorations; and are designed rather to gratify private luxury, than to be a public ornament to the city." The want of a just regard for the elegance of the streets hath caused several lately erected to be built extremely irregular and unsightly; whereas, a little more attention to laying out the whole properly at first, would be infinitely more ornamental at the same expence; a fault which the wisdom of the English parliament prevented, by a law for that purpose, on re-building the city of London after the fire. The Castle, which serves for the vice-roy's palace, was originally built by Henry de Londres, archb. of Dublin, and lord justice of Ireland, anno 1213, in the reign of K. John, and was a place of strength, moated round and flanked with towers; but the ditch hath been long filled up, and all the other old buildings, except Bermingham tower, where some archives are kept, and that of the chappel, are taken down. It is at present a noble building, consisting of several courts, in the modern taste, and much exceeds either St. James's or Kensington palaces. Here are kept the several offices of state, as those of the treasury, ordnance, war, secretary's, &c. and here the lords justices and council meet on the affairs of the nation. The buildings of the base court are used for the keeping of military stores, with an arsenal and small armory for 40,000 men. There are many other public buildings, viz. two cathedral churches, Christ-church, built by Sitricus, the Son of Amlave, K. of the Ostmen of Dublin, about the year 1038, and afterwards enlarged by Earl Strongbow and others; St. Patrick's, built by archb. Comyn, anno 1190, first a collegiate church, but made a cathedral by the above-named Henry de Londres, the steeple of which was built by archb. Minot in 1370, and a lofty spire erected thereon in 1750; also several parish churches too tedious to mention. The parliament-house is a noble pile, fronted with a grand arcade of Ionic columns, the whole built of Portland stone. The royal hospital of Kilmajinham, erected for invalid and superannuated soldiers, is a quadrangular building, finely seated on a rising ground, near the river Liffey, on the W. side of the town. The barracks, the largest and handsomest building of the kind in Europe, in which are quartered 4 battalions of foot, and 1 regiment of horse. Dr. Stephen's hospital, that for lying-in women, Mercer's, and that for incurables, the charitable and other infirmaries, the custom-house, the tholsel or exchange, where the lord-mayor, sheriffs, and court of aldermen assemble, to transact all matters relating to the government of the city. The four-courts, where the high court of chancery and other courts of justice are held. The royal charter-school at Clontarf, two theatres, several halls for corporations, besides many other public and private houses of the nobility and gentry, too numerous to mention. Here are five bridges. That called Essex-bridge was lately rebuilt according to the model of that of Westminster, with stone balustrades and foot passages; and altho' the river cannot be compared to the Thames either as to depth or capaciousness, yet it is, through the whole length of the city, on both sides, banked in by spacious quays, where vessels, below bridge, unlade before the merchants doors and ware-houses; and the defects of the harbour are greatly remedied by a prodigious work of stone, of a considerable length and breadth, and piles of wood, which extend some miles into the bay; which work was executed by the statute of the 6th of Q. Anne, chap. 2. called the ballast act. Its trade consists chiefly in the importation of foreign commodities, of all kinds, rather than that of export, as it serves most places in the kingdom with every article of foreign luxury. The markets of this city are plentifully and cheaply supplied with flesh, fowl, and fish; particularly with the latter, in much higher perfection than any other capital in Europe. The inhabitants are supplied with coal from divers parts of England for fewel; water is brought, by means of pipes, from a noble reservoir, or basin, to every house, at an easy rate; and the city is lighted up with lamps, as in London. Much more might be said of this second emporium of the British empire, which would require a large volume to give the reader a just idea thereof; but we have already transgressed the bounds of this article, which, though short in itself, contains the amplest account of the city of Dublin hitherto published, which we hope will plead our excuse for its prolixity.]

DUDERSTAT, E. lon. 10. 8. lat. 51. 30. a town of Germany, in the co. of Eiffield and cir. of Upper Saxony, sit. 35 m. N. E. of Cassel, sub. to the Elector of Mentz.

DURO, or DURO, a river of Portugal, which rising in the N. E. of Old Castile, in Spain, runs from E. to W. through that pr. by Valladolid; then crosses the pr. of Leon, passing by Toro and Zamora, and entering Portugal at Miranda, runs S. dividing the kingdoms of Spain and Portugal; then turning W. crosses Portugal, and falls into the Atlantic Ocean at Porto Port.

W. of Ostend, and 50 E. of Dover. The fortifications of which port, and the works that run out into the sea, have cost France more money than any fortress of that K. This town being taken from the Spaniards, by the united forces of England and France, was put into the hands of the English, anno 1658, but was sold to France in the reign of King Charles II. Whereupon the fortifications were much improved, and it was the station of the French privateers in the wars that followed, who grew rich with the spoils of the English. Whereupon Britain insisted on the harbour and fortifications being demolished, at the treaty of Utrecht, anno 1713, which was done accordingly. This port would never admit of large men of war, all the mischief from thence was done by light frigates and privateers.

EBRO, anciently IBERUS, is a river of Spain, which rises in the N. W. part of Old Castile upon the confines of Asturia, runs S. E. through Old Castile and Biscay, then dividing Old Castile from Navarre, continues its course through Arragon, visiting the capital city of Saragosa, from whence it runs S. E. to the confines of Catalonia, where it receives the Cinca and Segra, and then crossing the S. W. part of Catalonia, passes by the city of Tortosa, discharging itself with great rapidity into the Mediterranean, 20 m. below that city. From this river Iberus it is supposed Spain had its ancient name of Iberia; certain it is the Celtæ, a nation of Gaul, that sent colonies into this part of Spain, were called Celtiberians, and the country Celtiberia. Upon the conclusion of the first Punic war the Ebro made the boundary between the Roman and Carthaginian territories; and Spain, when intirely reduced by the Romans, was divided by them into two very unequal provinces, viz. the Hither and the Further Spain, in respect to Rome, that of the W. of the Ebro being vastly larger than the other. The river Ebro is, at present, almost the only navigable river in Spain, and in this the navigation is very difficult, except between Tortosa and the sea, for tho' it will carry vessels 250 m. down the stream, it runs with that rapid force that a boat cannot go up the stream higher than Tortosa, and it is very dangerous going down on account of the rocks, which lie in the channel for 50 or 60 m. below Saragosa.

EDINBURGH, W. lon. 3. lat. 56. the capital city of Scotland, and of the co. of Mid-lothian, sit. 2 m. S. of Leith, and of the Frith of Forth, 82 m. N. W. of Newcastle, and upwards of 300 N. W. of London. It stands on an eminence, and has one grand street, upwards of a mile in length, and very broad, the castle at one end, and the palace of Holyrood-house at the other; the buildings of hewn stones, sashed, and ten or eleven stories high, there being distinct families on every floor almost. There is a descent from this street on each side, which makes the cross streets incommodious; however the Scots esteem it the prettiest town in Europe, though it be but small for the capital city of the kingdom. Here the parliament used to assemble, and here the supreme courts of justice are still held; but, as most of their great men attend the English court or parliament, Edinburgh must necessarily be upon the decline at present.

EGYPT, sit. in the N. E. part of Africa, between 30 and 36 degrees of E. lon. and between 21 and 31 degrees of N. lat. bounded by the Levant, or Mediterranean Sea, on the N. by the Red Sea, and the isthmus of Suez, which divides it from Arabia, on the E. by Abyssinia, or Ethiopia Superior, on the S. and by the deserts of Barca and Nubia on the W. being 600 m. in length, from N. to S. and from 100 to 200 in breadth, from E. to W. the river Nile, which rises in Abyssinia, running the whole length of it, from S. to N. and overflowing it annually, beginning to rise in the months of May or June, and is at the height usually in September, from which time the waters decrease till May or June again. There being no other water in the country (or not more than two springs) they were under a necessity of building their towns on the banks of the Nile, on some eminences, natural or artificial; so that, on the overflowing of the river, they look like so many islands, which have no other communication but by boats. The Lower Egypt is contained in a triangular island, made by the Levant, and the two chief branches of the Nile, which, dividing 5 miles below Cairo, one branch takes its course to the N. W. and falls into the Levant at Rossetto, and the other N. E. falling into the sea at Damietta, the ancient Pelusium; these mouths being about 100 miles asunder. This part of the country called the Delta, or Lower Egypt, having the greatest advantage by the overflowing of the Nile, is much the most fruitful, but not the most healthful, the mud which covers it, after the flood is gone, sending up an unwholesome vapour. The mountains and sands which inclose Egypt on the E. and W. would render the valley between excessive hot, if it were not for this annual flood; nor would the soil produce much without it, for the country is naturally barren, where the waters do not reach, and they have seldom any rain, unless in the Lower Egypt, though travellers relate, that they have sometimes seen heavy showers even in Upper Egypt. They have canals cut quite through Upper Egypt, to distribute the water to their fields and gardens, and preserve it in the dry season; and these they fill with great ceremony annually, when the river rises to a certain height; and, by these means, Egypt is rendered the most fruitful country in Africa, supplying Constantinople, and other towns in European Turkey, with corn, as it did Rome and Italy of old. They only harrow their grain into the mud, on the retiring of the waters, and, in March following, usually have a plentiful harvest. As to their rice fields, they supply them with water from their canals and reservoirs constantly, this grain always growing in water. Those lands that are not sown, yield good crops of grafs for their cattle. No place in the world, says Mr. Sandys, is better furnished with grain, flesh, fish, sugar, fruits, melons, roots, and other garden stuff, than the Lower Egypt; oranges, lemons, figs, dates, almonds, cassia and plantains, abound here; and they have some grapes, but not proper for wine; which defect is, in some measure, supplied by palm wine. The country is excessive hot for two or three months before the flood rises, and the musketoes, or gnats, will not suffer people to sleep in the night. The sands also are extremely troublesome, insinuating themselves into the closets, chests, and cabinets, and even into the bed-cloaths, making them as hot as if they had been warmed with coals; and these sands are probably the occasion of sore-eyes, with which the natives are almost universally afflicted in summer. Fevers and fluxes are frequent in autumn, and the swelling of the scrotum; but the greatest misfortune is the plague, which visits them, at least, once in seven years; but, when the Nile begins to overflow, 'tis said, the plague, and all other diseases, are abated. It must not be forgot, also, that the hot winds are very troublesome in April and May, and one occasion of their sore-eyes, as well as the sands.

Among the curiosities of Egypt, the pyramids are the most considerable; they are built of stone, by whom, or when, none knows; the base of the largest taking up ten acres of ground, and running up to 700 feet perpendicular height; eye witnesses frequently differ 100 feet as to their height; and indeed, the sands are driven up so high on the sides, that it is impracticable to take the height exactly. The mummy pits are another curiosity, which, with the pyramids, are on the W. side of the river, opposite to Cairo; in these pits have been thousands of imbalmed bodies interred, which have continued 3 or 4000 years at least; the coffins are set upright, in niches in the walls, and never laid at length.

Egypt is generally held to be subject to the Grand Signior, and so it is in part, but his authority is extremely limited by the Egyptian princes, who are all of them absolute in their respective territories, and assemble at Cairo, in a kind of parliament, or great council, which submits to the Grand Signior's Bassa, or Viceroy, no farther than they see fit, and sometimes depose him, and demand another of the Grand Signior, who is more acceptable to them; however, they suffer the Grand Signior to collect a revenue in their several districts, but by no means equal to what the country is able to pay; and, if more is demanded, or any innovations attempted, it indangers a revolt. They come to Cairo with such bodies of troops as protect them against the arbitrary administration of the Bassa, and the only way he has to manage them, is by dividing them into parties, and siding with that party which is most devoted to the Grand Signior. These Egyptian princes are not natives of the country, neither are they ever succeeded by their children in their respective governments, but by some slave, whom they appoint their successor; and these are, usually, slaves purchased in Georgia, or Circassia. This is their constitution, as was that of the ancient Mamelukes; no man could be a sovereign who had not been a slave, and purchased in some foreign country; but, out of these, we must except some Chieks, or Arab Chiefs, who are proprietors of villages, or small districts, in the country; these are succeeded by their children, on paying a fine, or small rent, to the government. The religion of the governors of the country is Mahometan, but the Cophtis, the posterity of the ancient Egyptians, the Greeks and Latins, are Christians, but of different sects; and there are a great number of Jews at Cairo, and in the great towns, where any thing is to be got.

ENGIA. See ENGINA.

ENGINA, E. lon. 24. lat. 37. 45. an island of European Turkey, sit. in the gulph of Engia, between Achaia and the Morea, 21 m. S. of Athens, and 50 m. E. of Corinth; it is about 30 m. in circumference, and has one town upon it of the same name, consisting of 600 houses. It is a fruitful country, and abounds with partridges to that degree, that the people are summoned annually to destroy their eggs to preserve their corn.

ENGLAND OLD. See the Introduction.

ENGLAND NEW, comprehending the colonies of, 1. The Massachusetts. 2. New-Hampshire. 3. Connecticut. And, 4. Rhode-island, and Providence plantation, is sit. between 67 and 73 degrees of W. lon. and between 41 and 45 degrees of N. lat. bounded by Canada on the N. W. by Nova Scotia, or Acadia, on the N. E. by the Atlantic Ocean on the E. and S. and by the pr. of New York on the W. being 300 m. long, and from 100 to 200 broad. The land near the sea is generally low, but farther up the country it rises into hills, and on the N. E. is rocky and mountainous; the N. and N. W. winds blowing over a long tract of frozen country are excessive cold, and their winters much severer and longer than in Old England, the ground being covered with snow, and the ships on the

the coast frozen up several months; but then their weather is more constant, and not variable as in Old England, and the short summer they have is much hotter; however the climate appears to be as healthful as in any of our American plantations. The four provinces into which New-England is divided have different constitutions, and generally different governors: the pr. of the Massachusetts, comprehending New Plymouth and Maine, are included in the same charter. 2. New Hampshire has another charter, and is a distinct government. 3. Connecticut and Newhaven are included in a third charter. 4. Rhode Island, and Providence plantation have another charter, and no dependance on any of the rest. As to the constitution of the Massachusetts colony: the crown appoints the governor, and all the officers of the admiralty; and the power of the militia is intirely in the hands of the governor, as captain-general; all the judges, justices, and sheriffs, are nominated by the governor and council, and the governor has a negative in the choice of any member of the council; all laws of the general assembly are sent to England to receive the approbation of the crown, and no act of government is valid without the governor's consent in writing.

As to the colonies of Connecticut and Rhode-Island, tho' their governments are distinct and independent of each other, yet is their constitution much the same, for each of these are impowered, by their respective charters, to elect their own governor, deputy-governor, council and assembly; to appoint officers, both civil and military, and to make laws for the government of their respective colonies. As to the colony of New-Hampshire, this is immediately dependent on the crown; the K. appoints their governor, lieutenant-governor, council, magistrates, and officers; but the freemen elect their representatives, or lower-house, as in Old England: but the laws in all the colonies are liable to be altered and repealed by the parliament of Great-Britain.

From whence it appears, that the Massachuset colony, which is the chief of the New-England colonies, has a different constitution from any of the rest. There is a mixture of the royal and the charter governments, for though the K. appoints the governor, he depends on the general assembly for his subsistence, and the general assembly chuse the council, which is equivalent to our house of lords; but then the governor can reject any member of the council, chosen by the lower house; and the power of the militia, and the collection of the customs, is entirely in the crown.

ENCOPING, E. lon. 16. 30. lat. 59. 50. a city of Sweden, in the pr. of Upland, sit. on the Meller lake, 40 m. W. of Stockholm.

* ENISTON HEAD, a noted headland in the co. of Donnegal, pr. of Ulster, in Ireland. W. lon. 8. 40. lat. 55. 10.

* ENNIS, the shire town of the co. of Clare, or Thomond, in the pr. of Connaught, in Ireland. It returns two members to parliament, and hath a barrack for two companies of foot. It is also named Clare; sit. 104 m. S. W. of Dublin. W. lon. 9. lat. 52. 42.

* ENNISCORTHY, a borough in the co. of Wexford, and pr. of Leinster, in Ireland, which sends two members to parliament. It hath a barrack for two companies of foot; sit. 48 m. almost S. of Dublin. W. lon. 6. 30. lat. 52. 25.

* ENNISKERRY, two islands on the coast of the co. of Clare, and pr. of Connaught, in Ireland; sit. in the bay of Killmurphy, two leagues from the main land. W. lon. 9. 35. lat. 52. 40.

the W.

EPHESUS, E. lon. 27. 40. lat. 37.
5. an ancient city of Ionia, in the Lesser Asia, sit. near the sea, on the mouth of the river Castrus, which formed a commodious harbour. It was the capital of Asia, during the Roman government; and here stood the celebrated temple of Diana, which Erostratus burnt down to perpetuate his memory, the same night Alexander the Great was born. St. Paul has honoured the Ephesians with an Epistle, and made Timothy the first bishop of this city, which is now dwindled to a little town, though there are some remains of a Roman theatre, a circus, and aqueduct, and many other magnificent ruins, which lie about 40 m. S. of Smyrna.

EPIRUS, or CANINA, a pr. of European Turkey, is bounded by Albania on the N. by Thessaly on the E. by Achaia on the S. and by the sea, near the entrance of the gulph of Venice, on the W. The capital Chimæra.

Albania is frequently comprehended in Epirus, and reckoned the N.
division of it; and, in some maps,
the whole is denominated Albania.

EPPING, E. lon. 5 m. lat. 51. 40.
a market town of Essex, 15 m. N. of London, and 15 m. W. of Chelmsford.

E R

EPPINGEN, E. lon. 8. 50. lat.
49. 20. a town of Germany, in the pal. of the Rhine, sit. 10 m. N. of Hailbron.

EPSOM, W. lon. 20 min. lat. 51.
25. a town in Surry, 15 m. S. W. of London, and 7 m. S. W. of Kingston; much resorted to on account of its medicinal waters.

ERFURT, E. lon. 11. 6. lat. 51.
a city of Germany, in the cir. of Upper Saxony, capital of Thuringia, sit. 12 m. W. of Weimar, and 20
E. of Saxgotha, sub. to the Elector of Mentz. It is one of the largest and most beautiful cities in Germany, and has a considerable ter. depending on it.

ERIDANUS, the ancient name of the river Po in Italy.

ERIE LAKE, lies between 80 and 87 degrees of W. lon. and between 41 and 42 degrees of N. lat. W. of the colony of Pensilvania, in N. America. It has a communication with the lake Ontario, or Frontinac, by the strait of Niagara, the greatest cataract or fall of water in the known world. The country between these lakes and the British plantations, is inhabited by the five nations of Iroquois Indians, who always opposed the French and their Indians of Canada, and were a good barrier of the British plantations, but the French have prevailed on some of them to change sides lately.

ERIVAN, E. lon. 45. lat. 40. 6.
a city of Persia, on the frontiers of Turkey, in Asia, in the pr. of Chirvan, sit. 180 m. E. of Erzerum, and 160 m. N. W. of Tauris. Erivan lake lies N. of the city.

ERKELENS, E. lon. 6. lat. 51. a city of Germany, in the cir. of Westphalia, and D. of Juliers, sit. on the river Roer, 10 m. N. of Ju-liers city.

ERPACH, E. lon. 8. 50. lat. 49.
42. a city of Germany, in the cir. of Franconia, sit. 30 m. S. E. of Francfort, capital of the co. of Er-pach, sub. to its count.

ERQUIKO, E. lon. 39. lat. 17.
a port town of the Red sea, sit. on the coast of Abex, in Africa, sub. to Turkey, 320 m. S. W. of Mecca.
the

ERZERUM, E. lon. 41. lat. 40. capital of the pr. of Turcomania, or Armenia, in Asiatic Turkey, sit. 180 m. W. of Erivan, and 140 m. S. of Trepisond and the Black-sea. It stands at the Foot of a chain of mountains, which are covered with snow usually till Midsummer. The town is about 2 m. in circumference, furrounded by a double wall and towers, very antique. The Beglerbeg, or Viceroy, resides here, in an ancient palace; and the Aga of the Janisaries, who is independent on him, in a castle, which stands above the town. It is computed that the inhabitants of Erzerum consist of 18000 Mahometants, and 6000 Armenians. The trade of the place consists chiefly in furs and copper utensils; copper being dug out of the neighbouring mountains and manufactured here. This city is a great thorough-fare from Persia and India to Constantinople, by the way of Trepisond and the Black sea; the merchants chusing this way to avoid the Arabs, who lye on the road to Aleppo. Erzerum does not stand on the Euphrates, as we find it in some maps, but in a peninsula, formed by the sources of that river; one of which streams lies a day's journey and the other half a day's journey from the city. Every week some caravan sets out from hence for Tocat, Teflis, Tauris, Trepisond, or Aleppo, but the Curdes or natives of Curdistan (Assyria) rambling about with their flocks and herds, as far as the sources of the Euphrates, are almost as troublesome to the merchants as the Arabs, frequently extorting money from the caravans on one pretence or other. These Curdes call themselves Jasides, or followers of Jesus, but have a great deal of superstition, and very little religion amongst them, and acknowledge neither the Turks or Persians for their sovereigns; but retire when they are attacked to their cold inaccessible mountains. Neither of these powers think it worth their while to make an entire conquest of them.

ESCHELLES, E. lon. 5. 15. lat. 45. 30. a town of Savoy, on the frontiers of Dauphine, in France, sit. 16 m. S. W. of Chamberry, and 20 m. N. of Grenoble.

ESCHWEGEN, E. lon. 9. 50. lat. 51. 17. a town of Germany, in the land. of Hesse-Cassel, sit. 22 m. S. E. of the city of Hesse-Cassel, and sub. to the Landgrave.

ESCURIAL, a palace of the K. of Spain, sit. 21 m. N. W. of Madrid, one of the largest and most magnificent palaces in the world, begun to be built by Philip II. son of the Emperor Charles V. anno 1557. There is not any thing wanting in it to render it a complete and beautiful town, for here is a fine church, a college, monastery, dwelling-houses, shops, artificers, cloysters, gardens, and an extensive park, with groves, fountains, cascades, grottos, fine prospects, and every thing that can render a place agreeable in so hot a climate, though it is situated in an exceeding barren soil. There are in the palace 11000 windows, 14000 doors, 1800 pillars, 17 cloysters, or piazzas, and 22 courts. The Pantheon, so called from its being built after the model of the Pantheon at Rome, is the Mausoleum of the Kings of Spain, of the Austrian family.

ESSENS, E. lon. 6. 50. lat. 54. a town of Westphalia, in the co. of Embden, sit. on the sea coast 25 m. N. of Embden city.

ESK, a river which forms part of the boundary between England and Scotland, and running from the N. E. to the S. W. falls into Solway Frith, giving name to a co. of Scotland, called Eskdale.

ESKIMAUX, sometimes called New-Britain, and Terra de Labrador, in N. America, is sit. between 59 and 80 degrees of W. lon. and between 50 and 64 degrees of N. lat. bounded by Hudson's straits, which separate separates it from Greenland on the N. by the Atlantic Ocean on the E. by the river and bay of St. Lawrence, which separates it from Newfoundland, Acadia, or New Scotland, on the S. E. and by Hudson's bay on the W. most of it yielded to Great-Britain by the treaty of Utrecht; but no colonies yet sent thither, unless some little settlements at the bottom of Hudson's bay; and here the French and their Indians of Canada, constantly hunt for furs, though they have no colonies here. The natives are not very numerous, they are chiefly employed in hunting and fishing.

ESLINGEN, E. lon. 9. 6. lat. 48. 38. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Suabia, and D. of Wirtemberg, sit. 7 m. S. E. of Stutgard; an imperial city or sovereign state, under the protection of the D. of Wirtemberg.

ESPARTEL CAPE, the most N. W. promontory of Africa, sit. at the entrance of the strait of Gibraltar.

ESPEIRES, E. lon. 3. 15. lat. 50. 44. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in the pr. of Flanders, sit. on the river Scheld, 8 m. N. of Tournay, and 11 m. S. W. of Oudenard.

ESPERIE, E. lon. 20. 50. lat. 48. 50. a city of Hungary, 40 m. N. of Tockay, and 15 N. of Cschaw, near which are salt mines.

ESPINAL, E. lon. 6. 15. lat. 48. 15. a town of Germany, in the D. of Lorrain, sit. 35 m. S. E. of Nancy, on the river Moselle.

* ESQUIMAUX. See LABRADOR.

ESSECK, E. lon. 20. 8. lat. 46. a town of Hungary, near the confluence of the rivers Drave and Danube, having a bridge 5 m. long over the marshes. This is a difficult pass, for the possession whereof has been several battles fought between the Christians and Turks, but now it is sub. to the house of Austria, with the whole K. of Hungary. Esseck lies 100 m. S. E. of Buda, and 80 m. N. W. of Belgrade.

E S

ESSEN, E. lon. 6. 30. lat. 51. 22. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Westphalia and co. of Mark, sit. 10 m. N. E. of Dusseldorp.

ESSEX, an English co. bounded by Suffolk and Cambridgeshire on the N. by the German sea on the E. by the river Thames, which divides it from Kent, on the S. and by Middlesex and Hertfordshire on the W.

ETHIOPIA SUPERIOR, a country in Africa, comprehending Abyssinia, Nubia and Abex, as it did in its most flourishing state; is bounded by Egypt and the Defart of Barca on the N. by the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean on the E. by Anian and the unknown parts of Africa on the S. and by other defart and unknown countries on the W. Abyssinia Proper has now little communication with the rest of the world, the Turks having possessed themselves of Abex, which runs along the western coast of the Red Sea. The river Nile rises from a lake almost in the middle of Abyssinia, and being swelled by the rains, which annually fall at a certain season between the tropics, overflows Egypt, and all the lower grounds which border on the river, which is the case of all rivers that rise within the tropics, though the ancients were at so great a loss for the occasion of this periodical flood; and what increases the flood still more, are the torrents that fall from the numerous hills with which this country is encumbered; though they have this advantage from their hills, that they can remove thither in the hot season, and enjoy a cooler air than they do in Egypt, which lies several degrees N. of Abyssinia. Their valleys also are rendered fruitful, by the annual rains and the numerous rivulets, producing plenty of corn, rice, wine, flax, sugar, and fruits, proper for the climate, and gold is said to be very plentiful here; but the Turks have shut up all the avenues to the country, that no other people can traffic with them for it at this day. Their cattle are camels, horses, oxen, sheep and asses, with which they abound. As to the persons of the Ethiopians, or Abyssinians, they are perfectly black, but their features more agreeable than their southern neighbours, having neither flat noses, or thick lips, like other Caffres. The sovereign of this country was once absolute, but at present the great men set up for princes in their respective governments, and the K. can transact nothing without them of any consequence. It was the King of this country, that the Europeans used to stile Prester John. The Portuguese, 'tis said, when they first discovered this country, seeing a cross always carried before him, stiled him priest, or Presbyter Maximus. He took upon him the supreme ecclesiastical, as well as civil, power; others say the Turks gave him the name of Prester, Cham, or Cam, i. e. King of slaves, because they purchased most of their Negroe slaves in this country. The government appears now to be a republic, or rather a mixed monarchy, in which the Prince's power is extremely limited by the great men. As to the common people, it is not very material whether the power be lodged in the K. or Lords, for they are all slaves either to the one or the other. Their religion is a mixture of Christianity and Judaism, but they seem to adhere more to the Greek church than to the Latin. They keep both the Christian and the Jewish sabbath, and both baptize and circumcise their children, and even their female children. The King, by the persuasion of the Jesuit missionaries, once submitted to the authority of the Pope; but this occasioning a civil war, he was obliged to expel the Latin fathers, and restore their ancient rites and ceremonies in ecclesiastical affairs. This is the country from whence, 'tis supposed, the Q. of Sheba came to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and from whence the eunuch, the prime minister of Q. Candace came, who was converted to Christianity and baptized by St. Philip.

ETNA MOUNT, or M. Gibello, E. lon. 15. lat. 38. a Volcano, or burning mountain, in the island of Sicily, and pr. of Val Demona, is sit. 50 m. S. W. of Messina, and 20 m. W. of the city of Catania; from whence, the first part of the way is full of towns and villages, vineyards and plantations, which are rendered fruitful by the ashes thrown out of the the Volcano; beyond this the rising grounds are planted with vines and fruit-trees, intermixed with corn-fields and pastures, and the upper part is planted with fir-trees; and here are clefts and cracks in the earth, from whence there issues smoke. The top of the mountain is encompassed with a circle of snow, from whence, however, smoke and flames continually ascend. This Volcano is generally about six miles round, but the eruptions frequently alter the face of it. As this hill is much larger than mount Vesuvius, being 60 m. in circumference at the bottom, the eruptions have been more frequent, and much more dreadful. In an eruption that happened in the year 1693, the city of Catania was overturned in a moment, and 18000 people perished in the ruins.

EU, E. lon. 1. 30. lat. 50. 4. a port town of France, in the pr. of Normandy, sit. on the English channel, and confines of Picardy, 15 m. N. E. of Dieppe.

EVERDING, E. lon. 13. 50. lat. 48. 20. a town of Germany, in the circle of Austria, sit. on the South side of the Danube, 12 miles W. of Lints.

EVERSHOT, W. lon. 2. 45. lat. 50. 47. a market town of Dorsetshire, sit. 7 m. N. W. of Dorchester.

EVESHAM, W. lon. 2. lat. 52. 10. a borough town of Worcester-shire, sit. 13 m. S. E. of Worcester; sends two members to parliament.

EUGUBIO, E. lon. 13. 40. lat. 43. 20. a town of Italy, in the Pope's ter. and D. of Urbino, sit. 35 m. S. of Urbino. The see of a bishop.

EVIAN, E. lon. 6. 32. lat. 46. 26. a town of Savoy, sit. on the S. side of the Lake of Geneva, 25 m. N. E. of the city of Geneva.

EVORA, or EBORA, W. lon. 8. 20. lat. 38. 32. a city of Portugal, capital of the pr. of Alentejo, sit. 70 m. S. E. of Lisbon, and 47 W. of Badajox, in Spain. It contains about 5000 inhabitants, and is an archb. and univ. and stands in one of the pleasantest and most fruitful countries in Portugal.

EUPHEMIA, E. lon. 16. 32. lat. 39. a port town of Naples, in the pr. of the Further Calabria, sit. on a bay of the sea, to which it gives its name, 50 m. N. E. of Reggio.

EUPHRATES, the finest river of Turkey, in Asia, has two sources to the northward of the city of Erzerum, in Turcomania, in 40 degrees odd min. N. lat. which streams unite three days journey below that city, where it will carry small vessels, but the rocky channel renders the navigation difficult. It runs at first from E. to W. through the province of Turcomania, or Armenia, but then meeting with mount Taurus, turns to the southward, dividing Armenia from Natolia, and continuing its course S. E. divides Syria from Diarbeck, or Assyria. It afterwards passes through the pr. of Eyraca Arabic, or Chaldea, and having united its waters with the Tigris, runs on S. E. to the city of Bassora, 50 m. below which it falls into the gulph of Persia. The country now called Diarbeck, is almost encompassed by the rivers Euphrates and Tygris, and was the ancient Mesopotamia or Padan Aram.

EUREUX, E. lon. 1. 12. lat. 49. 5. a city of France, in the pr. of Normandy, capital of the ter. of Eureux. sit. 25 m. S. of Rouen. The see of a bish.

EURIPUS, the strait between the island of Negropont and the continent of Greece, in European Turkey; remarkable for the tides in this channel, which are sometimes regular and at others irregular, according to the different times of the moon; when they are irregular they flow 13 or 14 times, and ebb as often, in 24 or 25 hours. At these times the water is half an hour rising and three quarters of an hour falling, but when the tides are regular, they observe the same rule according to the moon as the tides in the ocean.

EUSTACE, or EUSTATIA, W. lon. 63. lat. 17. 32. one of the least of the Caribbee islands, in the Atlantic Ocean, in America, sit. 3 or 4 m. W. of St. Christophers, sub. to the Dutch.

EUXINE, or BLACK SEA. sit. between 28 and 45 degrees of E. lon. and between 42 and 46 degrees of N. lat. being 700 m. in length from E. to W. and from 260 to 150 m. in breadth from N. to S. the current perpetually running into it from the Mediterranean, through the straits of the Hellespont and Bosphorus, or strait of Constantinople, and no visible passage out of it, and yet are not the waters higher at one time than another, or any tides that are discernible. It divides Europe from Asia, as far as it extends, but is entirely surrounded by the Turkish territories, having the Budziac Tartary, Little Tartary, and Coeban (a part of Circassian Tartary) on the N. another part of Circassia and Mingrelia on the E. Natolia, or the Lesser Asia, on the S. and the pr. of Romania, Bulgaria and Bessarabia on the W. but within these limits is comprehended the Palus Meotis, which extends from the straits of Kaffa, in Crim Tartary, to the city of Asoph, at the mouth of the river Don, or Tanais. It is said to be a stormy tempestuous sea, from whence it obtained the name of Black, or Terrible.

EXETER, W. lon. 3. 40. lat. 50. 44. the capital city of Devonshire, sit. on the river Ex, 150 m. W. of London, and 10 m. N. of the English channel. Topsham, about 5 m. S. of it, is the port town to Exeter, ships coming no higher up the river. The city makes no great figure in the eyes of those that have seen London; however it is a place of good trade, when the woollen manufactory flourishes and generally stiled the London of the W. there being no city between that and the Land's end, which lies about 100 m. W. of this city. It is the see of a bish. who has a very moderate revenue; sends two members to parliament, and gives the title of Earl to the noble family of Cecil.

EXILLES, E. lon. 7. lat. 45. 5. a strong fortress on the frontiers of Dauphine and Piedmont, in Italy, sit. on the N. side of the river Doria, 10 m. W. of Susa, 32 m. N. E. of mount Dauphine, and 25 N. W. of Turin; taken from France by the D. of Savoy, anno 1708, and confirmed to him by the treaty of Utrecht, anno 1713; now sub. to his son the K. of Sardinia.

EYE, or AYE, a borough town of Suffolk, sit. on the confines of Norfolk, 20 m. N. E. of Bury, 80 m. N. E. of London; sends two members to parliament, E. lon. 1. 20. lat. 52. 25.

EYEMOUTH. See AYMOUTH.

EYNDHOVEN, E. lon. 5. 20. lat. 51. 32. a town of the Netherlands, in the pr. of Brabant, sit. on the river Dommel, 15 m. S. of Boisleduc, and 30 m. S. E. of Breda, sub. to the Dutch.

EYRAC, or IZACA ARABIC, a pr. of Asiatic Turkey, sit. on the river Euphrates, being the ancient Chaldaea or Babylonia.

EYRAC, or IRAC AGEM, the ancient Parthia, now the principal pr. in Persia, is sit. almost in the center of that K. being bounded by Gilan and Adirbeitzan on the N. by the pr. of Chorasan on the E. by Chusistan and Farsistan on the S. and by Curdistan (the ancient Assyria) on the W. The capital city Ispahan, the met. of the Kingdom.

FEXEM, E. lon. 5. 40. lat. 50. 50. a village of the bish. of Liege, in the cir. of Westphalia, in Germany, 5 m. N. of Liege, and 4 m. W. of Vifet; where the late battle was fought between the Allies commanded by Prince Charles of Lorraine, and the French commanded by the Marshal Count Saxe, Oct. 1746.

FEZ, W. lon. 6. lat. 33. 30. the capital of the empire of Fez and Morocco in Africa, sit. on the river Cebu, 200 m. S. of Gibraltar, and 240 N. E. of the city of Morocco. A large populous city, the usual residence of the Emperor; a great part of the inhabitants Negroes, who have been brought from Negroland to recruit their Negro army, or the descendants of such Negroes; the rest are of an olive complexion. The empire of Fez and Morocco is sit. at the N. W. corner of Africa, between 2 and 10 degrees of W. lon. and between 30 and 36 deg. N. lat. bounded by the straits of Gibraltar and the Mediterranean seas on the N. by the river Fulvia, which separates it from Algiers on the E. by Bildulgerid on the S. and by the Atlantic ocean on the W. being about 400 m. long, and as many in breadth. It is a fertile country, producing good oil, corn, and pasture, and is proper for vines, as the Jews experience, where they are cultivated; but wine being prohibited the Mahometans, there are few vineyards. The garrisons of Gibraltar and Port-mahon furnish themselves with all manner of provisions from this country, and the soil is very proper for flax. They have also a fine breed of horses, much esteemed by all the nations in Europe. The Emperor is an absolute prince, and the crown said to be hereditary; but if there be more sons than one, they usually fight for the crown, 'till there be but one pretender left, which occasions perpetual civil wars, the last having continu'd near 30 years. They are almost always at war with the Spaniards and Portuguese; the first having Ceuta, and some other towns on the coast of Barbary, in their possession; and the Portuguese being masters of Arzillai, and some other towns sit. on the ocean, which are perpetual bones of contention between those Christian powers, and the subjects of Fez. The cavalry of Fez and Morocco are very good, but their foot are not to be depended on, or they would, long since, have recovered the towns the Spaniards and Portuguese have taken from them; however their horse prevent the Christians extending their conquests beyond the sea coasts. The religion of the country is Mahometanism, and of the same sect as the Turks are, and they entertain the like aversion for the Persians, the disciples of Hali. They frequently attack Christian ships in the ocean, as the Algerines do in the Mediterranean; these rovers lie at Sallee usually; their cruisers are very small, but full of men.

FIASCOE, E. lon. 13. lat. 42. 15. a city of Italy, in the pr. of Orvietto, in the Pope's ter. sit. near the lake Bolsenna, 12 m. S. of the city of Orvietto. The see of a bish.

FIDA, or Whidah, E. lon. 3. N. lat. 6. the capital of a ter. of the same name, on that part of Guiney, in Africa, called the Slave Coast. This country was lately conquer'd by the K. of Dahome, a prince whose ter. lay to the N. of Whidah, but the K. of Whidah, it is said, has recovered his country again. Here the English, and several other European nations, had factories, and purchased slaves, but suffered pretty much in the late wars.

in

FLANDERS, a pr. of the Netherlands, bounded by the German sea and the United Provinces on the N. by the pr. of Brabant on the E. by Hainalt and Artois on the S. and by another part of Artois and the German sea on the W. being about 60 m. long, and 50 broad, divided between the Austrians, the French, and the Dutch; of whom the Austrians have much the greatest part; the capital city Ghent. The French are possessed of the S. W. part of Flanders, in which are Lisse and Dunkirk. The Dutch possess the N. E. part of Flanders, wherein are the strong fortresses of Sluys, Sasvaghent, and Hulst. This pr. is a perfect level, not a rising ground or hill in it, and watered with innumerable rivers and canals; exceeding fruitful, and commodiously sit. for trade, and has some of the finest cities in Europe, with above a 1000 other towns and villages; and being so considerable on these accounts, the whole ten provinces of the French and Austrian Netherlands frequently go under the general name of Flanders. The produce of this country is chiefly fine lace, linen, and tapestry.

FLECHE, under the meridian of London, lat. 47. 40. a town of France, sit. on the little Loyre, in the pr. of Orleans and ter. of Angjou, 20 m. N. E. of Angers.

FLENSBURGH, E. lon. 9. 45. lat. 55. a port town of Sleswick, sit. on a bay of the Baltic sea, 16 m. N. of the city of Sleswick; sub. to Denmark.

FLERUS, E. lon. 4. 30. lat. 50.

33. a village of the Austrian Netherlands, in the pr. of Namur, sit. 15 m. W. of Namur, and 6. N. E. of Charleroy; rendered memorable by a battle fought here, between the French and Dutch, anno 1690, when the Dutch foot, being abandoned by their horse, made a fine retreat, and could not be broken by the French.

FLIX, E. lon. 12 min. lat. 41. 15. a town and castle in Spain, in the pr. of Catalonia, sit. on the river Ebro, 20 m. N. of Tortosa.

FLORENCE, E. lon. 12. 15. lat. 43. 30. the capital of Tuscany in Italy, sit. on the river Arno, 58 m. S. of Bologna, 140 N. of Rome, and 45 E. of Leghorn and the Tuscan sea. It is one of the most elegant towns in Italy, and called Florence the fair, defended by a wall and other modern works, besides three citadels of a round figure, and 6 m. in circumference; encompassed on three sides with little fruitful hills, full of villas and country seats; and on the W. lies that rich and extensive valley thro' which the river Arno runs as far as Pisa and the Tuscan sea. Statues and fountains are seen in almost all their streets; their private buildings lofty, their squares spacious, their churches little inferior to those of Rome, their noblemens palaces equal to any in Italy. The statues, paintings and curiosities in the Grand Duke's palace, are the admiration of travellers. The D. of Lorraine and Tuscany is now sovereign of this capital; which, with the D. of Tuscany, was allotted him when he ceded the D. of Lorraine to France, It is an archb. and university.

FLORENNES, E. lon. 4. 30. lat. 50. 20. a town of the French Netherlands, 18 m. S. W. of Namur.

FLORIDA, was a name given by the Spaniards to all that part of the continent of N. America, which lies N. of the gulph of Mexico, bounded on the E. by the Atlantic Ocean, which country now goes under many different names, for within these limits are contained most of the English colonies in N. America, and those countries which the French have denominated Louisiana and New-France. All that retains the name of Florida at present, is that peninsula between the colony of Georgia and Cape Florida, viz. between 25 and 30 degrees of N. lat. and between 81 and 85 degrees of W. lon. the chief and almost the only place the Spaniards are possessed of within these limits, being the port town of St. Augustin, and a fort a little distance from it; the town being a very small one, and the fort not able to resist such a force as is usually employed in sieges; though it has baffled some attempts that have been made to take it by the English, with a force scarce equal to the garrison, and in want of most necessaries requisite for a siege.

FLOUR (ST.) E. lon. 2. 40. lat. 45. a city of France, in the pr. of Lyonois, and ter. of Auvergne, sit. 45 m. S. of Clermont.

FRANCE received its name from the Franks, a German people, who inhabited the banks of the rivers Maine and Salii, and made a conquest of this country, then called Gaul, in the fifth century. Modern France is sit. between 5 degrees W. and 7 degrees E. lon. and between 43 degrees and 51 degrees N. lat. being bounded by the English channel and the Austrian Netherlands on the N. by Germany, Switzerland, Savoy and Piedmont, in Italy, on the E. by the Mediterranean sea and the Pyrenean mountains, which separate it from Spain, on the S. and by the bay of Biscay on the W. being almost a square of 540 m. on each side, except that Britany makes it something irregular, by extending farther to the westward than any other pr. It was an exceeding populous country, till the numbers were lessened by persecution, wars, and and famine. Their numbers which were formerly computed to amount to nineteen millions, scarce exceed fifteen millions at present. The air is the most temperate of any country in Europe, and the soil produces corn, wine, oil, and flax, in great abundance. It is extremely well situated for a foreign trade, as it lies on the ocean, the English channel, and the Mediterranean sea, and is watered by a great many large and navigable rivers, particularly the Seyne, the Loyre, the Garonne, the Rhone, the Soane, and of late the Rhine; which for some 100 m. now separates their dominions from Germany. Their stature is not large, but they are generally men of bright parts, and the most active and enterprising of any people in Europe; but so restless and impatient of ease, that they are constantly engaged in wars abroad, and law-suits at home; extremely devoted to their Prince, though he rules them with a rod of iron, and treats them as slaves; and so opinionated of themselves, that they look upon all other nations as Barbarians. They value themselves much for their good breeding, their complaisance, and unlimited professions of friendship to all they converse with, though they mean nothing by it, and may be looked upon as a parcel of genteel hypocrites. They have practised their cringes and impertinent ceremonies so long, that now no body regards them. Their manufactures of linen, woollen, silk and lace, are vastly great, and their foreign trade to Spain, Italy, Turkey, and to the East and West Indies, prodigiously increased of late; but no trade is more advantageous to them than that of Britain, from whence they receive chiefly treasure for the product of their country, viz. their wines, silks, linen and lace.

The K. was formerly divided into 12 provinces, which had each of them their parliaments, whose consent was necessary to the making laws and raising money; but the Cardinals Richlieu and Mazarin made their masters absolute sovereigns, deprived their parliaments of their share in the government, and they are only assembled at this day, to pass the arrets or laws the K. is pleased to send them, which none durst refuse. But in civil causes these parliaments are still the last resort, where the court does not interpose. These parliaments consist of a certain number of presidents and inferior judges, who purchase their places openly, and the crown makes a considerable revenue by such sales. The parliament of Paris is much the most considerable. Hither the King frequently comes in person, and sees his royal acts recorded. This parliament consists of the Dukes and Peers of France, besides the ordinary judges, and takes cognizance of all offences committed by peers, where the King does not issue a special commission to try them. The other parliaments are excluded from taking cognizance of any causes which relate to the crown, or the peers of the realm.

As France is divided into 25 general governments at present, over every one of these an officer, called an intendant, is appointed by the King, who seems to have a power of controuling the governor and all other officers of justice, and presides over the receivers general of his generality. The whole number of parishes contained in all the generalities, amount to 38,502, in which is comprehended 1,585,112 families, liable to pay the Taille or land-tax, which is only paid by those who hold by base tenures, and tradesmen; the nobility, clergy, and gentry, are exempted from this tax. The burgeses of Paris, and some other free cities also, are exempted from the land-tax.

There is another tax, called the Taillon, payable by the same persons as the Taille, which amounts to about a third part of the former.

There is another tax, called the Aids, which arises from the customs and duties on all merchandize, except salt.

The Gabelles, are the taxes arising by salt.

The other taxes are the capitation, or a poll-tax; the tenths of all estates, offices and employments; the fiftieth penny, from which neither the nobility nor clergy are exempted; and the tenths and free gifts of the clergy, who are allowed to tax themselves, but it is expected they should pay as much as the laity at least; and lastly, the crown lands, rents, fines and forfeitures, bring in a considerable revenue; all which are computed at fifteen millions sterling per annum; besides which, vast sums are raised by raising and lowering the coin at pleasure, by compounding debentures and government bills, and other oppressive means. The K. is but one great farm to the crown. The whole produce of the country is in the King's power, if he thinks fit to demand it, though he chuses to take it in the accustomed way, that he may make no more malecontents than he can't avoid; and were there never so many, he has always armies on foot sufficient to suppress insurrections. In time of peace, he has frequently 200,000 men in pay, and in time of war, sometimes 400,000; many of which are foreigners, viz. Swiss, Germans, Scotch, Irish, Swedes and Danes.

The religion of France is Roman Catholic, but they seem less devoted to the Pope than any other nation of that communion, and have not yet admitted the inquisition among them.

The Protestants fought for their religion and liberties many years, and at length obtained a toleration, by a royal edict, called the edict of Nantz; but this being repealed by Lewis XIV. anno 1685, a cruel persecution followed, which compelled several 100,000 of them to quit the K. who were entertained in Protestant countries, to the unspeakable prejudice of this K. for they did not only lose the most industrious part of the inhabitants, but the refugees set up the French manufactures in every country where they came, which very much lessened the demand for French merchandize. The crown of France is hereditary; but by their Salique law no female is suffered to inherit; neither is their royal line of that duration as in England, for in the pedigree of their Kings, we find there have been three families on the throne, viz. the Merovingian, the Carolinian, and the Caputine, which had no relation to one another; the second usurping on the first, and the third upon the second, which is the present reigning family. The eldest son of France is always stiled the Dauphin. The new conquests, or acquisitions, that France has made to her dominions the last hundred years, are those of Alsace and Lorraine, on the side of Germany; those of Artois, the Cambresis, part of Flanders, Hainalt, and Luxemburg, on the side of the Netherlands; and Roussillon, anciently a part of Catalonia, on the side of Spain.

FRANCFORT, E. lon. 7. 30. lat. 50. 10. a city of Germany, sit. on the confines of Hesse and Franconia. It stands on both sides the river Main, 18 m. E. of Mentz, and 15 W. of Hanau; a large populous city, regularly fortified, and well situated for trade. It is an imperial city, that is, a sovereign state, and with a considerable ter. about it, governed by its own magistrates. The Papists possess the cathedral, but the greatest part of the inhabitants being Lutheran Protestants, the Papists make no public processions thro' the town. In the Stadthouse or Guildhall of this city, the Electors assemble for the choice of an Emperor, and here is preserved the golden bull, which contains the rules to be observed at such elections.

FRANCFORT upon Oder, E. lon. 15. lat. 52. 22. a city of Germany, in the cir. of Upper Saxony, and mar.

FRASCATI, or FRESCATI, E. lon. 13. 12. lat. 42. a town of Italy, in the Campania of Rome, 13 m. E. of that city; near which place is the Tusculum of Cicero, called Grotto Ferrate. Here are several fine villas, belonging to the nobility of modern Rome, as there were formerly of the old Romans; the hill on which they stand being much admired for its fine prospects, in which Rome is comprehended. Here, says Mr. Addison, I first saw the sketch of Versailles, in the walks and water-works of these palaces.

FREDENBERG, E. lon. 8. lat. 51. 10. a town of Germany, in the D. and cir. of Westphalia, 50 m. W. of Cassel.

FREDERICA, W. lon. 81. 30. lat. 31. a town of Georgia, in N. America, sit. on the island of St. Simons, in the mouth of the river Alatomaha, lately built and fortified by General Oglethorpe. The Spaniards invaded the island, anno 1742, took St. Simon's fort, and were marching to besiege Frederica, but were repulsed by Mr. Oglethorpe, and obliged to abandon the enterprize. St. Simon's island is about 13 m. long, and 3 or 4 broad, 20 leagues N. of St. Augustin. St. Simon's fort, which the Spaniards took and abandoned again, is 7 m. from Frederica. There are some other small islands in the mouth of the river, which the English have fortified.

FREDERICKSBURG, E. lon. 12. 20. lat. 55. 40. a castle and palace of the K. of Denmark, sit. in the isle of Zealand, 20 m. N. W. of Copenhagen; built upon piles in the middle of a lake.

GALICIA, the most N. W. pr. of Spain, is bounded by the ocean on the N. and W. by the provinces of Asturias and Leon on the E. and by Portugal on the S.

GALICIA, or GUADALAJARA, a pr. of Mexico, in N. America, bounded by New Mexico on the N. by the gulph of Mexico on the E. by Mexico Proper on the S. and by the Pacific ocean and gulph of California on the W.

GALILEE, once a pr. of Judea, and now of Asiatic Turkey, the scene of many of our Saviour's miracles, was bounded by mount Libanus on the N. by the river Jordan and the sea of Galilee on the E. by the river Chison on the S. and the Mediterranean sea on the W. in which were the cities of Capernaum, Chorazin, and Bethsaida, which are not only gone to ruin, but the exact places where they stood now unknown; however some pretend to point them out in their Maps of Palestine; Capernaum they place at the N. end of the lake of Galilee, Chorazin on the East, and Bethsaida W. of the lake.

GALL,

G A

GALL, (St.) a town of Switzerland, in the ter. of Turgow, 5 m. W. of the lake of Constance, and adjoining to the abbey, but has new no dependance on it, the town having purchased the sovereignty of the Abbot. It is, at present, a republic, but no ter. belongs to it, the Abbot being sovereign of the adjacent country. The legislative power of this city is lodg'd in two councils. It is computed the inhabitants amount to 10,000 souls, who are most of them employed in the linen manufacture; the neighbouring country furnishing them with great quantities of the best flax, out of which they annually make upwards of 40,000 pieces of linen, of 200 ells each, and are much enriched by exporting it, it being reckoned one of the wealthiest towns in Switzerland. Their religion is Protestant, which occasions continual differences between them and the adjoining abbey. A few years ago one of the monks carrying his cross erected through the town, and several thousand peasants attending the procession, a tumult immediately followed among the citizens, who looked upon it as an insult on their religion, and running to arms, planted four great guns against the gates of the abbey, and a war was like to have ensued between the abbey and the town; the Abbot prohibited his subjects of the adjacent country to furnish the town with any provisions, knowing they could not subsist but by the produce of his country, having no territories of their own. However their differences were at length accommodated, the townsmen agreed to pay 2000 crowns for insulting the Monks, and the Monks engaged there should be no more processions in the town. The Abbot of St. Gall also was at war with the Tockenburghers in the year 1718, claiming the sovereignty of that city and ter. in which the Protestant cantons took the part of the Tockenburghers, and the Popish cantons the part of the Abbot; of which a further account will be given in the description of Switzerland.

GALLIPAGO ISLANDS, sit. in the Pacific ocean, on both sides of the Equator, between 85 and 90 degrees of W. lon. 400 m. W. of the coast of Peru: hither shipping frequently come to refit and get water and fresh provisions, but the Spaniards have not thought fit to send any colonies hither, and they lie too far from any other nation to turn to any account.

GALLIPOLI, E. lon. 28. lat. 40. 45. a port town of European Turkey, in the pr. of Romania, or Thrace, sit. at the entrance of the Propontis, or Sea of Marmora, 25 m. N. E. of the straits of the Hellespont, or Dardanells, and 100 m. S. W. of Constantinople. There are two harbours for the reception of gallies, but they will not admit of large ships. It is computed that the inhabitants consist of 10,000 Turks, and 4000 Christians, besides a great number of Jews. This was the first town the Turks possessed themselves of in Europe.

GALLIPOLI, E. lon. 19. lat. 40. 25. a port town of Italy, in the K. of Naples, and pr. of Otranto, sit. on the gulph of Otranto, 23 m. W. of the city of Otranto.

GALLO, W. lon. 80. lat. 2. 15. an island in the Pacific Ocean, near the coast of Peru, 200 m. W. of Popayan. There being some good harbours in this island with wood and water, the Buccaneers used to put in here to refit. This was the first place the Spaniards possessed themselves of when they attempted the conquest of Peru.

GALLO, E. lon. 15. lat. 43. 35. a town of Italy, in the mar. of Ancona, sit. 10 m. S. of Ancona.

GALLO, or PUNTO GALLO, W. lon. 78. lat. 6. a sea port town and fort, sit. on the S. W. part of the island of Ceylon, in the E. Indies, in Asia; sub. to the Dutch.

* GALLWAY, a co. in the pr. of Connaught, in Ireland, the second largest in that K. has Mayo and Roscommon common on the N. the Ocean on the W. Clare, Tipperary, and. Gallway bay on the S. and part of Roscommon, the King's co. and Tipperary on the E. It is much of it fertile, being a warm lime-stone soil, which rewards both the industry of the husbandman and shepherd; but is very coarse towards the N. and W. being thinly inhabited. It contains 775,525 Irish plantation acres, 14,923 houses, 136 parishes, 17 baronies, and 3 boroughs, and sends 8 members to parliament.

GALLWAY, W. lon. 9. 12. lat. 53. 12. the capital of the county of Gallway, and pr. of Connaught, in Ireland, sit. on the bay of Gallway, in the Western ocean, 83 m. W. of Dublin, a good port, advantageously situated for a foreign trade. [It is governed by a mayor, sheriffs, and recorder, returns two members to parliament, hath a barrack for ten companies of foot, and gives title of Viscount to the noble family of Moncton.] Gallway is the name of a co. and stewarty in the S. W. of Scotland.

* GALLWAY BAY, a large bay so named in the last mentioned co. the N. side of which is foul, and very dangerous for vessels, but is more safe on the S. side; however, none but small ships can sail up to the town.

GAMBIA, a great river of Africa, which running from E. to W. falls into the Atlantic Ocean in 14 degrees N. lat. and 15 W. lon. supposed to be a branch of the river Niger. It is navigable for sloops 600 m. as the English factors relate, who have gone up it so far in search of gold mines, but found none. At the mouth of the river the land is low, but higher up they meet with a mountainous, rocky country, well clothed with timber. There are a great many towns, and several distinct nations inhabit the banks of this river, most of them Negroes, but some of an olive complexion, who live like the Arabs, and speak the Arabic language, and are of the Mahometan religion, as most of the Negroes N. of the river are, but those that lie on the S. of the river are Pagans. James island, the chief settlement belonging to the African company, lies 10 leagues up the river, almost in the middle of it, being 3 m. from the nearest shore. The island is less than a m. in circumference, on which the company have a fort mounted with cannon, and a small garrison, which preserves their right of trading in that river; they have also factors on either shore for several hundred miles up the river. They trade with the natives for gold, slaves, elephants teeth, and bees-wax, and have found the way, at length, to procure some quantities of gum senega, which the French, who are settled on the river Senega, a little N. of Gambia, have long dealt in. These rivers running a long course within the Tropics, annually overflow all the flat country near their banks, about Midsummer, as the Nile and the Ganges do, being swelled by the periodical rains.

GANDIA, W. lon. 20 min. lat. 39. 5. a port town of Spain, in the pr. of Valencia, sit. on the coast of the Mediterranean, 25 m. S. of Valencia.

GANGEA, E. lon. 46. lat. 41. the capital of a ter. in the pr. of Chirvan, in the K. of Persia, in Asia, sit. 200 m. N. W. of Baku, and the Caspian sea, and 120 m. N.E. of Erivan.

GANGES, a river of the Hither India in Asia, rises in the mountains which separate India from Tartary, and some say further northwards, and running from the N. W. to the S. E. near 1500 m. through the Mogul's dominions, discharges itself by several channels into the bay of Bengal. This river is in great esteem in India, not only on account of the long course it runs, the depth of its several channels, and the pureness of its stream, but from the sanctity which the natives believe to be in its waters. 'Tis visited annually by several 100,000 pilgrims, who pay their devotions to this river as a god, and carry their dying friends from distant countries, to expire on its banks, and as soon as they die heave them into the middle of it. The water is lowest in April or May, but the rains beginning to fall soon after, the flat country is overflowed for several miles before September ends, and then the waters begin to retire, but leave a prolific mud behind, which makes Bengal the most fruitful pr. of India, for all kinds of grain. These waters keep better at sea than any other, except the Thames. The spring tides rise usually about 10 foot here, but there have been terrible inundations and storms of late years, in which the towns near the shore suffered much, and the ships in the river were, some of them, cast away; for there are no safe harbours upon the E. coast of India; therefore when the monsoons, or stormy season is expected, which is about the autumnal equinox, the shipping on the coast sail up the Ganges for their security. The Europeans use the most westerly branch of the Ganges, where the English have some settlements, particularly at Fort William and Hugely.

GANI, or COULOR, E. lon. 79. lat. 16. a town of Golconda, in the Hither India, in Asia, in which is a rich diamond mine, 100 m. E. of Bagnagar; sub. to the Mogul.

GAP, E. lon. 5. 46. lat. 44. 32. a city of France, in the pr. of Dauphine, 18 m. W. of Embrun. The see of a bish.

GARDA, E. lon. 11. lat. 45. 25. a town of Italy, in the Veronese, sit. on the E. side of the lake Garda, 20 m. N. W. of Verona; sub. to Venice.

GARDELEBEN, E. lon. 11. 45. lat. 52. 40. a town of Germany, in the mar. of Brandenburg, sit. 50 m. N. W. of Brandenburg; sub. to the K. of Prussia.

GARONNE, a river of France, which rises in the Pyrenean mountains, and running N. W. passes by the city of Tholouse, and continuing the course N. W. divides the provinces of Guienne and Gascony, visiting the city of Bourdeaux, and afterwards discharging itself into the bay of Biscay, about 60 m. below that city, having received the river Dordonne, and several others in its passage. It has also a communication with the Mediterranean Sea, by the royal canal made by Lewis XIV. The usual tides come up the river Garonne, 20 m. above Bourdeaux.

GARRISON, W. lon. 8. 20. lat. 54. 16. a town of Ireland, in the co. of Fermanagh and pr. of Ulster, sit. 10 m. S. of Ballyshannon.

GARSTANG, W. lon. 2. 40. lat. 53. 50. a market town of Lancashire, 10 m. N. of Preston.

GASCONY, the most S. W. pr. of France, bounded by Guienne on the N. by Languedoc on the E. by the Pyrennees, which separate it from Spain, on the S. and by the bay of Biscay on the W. the chief town Bayonne.

GASSENHOVEN, or GUTZENHOVEN, E. lon. 5. lat. 50. 55. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, sit. 4 m. E. of Tirlemont, and 15 m. E. of Louvain.

GATE, a chain of mountains that run thro' the middle of the Hither Peninsula of India, in Asia, from N. to S.

GATTON, W. lon. 10 min. lat. 51. 18. a borough town of Surrey, sit. 16 m. S. of London; sends two members to parliament.

GAVEREN, or WAVEREN, E. lon. 3. 35. lat. 51. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in the pr. of Flanders, sit. on the E. bank of the river Scheld, 8 m. S. W. of Ghent, and 5 m. N. E. of Oudenarde, near which the armies frequently encamped, and there have been several smart actions in the late wars.

GAUR, a ter. in the pr. of Chorasfan, in Persia, upon the confines of India, in Asia.

GAURES, are a people dispersed all over India and Persia, who pretend to be descended from the ancient Persians; however they differ from the modern Persians in several material articles. They worship the sun and the fire, but whether as gods, or resembling God, is uncertain, for they say God is light; and they maintain that the sacred fire has been kept alive near 4000 years. Their chief temple is on a mountain in the pr. of Eyrac-Agem, near the city of Yefd, where great numbers of their priests reside, whose employment is to take care of the sacred fire, that it be never extinguished; which fire, they say, was lighted by their great prophet Zoroaster, whose return they daily expect. The employment of this people is husbandry; they never bury their dead, but expose them in the open air, to be devoured by birds of prey, in places surrounded with high walls.

GEET, a river of the Austrian Netherlands, which rising in the S. E. part of Brabant, runs N. near the confines of Liege, and, passing by Lande and Leaw, falls into the Demer a little below Halen.

GELDERLAND, comprehending Zutphen, is a pr. of the United Netherlands, bounded by the Zuyder sea and by the pr. of Overysse on the N. by Westphalia on the E. by Brabant and Prussian Gelderland on the S. and by the pr. of Utrecht on the W.

GELDERS, E. lon. 6. 8. lat. 51. 35. a city of Gelderland, sit. 23 m. S. of Nimeguen, and 11 N. of Venlo, which, with the territories about it, was yielded to the K. of Prussia, by the treaty of Utrecht, anno 1713, together with the co. of Kessel, and village of Krieckenbeck.

GELENHAUSEN, E. lon. 8. 50. lat. 50. 15. a town of Germany, in the lan. of Hesse, and ter. of Hanau, sit. on the river Knitzig, 9 m. N. of Hanau, and 14 m. N. W. of Aschaffenburg, an imperial city, governed by its own magistrates.

GEMBOLOURS, E. lon. 4. 30. lat. 50. 30. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in the pr. of Brabant, sit. on the river Orne, 10 m. N. W. of Namur, and 22 S. E. of Brussels.

GEMUND, E. lon. 9. 40. lat. 48. 45. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Suabia, and co. of Rechberg, sit. on the river Rems, 25 m. E. of Stuttgart.

GEMUND, E. lon. 6. 15. lat. 50. 34. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Westphalia, and D. of Juliers, sit. on the river Roer, 25 m. S. W. of Cologne.

GEMUND, E. lon. 9. 45. lat. 50. 8. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Franconia, sit. on the river Maine, 20 m. N. of Wurtzburg, sub. to the bish. of Wurtzburg.

GENAP, E. lon. 4. 20. lat. 50. 33. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in the pr. of Brabant, sit. on the river Dyle, 14 m. S. E. of Brussels, and 10 m. N. W. of Gemblours.

GENEP, E. lon. 5. 30. lat. 51. 40. a town of the D. of Clevee, in Germany, sit. on the Nierse and Maes, 10 m. W. of Clevee.

GENEVA, E. lon. 6. lat. 46. 20. a city of Savoy, and capital of the ter. of Geneva, sit. near the confines of France and Switzerland, on the river Rhone, at the W. end of the lake Lemanus, or Geneva, 70 m. S. W. of Bern, 45 m. N. of Chamberry, and 60 m. N. W. of Lyons. It is surrounded with a wall and other fortifications, about 2 m. in circumference; it is tolerably well built, but most admired for its situation on the lake and river, and the fine walks and prospects about it. The town is not very strong considering its potent neighbours, whose territories come up to the very walls, viz. those of France and Sardinia, whose Princes make some pretensions to the dominion of this city; but they are protected by their allies, the the cantons of Bern and Zurich, against the attacks of both. The inhabitants are computed to amount to 30,000. This is the great resort of the Calvinists from France and other nations for education; it having been the place of Calvin's residence, and his disciples having had the dominion of this city ever since. They expelled their bishop in the year 1553, who was their sovereign at that time, and erected a republic, placing the legislative authority in a council of 200, and a senate of 25, who have the executive power, or administration of the government; none but the principal citizens were admitted to have any share in the government, or election of magistrates, but the common people have of late insisted on a share in the administration, and compelled their superiors to delegate part of their power to them. Their church is Presbyterian, governed by the city-clergy, the Burgher-master of reformation, and 6 others elected out of the great council; but their decrees, or canons, are of no force, till ratified by the great council. Their clergy have neither glebe nor tythes, but are allowed 50 l. per annum each, by the states. They will neither allow of cards, drinking in public houses, or dancing; but are less strict in keeping the sabbath than their brethren in this island, for they exercise their militia on Sundays, and go to bowls, and other manly sports. The adjoining lake is 60 m. long, and 12 broad, and produces great plenty of the best fish. They have a good foreign trade; their manufactures are chiefly gold and silver lace, silks, and shammy leather. Here is an univ. but no salaries settled on the professors, or fellows; their subsistence arising from the contributions of their pupils. The language of the common people is the Savoyard, or a very bad dialect of the French tongue; but people of condition speak French in greater purity. This republic was once allied to the Roman Catholic, as well as the Protestant cantons of Switzerland; but since they have embraced the doctrine of Calvin, the Popish cantons are not reckoned among their allies.

GENGENBACK, E. lon. 7. 45. lat. 48. 30. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Suabia, 10 m. S. E. of Strasburg, and 20 m. N. of Friburg.

GENIS, E. lon. 5. 30. lat. 45. 40. a town of Savoy, sit. on the river Guier, 12 m. W. of Chamberry, sub. to the K. of Sardinia.

GENOA is a republic in Italy, whose territories lie in the form of a crescent, on the Mediterranean Sea, for 150 m. viz. from the town of Ventimiglia on the W. to the ter. of the republic of Lucca almost, on the E. and is properly called the Riviere, or coast of Genoa, their country no where extending 20 m. from the sea, and in some parts not 10; the Appenine mountains in a manner cover it on the land side, and separate it from the countries of Nice, Piedmont, the Montferrat, the Milanese and Parmesan. The tops of these mountains are perfectly bare, having neither trees or herbage upon them; but towards the bottom they are well planted with vines, olives, and other fruit; but the soil yields scarce any corn, and their seas not many fish.

GENOA city, the capital of this republic, is sit. in 9 degrees 30 m. E. lon. and in 44 degrees 30 min. N. lat. part of it on a level strand near the sea, but rises gradually to the top of the hill. The houses are well built, 5 or 6 stories high, and rising like the seats of a theatre, afford a very fine prospect, as we approach it from the sea. The harbour is large and deep, but exposed to the S. W. wind, only there is a mole for the security of their galleys and small vessels, and the city lies pretty much exposed to a bombardment, as they experienced in the year 1684, when Lewis XIV. ordered the town to be beat about their ears; but it has been since rebuilt to great advantage with stone and brick, the roofs generally flat. Their principal principal street, according to Mr. Addison, is a double range of palaces, from one end to the other, built with excellent fancy, and fit to entertain the greatest princes; the fronts of several of them entirely of marble. The circumference of the city is six m. surrounded by a wall and other works; and at a little distance there is a second wall, which takes in the hills that command the place. There are in the city 30 parish churches, 20 colleges, and as many convents and religious houses, and it is the see of an archb. The legislative authority is lodged in the great senate, consisting of the signiory, and 400 noblemen and principal citizens, elected annually out of the freemen. The signiory consists of the D. and 12 other members, who hold their places two years; to whom, assisted by some other councils, is committed the administration of the government, four parts in five of the senate must agree to the enacting laws. The Doge is obliged to reside in the palace the two years he is in office, with two of the signiory and their families; and after he has served his two years, he retires to his own house for eight days, when his administration is approved or condemned, and if it be censured, he is proceeded against as a criminal. When the Doge is elected, a crown of gold is set on his head, and a scepter put into his right hand, as K. of Corsica, which island is sub. to this republic. His guards are equal to those of other crowned heads, and he is clothed in robes of crimson velvet, and complimented with the title of Most Serene. The senators are stiled their Excellencies, and the nobility Illustrious. The nobility derive their titles from the lands they possess in Naples, Milan, and other countries; but the republic suffers much by permitting her subjects to purchase honours and estates of foreign Princes, for this renders the principal families amongst them subject to another jurisdiction. When the Spaniards possessed Milan and Naples, they were obliged to be governed by Spanish councils, and when the Austrians possess those countries, the Austrians influence their affairs, which sometimes draws on them the resentment of other powers, particularly the French, who have not only bombarded their towns, but obstructed their foreign trade; and their formidable fleets, which heretofore gained so many victories over the Greeks, the Venetians, Turks, Spaniards, &c. and settled so many colonies in Asia and the Euxine sea, are now dwindled to six galleys; and when they would have increased them, the French ordered them to forbear increasing their navy at their peril. Their forces at land are usually about 4 or 5000, and they can increase them to 20,000. Their ordinary revenue is computed at 200,000 l. per ann. but they can increase it considerably, many of their subjects being very rich. There is a bank at Genoa, which has part of the publick duties for its fund. The crown of Spain is very much in debt to this Republic, for money lent ever since the reign of Philip II. and other sums taken up since, for which Spain continues to pay the interest, or part of it, to this day, but has never offered to repay any of the principal. Their country being but a barren spot, they usually keep two or three years provisions of corn, wine and oil, and other necessaries in their magazines, which they sell out at reasonable prices, in scarce years, to the people. The chief manufactories of Genoa are rich silks, velvets, and brocades, of which they export abundance, together with wine, oil, fruits, anchovies, sweet-meats, and several sorts of drugs. The celebrated Andrew Doria, one of the greatest admirals and generals of his time, freed his country from the tyranny of the French and Spaniards, and settled their government in the present form, anno 1528.

GEORGE (ST.) DEL MINA, W. lon. 5 min. lat. 5. the capital of the Dutch Dutch settlements on the gold coast of Guiney, in Africa, sit. 7 or 8 m. W. of Cape-Coast castle, the capital of the English settlements in Guiney. This fort the Dutch took from the Portuguese with several more, and expelled them from the gold coast, anno 1630. They endeavoured also to drive the English from thence, surprising several of their settlements in a time of full peace, anno 1664.

GEORGE (St.) fort and town, E. lon. 80. lat. 13. sit. on the coast of Cormandel, in the Hither India, in Asia, 3 m. N. of the city of St. Thomas. The town is divided into the white and black town. The fort, and white town which adjoins to the fort, are inhabited only by English, and are not above half a m. in circumference, surrounded by a stone wall. The outward or black town, called Madras, has been lately surrounded by a stone wall and bastions, cannon proof, by the late governor Pitt, and is about a m. and a half in circumference, the whole being almost surrounded by a river and the sea. This is the capital of all the settlements the English East-India company have on the coast of Cormandel, and is a healthful pleasant situation as any in India; the garrison does not consist of more than 3 or 400 men, besides Blacks. The Mogul's generals visit them sometimes, demanding a tribute or presents from the governor, which he is obliged to comply with; for tho' he might defend himself against the Mogul's forces, which consist chiefly of horse, yet they are able to ruin the company's trade, and cut off their communication with the country; where the English purchase of the natives, calicoes, chints, muslins, and sometimes diamonds. The company purchased this settlement and a small ter. about it, of the K. of Golconda; but the Mogul afterwards making a conquest of the country, looks upon himself entitled to this, as well as the rest of the towns in that K. The white town is pretty well built with brick;

the rooms lofty, and flat roofs; but the black town, in which merchants and people of every Asiatic nation almost inhabit, makes but an indifferent figure, consisting chiefly of thatched cottages; however, the people are very numerous, and some of them very rich. In the white town there is an elegant English church, and another for the Portuguese Catholics. In the black town there is an Armenian Christian church, and several Pagoda's or Indian temples. A universal toleration reigns here; no disputes about religion, or riots, or tumults, disturb the peace of the place; and robberies and other disorders are scarce ever heard of in this place. The unhappiest people are the company's soldiers, who are prisoners for life, never suffered to stir out of the town, and whipp'd at a post for every trivial offence; though it must be confessed their pay is good, considering the cheapness of provisions, and they are very well clothed; every soldier has a black boy to wait on him, and puts on a white shirt every day almost. The government of the town resembles an English corporation, with a mayor and aldermen, and they have lately received an authority from the court of England, to punish offenders capitally. The military power is lodged in the governor and council, who are also the last resort in civil causes. The company have two chaplains here, who officiate in the English church by turns, allowing them a house and 100 l. per ann. and the governor and council allow them so many advantages in trade, or rather traffic for them, that they generally make a fortune of 10,000 l. in ten years time. As for making proselytes, or converting the Indians, this does not seem to be any part of their business; this is left entirely to the Popish missionaries, who practise even upon the slaves of the Protestant inhabitants, and make good Catholics of them. The salaries of the writers who keep the company's accounts are exceeding small; they have only their table and 5 l. per annum, and the factors 15 l. per annum; and were they not in expectation of rising gradually to better posts, and had something of their own to subsist on and traffic with, few would accept these employments. The salary of the judge advocate is but 100 l. per annum, and the attorney general's 23 l. per annum; but they must have other ways of making money, for they all grow rich.

GEORGE'S (ST.) W. lon. 65. lat. 32. 30. the largest of the Bermuda, or Summer-Islands, sit. 500 m. E. of Charles-Town, and the continent of America.

GEORGIA, in Asia, the ancient Iberia, is bounded by Circassia and Daghestan on the N. by the Caspian sea on the E. by Armenia, or Turcomania, on the S. and by Mingrelia on the W. the eastern and much the largest division is sub. to Persia, the capital city Teflis, though I think neither Georgia nor the ancient Iberia extended so far eastward as the Caspian sea, but it is separated from it by the pr. of Chirvan. It is a mountainous but fruitful country, producing corn, wine, and cattle in abundance; and the difficult access of some of their mountains has preserved them from being absolutely subdued, either by the Turks or Persians; but what this country is most remarkable for, is the beauty of the natives, and the traffic they carry on with the Turks and Persians for their children, who are sold and carried young to both these courts, where they expect to be advanced to the greatest honours; and for this reason their parents part with them with joy, instead of lamenting their absence.

GEORGIA, an English plantation in N. America, lies South of S. Carolina, separated from it on the N. by the river Savannah, bounded by the Atlantic ocean on the E. by the river of St. John's, which divides it from Spanish Florida, on the S. and on the W. it has no other bounds but the territories claimed by the French of Louisiana, and the Spaniards of Florida. The river of St. John, which is the southern boundary, lies in 30 degrees 21 min. N. lat. The land of Carolina is low near the sea, and covered with wood, but begins to rise into hills at 25 miles distance, and at length terminates in mountains, which run in a line from N. to S. on the back of Virginia and Carolina, ending in the pr. of Georgia, about 200 m. from the bay of Apallachee, in the gulph of Mexico; there being a plain country from the foot of those mountains to that sea, which made it necessary to fortify the banks of the rivers Savannah and Alatamaha, to prevent the incursions of the Spaniards and French by land. The Savannah is navigable 600 m. for canoes, and 300 for boats. The coast of Georgia is defended from the fury of the ocean, by a range of islands, which run parallel to it; and both the islands and continent being well wooded, the channel between them is extremely pleasant. There are sandbanks upwards of 70 m. from the coast of Georgia, and the water shoals gradually, till you come within 6 m. of the land, where the banks are so shallow, that they bar all further passage, except in the channels which lie between the bars; and these were supposed a sufficient defence against the fleets of an enemy; but the Spaniards, it seems, found means to pass the channels and attack the island of St. Simons, in the year 1742, which had been lost, with the town of Frederica, if General Oglethorp had not defeated their design by his excellent conduct. When ships have passed the bars, they meet with a commodious and secure harbour, in the mouth of the river Savannah; and there is still a more capacious harbour to the S. of it, called Teky Sound, where there is anchoring for a large fleet, in 10 or 14 fathoms water, and land-lock'd, and a safe entry through the bar. The tides on this coast generally flow

7 feet. There are several towns already built in Georgia, by the trustees for that colony, particularly the town of Savannah, on the banks of the river Savannah, and the town of Ebenezer on the same river; and in the southern division of the pr. is the town of Frederica, on the island of St. Simons, in the mouth of the river Alatomaha, and several forts, for the security of the island and adjacent country, one of which was abandoned on the invasion of the Spaniards, anno 1742; but they were obliged to retire in some disorder, on the approach of General Oglethorp. The country of Georgia is not very fruitful, but is a good barrier against the French and Spaniards and their Indians, which is the reason the parliament have granted large sums to plant and fortify it; and had there not been some misunderstandings between the general, and the government of S. Carolina, we should by this time have seen it in a condition to resist any attacks of the French and Spaniards from that quarter. There is no doubt but the General is a man of capacity and a brave soldier, but he has not been supplied with forces equal to his designs, nor was he well seconded by those who ought to have supported him, in the enterprizes he was engaged in for the service of that country which was most nearly concerned in the event.

GERMANY is situate between 5 and 19 degrees of E. lon. and between 45 and 55 degrees of N. lat. bounded by the German ocean, Denmark and the Baltic sea on the N. by Poland and Hungary (if we include Bohemia) on the E. by Switzerland and the Alps, which separate it from Italy, on the S. and by the dominions of France and the Netherlands on the W. from which it is separated by the rivers Rhine, Moselle, and Maes.

It is divided into 10 circles, three whereof lie on the N. viz. 1. the cir. of Upper Saxony, 2. the cir. of Lower Saxony, and 3. the cir. of Westphalia.

Three on the S. viz. 4. the cir. of Austria, 5. the cir. of Bavaria, and 6. the cir. of Suabia.

Three about the middle, viz. 7. the cir. of Franconia, 8. the cir. of the Upper Rhine, 9. the cir. of the Lower Rhine.

10. The cir. of Burgundy, or Belgium, which consisted of the D. of Burgundy, and the 17 provinces of the Netherlands; but the last have long been detached from the Empire.

There are in Germany upwards of 300 sovereign princes and states, most of them arbitrary in their respective territories, 1. the Emperor, 2. the 9 Electors, 3. the ecclesiastical Princes, consisting of Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, and Abbesses, 4. secular Princes, consisting of Dukes, Marquisses, Counts, Landgraves, Earls and Barons, 5. free cities which are either Imperial or Hans-towns. The Imperial cities are sovereign states, and send their deputies, or representatives, to the general diets, or parliaments of the empire. The Hans-towns also are sovereign states, not different from the other Imperial cities at present, but were about 200 years ago allied or confederated for their mutual defence, and the protection of their trade, and at first consisted only of the great sea-port towns on the German ocean, or the Baltic sea, and near the mouths of their great rivers, but afterwards they took in many inland cities into their alliance, monopolized most of the trade of Europe, and were a most formidable maritime power.

Germany is generally a level country towards the N. and E. consisting of a barren sand, or marsh: on the S. it is encumbered with the mountains of the Alps, but in the middle of the country there is a variety of hills, vallies, fruitful fields, and meadows; especially along the banks of their great rivers, the Danube, Rhine, &c. Abundance of fine cities, castles and palaces, adorn it, and it is much more populous than France.

Charlemain, the son of Pepin, K. of France, laid the foundation of the German empire, in the year 800, being then sovereign of Italy and great part of Spain, and the S. of Germany, as well as France; the Empire being afterwards divided among the posterity of Charlemain, the sovereign of Germany and Italy only retained the title of Emperor, the Princes of the Empire being then his vassals. The Imperial crown was hereditary for 300 years after Charlemain, when the Pope, to lessen the Imperial authority and advance his own, incited the German Princes to alter the constitution, and render the Imperial crown elective. And during the struggles between the Emperor and the Pope for superiority, several sovereign states and principalities were erected in Italy and Germany, which claimed an independency on either.

The Emperors, after the hereditary line was broke, were at first elected by the body of the people, which occasioned some confusion, the nobility and great officers of state, excluded the common people from their share in the election, and chose the Emperor themselves, and the number of Electors was at length reduced to seven, viz. the Archbishops of Mentz, Triers, and Cologne, the K. of Bohemia, the D.

of Saxony, the Palgrave, or Prince Palatine of the Rhine, and the Marquis of Brandenburg; to whom the Dukes of Bavaria and Hanover have been since added. But notwithstanding the Imperial dignity was elective, the Austrian family found means to continue it in that house for 300 years, till for want of male-issue of the house of Austria, the elector of Bavaria was chosen Emperor, anno 1742; who contending for the hereditary dominions of the house of Austria, brought himself into great difficulties, ruined his native country of Bavaria, and after a short and troublesome reign, died in his own capital, on the 9th day of January, anno 1745.

The Emperor is now chosen by the nine Electors on a demise, unless a K. of the Romans hath been chosen in the preceding reign, and then he succeeds of course.

The Emperor is the fountain of honour in Germany, and disposes of almost all places and honours, civil and military, except those that are hereditary; as the great chancellor, treasurer, &c. which are rather honorary than lucrative posts.

By the golden bull, the person elected Emperor, ought to be a Christian Prince, of German extraction, and 28 years of age, and is obliged to sign a capitulation which the Electors present him, before he is installed; by which he promises to maintain the rights and privileges of the Electors, Princes and States of the empire, that he will not alienate the lands or revenues of the crown, that he will not introduce foreign forces, or employ foreigners in his service.

The Emperor's ordinary revenue arises from the crown lands, fines, forfeitures and confiscations, and he is heir general to all the princes and nobility of the empire, that leave no heirs male. There is also a tax, called Roman months, to which all the princes and states contribute a certain proportion, for the support of the government; and all extraordinary dinary taxes are raised, and forces for the defence of the empire maintained by the several Electors, Princes and States, at their own expence; or by taxes raised by the diet, or general assembly of the Electors, Princes and States of the Empire. They are well able to raise and pay 500,000 men, and were they unanimous, would be an overmatch for France by land; but this scarce ever happens. The French when they enter into war with Germany, ever corrupt some of the Princes of the empire, and bring them over to their party; or incite the Turk, or Swede, to make a diversion in their favour.

The diet, or parliament of the empire, consists of the Emperor, the nine Electors, the ecclesiastical and secular Princes of the empire, and the deputies of the towns, who constitute the legislature, to whose laws all the Princes and States are subject; but yet every Elector, Prince and State, are sovereigns in their respective territories, where the diet, or the supreme courts of judicature, do not interpose; for there are two such councils, one called the Aulic council, and the other the Chamber of Triers, each consisting of fifty members of the first quality, some appointed by the Emperor, others by the Electors, and the rest by the several circles. The Emperor's revenues, as Emperor, are not very great; but then he is at no charge in the administration of the government, or maintaining forces. These are provided for by the empire. And the Austrian Emperors had very considerable revenues from their hereditary countries, which, with the disposal of all places of profit, gave them such an influence, that they were able to keep the possession of the Imperial throne for 300 years, and might have kept it much longer, if there had not been a defect of male issue.

The Germans are much divided in their opinions of religion; the principal sects are those of the Papists, the Lutherans and Calvinists; there are also Independents, Anabaptists, Quakers, and Christians of every other denomination, and a multitude of Jews in all their great towns. The Emperor is always a Roman Catholic; Saxony and Brandenburg are most of them Lutherans, but some Calvinists; Bavaria and Austria are Catholics; the Palatinate and the Upper and Lower Rhine are a mixture of all denominations; the Imperial cities are most of them Lutherans, and some Calvinists: the two last hate and persecute one another more than they do the Papists. At the treaty of Munster or Westphalia, anno 1648, the Protestants were not only tolerated, but put on the same foot with the Papists in their respective territories. But from the reformation till that time, they were almost always at war, and several 100,000 Christians butchered in the quarrel. When the Protestant religion was established by that treaty, several archbishoprics, bishoprics, and abbies, were secularized, converted into Duchies, or Lay-ees, and applied to the support of the government, with the revenues of all church lands. The Protestant clergy of Germany have neither glebe or tythes, but depend on the bounty of their respective governments for their support. Instead of bishops, the Lutherans have superintendants; and the Calvinist churches are governed by their Presbyters, or Parish Priests, and Elders, who are all equal, and claim no superiority over any of their brethren.

Germany produces corn, wine, oil, sheep, black cattle, and an excellent breed of horses, fit for the coach or army, and with these the French usually remount their cavalry. The country also produces great quantities of flax and hemp, and they have abundance of good timber; nor should their bacon, beer, and mum, be forgot; they have also mines of iron, copper, and silver, lead, salt, coal, vitriol, quick-silver, nitre, ocre, and sulphur, and some of the best medicinal springs and baths in Europe, as at Pyrmont, Baden, Aix-la-chapelle, &c. They have also plenty of deer, fish, and fowl; and their orchards are full of the best fruits. The people are excellent mechanics and chymists: the invention of printing and gun-powder, is generally ascribed to them; clocks, watches, locks, swords, and fire-arms, they have also brought to great perfection; and they have in a manner monopolized the manufacture of tin plates, or white iron. They are reckoned good artists at painting and engraving, and are excellent engineers. They carry on their foreign trade by the rivers Rhine, Elbe, Oder, Weser, and the Baltic Sea; particularly from the ports of Hamburg, Lubeck, Bremen, Stetin, &c. and by land with Italy, Switzerland, France and Holland; they export a good deal of linen, particularly to England; and what we call Dutch toys come from hence: provisions, and consequently labour, is very cheap; or it could never turn to account to employ their hands in such trifles.

GERMERSHIEM, E. lon. 8. 15. lat. 49. 12. a town of Germany, in the pal. of the Rhine, sit. on the W. side of the river Rhine, 10 m. E. of Landau, opposite to Philippsburg; sub. to France.

GERTRUDENBURG, E. lon. 4. 45. lat. 51. 40. a fortified town of the United Netherlands, in the pr. of Holland, sit. at the E. end of a lake called the Biesboch, 12 m. S. E. of Dort, and 9 m. N. of Breda, sub. to the Prince of Orange. Here conferences were held between the French and Dutch, on behalf of the confederates, to settle preliminary articles of peace, anno 1710, when the French made large concessions, but they were abruptly broken off by the influence of some who had an interest in prolonging the war.

GEVER, or GOAR (ST.) E. lon. 7. 16. lat. 50. 15. a town of Germany, in the cir. of the Upper Rhine, and ter. of Rhinefelden, sub. to the Prince of Hesse Rhinefeld, sit. on the river Rhine, 15 m. S. of Coblents.

GEX, E. lon. 6. lat. 46. 26. a town of France, cap. of a bailiwick on the frontiers of Savoy, 7 m. N. W. of Geneva, and 43 m. S. E. of Chalon.

GHEUT, or GAUNT, E. lon. 3. 36. lat. 51. a city of the Austrian Netherlands, cap. of the pr. of Flanders, sit. on 4 navigable rivers, viz. the Scheld, the Lys, the Lieue, and the Mourwater, 30 m. N. W. of Brussels, defended by walls and other fortifications, 12 m. in cir. besides a castle, and yet of no great strength, there being such a variety of ground, and so extensive, that it requires an army to defend it. Above half of the ground within the walls consists of fields and gardens. It is divided into 26 islands by the rivers and canals which run thro' it; over which are laid an 100 bridges. This was generally the winter quarters of the English foot in Q. Anne's wars; there were sometimes 24 regiments of English in the place, who had a chapel, and the English service regularly performed every Sunday. It is reckoned a healthful situation by the natives, but there lie buried some thousands of English on St. Peter's hill, before the great barrack, most of them new raised men, with whom the climate did not agree; and indeed there is usually a great mortality among the English who are sent to any foreign country; it was still worse in Ireland, in K. William's wars, after the revolution. There are 7 parish churches, and 55 monasteries and nunneries; in the great square square is the statue of the Emperor Charles V. K. of Spain, who was born in the castle; and here John of Gaunt, son of Edward III. K. of England, was born. The silk, linen, and woollen manufactures, flourish here; they have a great trade in corn, and it is exceedingly well situated for a foreign trade, by the numerous rivers and canals. The French possessed themselves of this city, and the rest of the towns in Flanders, on the death of Charles II. K. of Spain, in the name of the D. of Anjou, whom they set upon the throne of Spain; but it surrendered to K. Charles III. and his confederates, immediately after the victory they obtained over the French at Ramillies, anno 1706. The French surprized Ghent again, anno 1708, as they did also the city of Bruges, but the D. of Marlborough having reduced the city of Lisle, and invested Ghent in December following, the city surrendered within 2 or 3 days, though the French had an army of 20,000 men in the place; and they immediately after evacuated all the Austrian Flanders. It is the see of a bish. and sub. to the house of Austria; but the civil government of the city is lodged in the Burgher-master and Schepins, or the Mayor and Aldermen.

* GIANT'S CAUSEWAY, a promontory in the co. of Antrim, and pr. of Ulster, in Ireland, sit. in W. lon. 6. 50. lat. 55. 20. esteemed one of the greatest natural curiosities in the world. It extends from the foot of a steep hill into the sea, being of a triangular form; the length of it at low water, being above 600 feet, and of a considerable breadth. It consists of several thousand pillars, some triangular, and others octangular, but most of them are 5 and 6 sided, but all the sides are irregular, and from 16 to 26 inches diameter; every pillar has as many others joined round it as it hath sides, except the outward ones, which shew 1, 2, or 3 faces to view. Some of them are much longer and higher than the rest, some shorter and more broken; some, for a pretty large space, of equal height, so that their tops make an even surface. Every pillar is made up of several joints or pieces, from 12 to 24 inches long, not joined together by flat surfaces; but when one part of the pillar is separated from the other, one piece is always concave, and the other convex, joined to each other in a kind of articulation. Some of the columns are 36 feet high above the strand; how far they reach under ground is not known, tho' they have been traced 8 feet deep. The stone is an heavy dark brown grit, abounding with iron ore. The whole Causeway is undoubtedly natural, though some are so silly as to imagine it to be the production of art. It is said that something like it may be seen on the opposite coast of Scotland.

GIBRALTAR, W. lon. 6. lat. 36. a port town of the pr. of Andalusia, in Spain, sit. on the strait between the Ocean and the Mediterranean, to which it gives its name. It stands at the foot of mount Calpe, one of Hercules's pillars, about 16 m. N. of Ceuta, in Africa, 40 S. W. of Cadiz, and 80 S. of Seville. It is built on a rock, in a Peninsula, and can only be approached on the land side, by a very narrow passage between the mountain and the sea, cross which the Spaniards have drawn a line and fortified it to prevent the garrison having any communication with the country. It was taken by the confederate fleet commanded by Sir George Rook, in two days, anno 1704. The French and Spaniards attempted to retake it the same year, and four or five hundred of them crept up the rock which covers the town, in the night-time, but were drove down headlong the next morning. They besieged it again in 1727, but were forced forced to raise the siege, after they had lain before it several months. They attempted at this siege to blow up the rock with gun-powder, but found it impracticable. The strait, to which this town gives name, is about 24 m. long, and 15 broad, and there is a strong current sets through it from the Ocean to the Mediterranean, which requires a brisk gale to stem it. The garrison of Gibraltar is cooped up in very narrow limits, and the little ground they have produces scarce any thing. They have all their provision from England and the coast of Barbary. The road is very unsafe either against enemies or storms. It is made a free port, and merchants have been invited to settle there to little purpose; but I think it is made a corporate town, and the civil power, at length, put into the hands of the magistrates, there being some notorious oppressions while the people were under a military government.

Here Robert Duke of Normandy, eldest son of William the Conqueror, was buried, after he had been prisoner 26 years in Cardiff Castle. William Duke of Gloucester, the only surviving son of Q. Anne, took his title from this city. It sends two members to parliament.

GLOGAW, E. lon. 16. 8. lat. 51. 40. a city of Silesia, sit. on the river Oder, 45 m. N. W. of Breslaw, taken by the K. of Prussia, anno 1741, and confirmed to him by a subsequent treaty with the Q. of Hungary.

GLOGAW THE LESSER, E. lon. 17. 20. lat. 50. 20. a town of Silesia, sit. 50 m. S. of Breslaw, and 20 m. N. of Tropaw, possessed by the K. of Prussia.

GLUCKSTAT, E. lon. 9. lat. 54. 20. a fortified town of Germany, in the D. of Holstein, sit. on the E. side of the river Elbe, near its mouth, 30 m. N. W. of Hamburg, and sub. to the K. of Denmark; who attempted to make all ships pay toll here, which passed up the river Elbe, but the powers of Europe would not submit to it.

GNESNA, E. lon. 18. lat. 53. the the capital city of Great Poland, sit. 110 m. W. of Warsaw; the see of an archb. who is always Primate of Poland. It was the first city that was built in the K.

GOA, E. lon. 73. 20. lat. 15. 20. a great city and sea port of the Hither India, in Asia, sit. on the Malabar coast, in the K. of Decan, or Vissapour, the capital of the Portuguese settlements in India. It stands on an island of the river Mandoua, about 8 m. from the mouth of it, and by the strength of its sit. and the fortifications the Portuguese have added to it, has been able to defend itself both against the Dutch and the natives, who have besieged it several times. The island it stands upon is 24 m. in circumference, and the hills, which surround it at a little distance, on the neighbouring continent, render it very hot and unhealthy. The town is about 2 m. in length, and half a one in breadth, and is not only fortified with walls and ramparts, but the whole island is surrounded by a wall, bastions, and other modern works, which secure their fields and gardens from the incursions of enemies; and indeed, the Portuguese have fortified the banks of the river from the very mouth of it, with redoubts and batteries of guns, which make the attacking of it more difficult than any other town in India. Nor is the country between the town and the sea more secure than it is pleasant, being full of country seats and villages, well planted with all such fruits as are found between the tropics. The Viceroy, who resides in this city, commands all the settlements the Portuguese are masters of from the Cape of good Hope to China, which are very numerous; and the clergy in the Portuguese towns and settlements in Asia, and the East coast of Africa, are sub. to the archb. of Goa. The buildings of this city are of stone, and very magnificent. They have abundance of convents and nunneries here, and it is surprizing to see what numbers of monks, and other Popish ecclesiastics, there are in this city, and on the coast of Malabar and Golconda; but they do not make many proselytes among the Indian pagans, and as for the Mahometans, who have the government in their hands, it is as much as a missionary's life is worth to attempt to make a convert of any of them: their labours are chiefly bestowed on the slaves and dependants of the European factories and settlements on these coasts, for the Protestants having few or no missionaries in India, permit the Popish Priests to make as many converts to Christianity as they can in their own way.

GOCH, E. lon. 5. 36. lat. 51. 36. a town of the D. of Cleve, in Germany, in the cir. of Westphalia, sit. 7 m. S. of Cleve, but I think sub. to the Dutch.

GODALMING, or GODLAMUND, W. lon. 40 min. lat. 51. 22. a market town of Surrey, 30 m. S. W. of London.

GOES, E. lon. 3. 45. lat. 51. 30. a port town of the United Provinces, capital of the island of S. Beveland, in the pr. of Zeland, 10 m. E. of Middleburg, and 13 m. W. of Bergen op-zome.

GOGMAGOG HILLS, 3 m. S. E. of Cambridge, remarkable for the intrenchments and other works cast up here, which make it conjectured that here was a Roman camp, or station; but others ascribe them to the Danes; probably it was possessed by both, as an advantageous camp which commands the country, and a fine dry carpet turf, equal to that of New-Market, where the Cantabrigians have an opportunity of taking the air in winter, an honest gentleman having left an estate to keep the road always good to the hills; and here Earl Godolphin has a hunting seat, where he keeps his race-horses; but it is most admired for his elegant library.

a city of Italy, in the D. of Mantua, sit. on the Mincio, or Menzo, 10 m. N. W. of Mantua.

GOLCONDA, a pr. of the Hither India, in Asia, bounded by the pr. of Orixa, on the N. by the bay of Bengal on the E. by Bishnagar on the S. and by Decan on the W. being about 300 m. long and 200 broad, not long since an independent K. and one of the richest in India, the diamond mines being sit. here; the large stones whereof incited the Great Mogul, Aureng-Zebe, to make a conquest of it, about 80. years ago, and it is now sub. to the Mogul.

GOLCONDA, E. lon. 77. lat. 16. This was the capital of the K. and residence of their Kings, till the Mogul made a conquest of it. The English, and other European nations, have settlements on this coast, from whence they import the finest calicoes and chints, as well as diamonds, the latter being usually purchased of the black merchants, who buy parcels of ground in the mines at a venture, and make the most of them; sometimes they find scarce any, and ruin their families by venturing too great sums, but oftner make their fortunes by this traffic. The town of Golconda lies about 200 m. N. W. of Fort St. George.

GOLDBERG, E. lon. 16. lat. 51. 6. a town of Silesia, in the D. of Lignitz, sit. 36 m. W. of Breslaw, in the possession of Prussia.

GOLD COAST of Guiney, in Africa, sit. between 2 degrees E. and 4 degrees W. lon. and in 5 degrees N. lat. where the English, French, and Dutch, have forts and settlements.

GOLDEN ISLAND, W. lon. 79. lat. 9. an island at the mouth of the river, or gulph of Darien, in the pr. of Terra Firma, in S. America, where the Scots attempted to make a settlement, in the beginning of the reign of William III. anno 1698; but finding it a barren spot of ground, they possessed themselves of an Isthmus on the opposite shore, on the continent, in a good soil, and naturally so strong, that the Spaniards could not have dispossessed them, if the English had not contributed to their misfortune.

GOLDINGEN, E. lon. 22. lat. 57. a city of Poland, in the D. of Courland, 60 m. W. of Mittau.

GOLETTA, E. lon. 10. lat. 36. a fortress and island in Africa, at the entrance of the bay of Tunis, and about 10 m. N. of that city, taken by Charles V. when he attempted the siege of Tunis, and held by the Christians several years after.

GOLNAW, E. lon. 15. 7. lat. 53. 40. a city of Brandenburg Pomerania, 15 m. N. E. of Stetin; sub. to Prussia.

GOMBRON, E. lon. 55. 30. lat. 27. 30. the greatest sea-port town in Persia, sit. in the pr. of Fars, or Faristan, on the strait, at the entrance of the gulph of Persia, opposite to the isle of Ormus, on the ruin whereof this town rose; and the English assisting the Persians in taking the isle of Ormus from the Portuguese, (then one of the greatest marts in the E.) the government allowed the English some extraordinary privileges, and half the customs of the port; and till very lately, a great sum in lieu of them. It stands about 30 m. N. E. of the Arabian coast, and about 300 m. S. E. of Schiras. Besides the native Persians, it is inhabited by English, Dutch, Portuguese, Arabs, Jews, Armenians, Indians, Banians, and several other nations, of which the Armenians and Banians are much the greatest traders. It is an unhealthy place, which occasions most of the inhabitants to remove into the country during the hot season, the winter being the time for traffic. The gains that are made by the English East-India company, in carrying the merchandize of the Armenians, Moors, Banians, &c. from Gombron to Surat, is one great branch of the company's profit; they seldom send a ship from Gombron to Surat, but she is as deep laden as she can swim with their their effects, besides passengers, and a vast quantity of treasure on board, sometimes of the value of two or three hundred thousand pounds. This traffic has been discontinued some time.

COMERA, W. lon. 18. lat. 28. one of the Canary islands, sit. W. of Teneriff, and 200 miles W. of cape Bajadore, in Africa; subject to Spain.

GOMORRO ISLANDS, sit. between the N. end of Madagascar, and Zanguebar, in Africa, and between 10 and 13 degrees of S. lat. the chief island Joanna, where E. India ships usually touch in their voyages to and from Bombay, and the Malabar or western coast of India.

GOOD HOPE CAPE. See BON ESPERANCE.

GOR, E. lon. 85. lat. 31. 15. cap. of the pr. of Gor, in the E. Indies, sit. 360 m. N. E. of Delly, sub. to the Mogul.

GORCUM, E. lon. 4. 50. lat. 51. 50. a city of the United Provinces, in the pr. of Holland, sit. on the river Waal, 22 m. E. of Rotterdam.

GOREE, E. lon. 3. 50. lat. 51. 55. capital of the island of Goree, in the United Provinces, and pr. of Holland, sit. 8 m. S. of the Briel.

GOREE, W. long. 17. 40. lat. 15. a small island near Cape Verd in Africa, in the possession of the French.

* GOREY, or NEWBOROUGH, a post town in the co. of Wexford, and pr. of Leinster, in Ireland, which returns two members to parliament. It stands 18 m. N. of Wexford, and 42 S. of Dublin. W. lon. 6. 30. lat. 52. 40.

GORGONA, W. lon. 79. lat. 3. 30. a small island in the Pacific Ocean, sit. 12 m. W. of the coast of Peru, in S. America; a high woody island, with a good harbour, and good water. Hither the Buccaneers, and other adventurers, resort to wait for prizes, and for wood and water; the Spaniards not having thought fit to plant a colony here, though they come hither sometimes after the rains, to search the rivulets for gold.

GORGONA, E. lon. 10. 50. lat. 43. 20. an island in the Mediterranean, sit. 25 m. W. of Leghorn and the coast of Tuscany.

GORITIA, or GORITZ, E. lon. 14. lat. 46. 20. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Austria, and D. of Carniola, sit. near the confines of Venice, 35 m. S. W. of Laubach.

pan, or Caglia, in the Morea, and near as much in breadth, viz. from the Adriatic sea to the Archipelago; generally a temperate, healthful country, and fruitful soil; eminent anciently for the wit and learning of the inhabitants, and for their great actions, and the numerous heroes it has produced; now sub. to the barbarous Turk, who has destroyed most of the fine cities it contained, and introduced a deluge of ignorance into those admired seats of learning and politeness.

GREENLAND WEST, according to our maps, extends from the meridian of London to 50 degrees of W. lon. and from 60 to 80 degrees of N. lat. Cape Farewell being the most southerly point of land. This country has a barbarous kind of inhabitants, and the Danes have some colonies here, claiming the dominion of this part of the world; and they have sent some missionaries thither, to make proselytes of the Pagan inhabitants, who have met with some success, they tell us. But the people seem to be so untractable generally, and the soil and climate so unkind, that no nation will ever endeavour to deprive the Danes of their possession 'tis presumed. The fishery on the coast seems to be all that's worth contending for; and this the Dutch make very free with, notwithstanding the representations and menaces of the Danes upon that head. See Groenland.

GREENWICH, a town of Kent, sit. on the river Thames, 5 m. E. of London; eminent for its royal and magnificent hospital, erected for decayed seamen who have served their country, and for its palace and most delightful park.

GRENOBLE, E. lon. 5. 28. lat. 45. 12. a city of France, capital of the pr. of Dauphine, sit. on the river Isere, 45 m. S. E. of Lyons, 36 m. S. W. of Chamberry, and 100 m. W. of Turin.

GROENLAND, or SPITZBERGEN, sit. between 10 and 30 degrees of E. lon. and between 77 and 82 degrees of N. lat. a cold miserable country, without inhabitants, and very few animals, or vegetables. The animals are chiefly deer, bears, foxes, wild-fowl, and fish. But fish and fowl forsake them in the winter, when there is a night of four months, and all waters frozen up. Here the Dutch fish for whales with great success, about Midsummer, and enjoy continual day, the sun being above the horizon all the 24 hours, for four months together. The Dutch have attempted to settle colonies here twice, but all their people perished in the winter. On the other hand, eight Englishmen were left here, by accident, all winter, without provisions, and yet found means to preserve themselves, till the shipping returned next summer. The English first began the whale-fishery here, but the Dutch have long since beaten them out of it. Whether East-Greenland be a continent or island, is uncertain, some imagine it to be contiguous to West-Greenland, but never any man made the experiment.

GROLE, E. lon. 6. 40. lat. 52. 12. a town of the United Provinces, in the pr. of Gelderland, sit. 21 m. E. of Zutphen.

GROTSKA, E. lon. 17. lat. 50. 40. a city of Silesia, capital of the D. of Grotka, sit. 30 m. S. of Breslaw.

GROTSKA, E. lon. 21. lat. 45. a town of European Turkey, in the pr. of Servia, sit. 20 m. S. E. of Belgrade; where a battle was fought between the Germans and Turks, anno 1739, in which the Germans were forced to retreat with loss.

GROYNE. See CORUNNA, a port of Spain.

G U

GRUBENHAGEN, E. lon. 9. 36. lat. 51. 45. a town and castle of Germany, in the cir. of lower Saxony, and D. of Brunswic, sit. 60 m. S. W. of Brunswic, and 45 S. of Hanover. There are mines of silver, copper, iron, and lead, in the adjacent mountains, which are covered with wood, some remains of the Hercanian forest. The people of this and the neighbouring country are all miners.

GUILLERSTRE, E. lon. 6. 20. lat. 44. 45. a city of France, in the pr. of Dauphine, sit. 9 m. N. E. of Embrun, and 14 S. W. of Briançon.

GUINEA coast, in Africa, is sit. between 15 E. and 15 W. lon. and between 4 and 10 degrees of N. lat. bounded by Nigritia, or Negroland, on the N. by unknown lands on the E. by Congo, and the Atlantic Ocean on the S. and by the same ocean on the W. comprehending, 1. the grain coast, from its producing chiefly Guinea grain; 2. the ivory coast, from the plenty of elephants teeth found there; 3. the gold coast, from its furnishing most gold; 4. the slave coast, from their meeting with the greatest number of slaves there; not but every one of these divisions produce some of the abovesaid articles. The English, Dutch, and French, and some other nations, have forts and factories on this coast, but the Dutch drove the Portuguese entirely from thence, after they had possessed the whole coast for 100 years and upwards. There are abundance of little Princes and States in the inland country, who are usually at war, and sell their prisoners to the Europeans for slaves; others make it their business to traffic to distant countries to purchase slaves, or steal them, and bring them down to the coast to make money of them. And there are thole that will sell their nearest relations, if they have an opportunity. The African traders do not only visit this coast, which is properly called Guinea, but all the W. coast of Africa, from Cape Verd at the mouth of the river Niger, in 15 degrees N. lat. to Cape Negro, in 18 degrees S. lat. where they meet with the same merchandise they do in Proper Guinea. And there are instances of the European merchants surprizing and carrying off whole families of Negroes by stealth, which is usually revenged on the next shipping that comes that way.

H A

United Provinces, in the pr. of Holland, sit. 4 m. E. of the ocean, and 12 W. of Amsterdam, near the lake, which from this town is called Haerlem Meer. The streets are wide and straight, and canals run through several of them, and there is a wall and other fortifications about the town, but of no great strength. They have large manufactories of silk, velvet, and linen here, as also of thread and tapes. Here Laurence Coster dwelt, to whom the Dutch ascribe the invention of printing.

H A G E N A U, E. lon. 7. 40. lat. 48. 45. a fortified town of Germany, in the lan. of Alsace, sit. 14 m. N. of Strasburg, frequently taken and retaken in the late wars.

H A G U E, or G R A V E N H A G U E, i. e. the Earl's Grove, E. lon. 4. lat. 52. 10. a town of the United Provinces, in the pr. of Holland, sit. 2 m. E. of the sea, 14 m. N. W. of Rotterdam, and 9 m. S. W. of Leyden, encompassed with fine meadows and groves, but no walls, and therefore esteemed a village, but one of the largest and most elegant in Europe, and enjoys all the privileges of a city of Holland, except that of sending representatives to the States. But here the States of the province of Holland, and the States General assemble, as well as the council of state, and their supreme courts of Justice; and here foreign ministers are admitted to audience, and all public affairs transacted; and here is a palace, in which there is an apartment for the Princes of Orange when Stadtholders; the chambers of the States General, and Provincial, and of the council of State. On the W. of the palace is a large area, surrounded by good houses, and planted with fine walks of trees, which makes it sometimes to be compared to St. James's park; and here every city of the United Provinces

vinces has a house for their respective deputies. But notwithstanding the place is very populous, and there is so great a resort of people of figure here, they have but two churches in it. On the N. side of the Hague is a walk planted with lime trees, two miles long, extending to the village of Scheveling, by the sea-side.

HAILBRON, E. lon. 9. lat. 49. 10. a city of Germany, in the cir. of Suabia, and D. of Wirtemberg, called Hailbron, or the Fountain of Health, on account of its excellent baths. It is situate on the river Necker, in a pleasant fruitful country, 28 m. N. of Stutgard, and 25 m. S. E. of Heidelberg; an imperial city, or sovereign state.

HAINAN, or Aynan, an island of China, in Asia, sit. between 107 and 110 degrees of E. lon. and between 18 and 20 degrees of N. lat. about 50 m. S. of the continent of China, and sub. to that K. It is of an oval form, about 300 m. in circumference, and has both gold and silver mines in it, and a pearl fishery; and there is a lake in the island which petrifies fish, it is said, but the instance given of it is a crab, the shell whereof was petrified, probably after the fish was dead.

HALTWESEL, W. lon. 2. lat. 55. a market town of Northumberland, sit. 32 m. W. of Newcastle.

HAM, E. lon. 7. 15. lat. 51. 35. a city of Germany, in the cir. of Westphalia, cap. of the co. of Mark, sit. on the river Lippe, 20 m. S. of Munster; sub. to Prussia.

HAMA. See APAMEA.

HAMADAN, E. lon. 47. 35. lat. 35. a city of Persia, in Asia, in the pr. of Eyrac Agem, 200 m. N. W. of Isphahan, and 220 N. E. of Bagdat.

HAMBURGH, E. lon. 9. 40. lat. 54. a great city and port town of Germany, in the cir. of Lower Saxony, and D. of Holstein, sit. on the river Elbe, 70 m. S. E. of the German Ocean, 40 m. S. W. of Lubeck, and 55 N. E. of Bremen. It stands on the N. side of the river Elbe, partly on islands, and partly on the continent; the territory sub. to it is small, but there are several large villages and noblemen's seats in it. The tide flows through the channels which separate the islands; and the town lies so low, that in some spring tides they receive great damage in their houses. They have spacious streets, and their houses are built of brick, very high, and make a grand figure. As the town is naturally strong, it is as well fortified by art also, as a town of that magnitude can well be; and it is exceeding populous, merchants from all parts of Europe resorting to it, from whence their goods are sent into the middle of the Empire by the Elbe. All provisions are plentiful here, and their beer has such a reputation, that they export a great deal of it. They have very elegant gardens and summer-houses for several miles about the town, on the land side, and on the water, ships come up to their doors, to deliver and take in their lading; the tide flowing 16 miles above the town. It is an imperial city, or sovereign state, governed by its own magistrates, subject only to the general laws of the Empire, as other Princes and states are; but the people have sometimes disputed the authority of the senate, of late years, and the Empire has interposed, and compelled them to put an end to their dissensions by force. And the K. of Denmark, as D. of Holstein, sometimes lays claim to the dominion of this city, and extorts money from them, for as he is possessed of the fortress of Gluckstat, towards the mouth of the river, it lies in his power to distress them pretty much. Their liberties also are sometimes endangered by religious disputes with the Roman Catholics, in whose behalf the Emperor sometimes interposes, as he did in the year 1708, commanding a body of troops to march into the city, and they were forced to buy their peace. They are at variance also with other denominations of Protestants, for the Lutheran persuasion is established in this city; and they will tolerate no others, whether Popish or Protestant, except in the chapels of foreign ministers, and will suffer none of their subjects to resort to these.

HAMCHEU, E. lon. 120. lat. 30. cap. of the pr. of Chekiam in China, in Asia, sit. on the river Cienton, 160 m. S. E. of Nanking.

HAMILTON,

H A

HAMILTON, W. lon. 3. 50. lat. 55. 40. a town of Scotland, in the co. of Clydesdale, sit. on the river Clyde, 11 m. S. E. of Glasgow; from whence the noble family of Hamilton take their name, and title of Duke.

HAMMONT, E. lon. 5. 32. lat. 51. 20. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Westphalia, and bish. of Liege, sit. near the confines of Brabant, 17 m. W. of Roermond, and 15 m. N. W. of Mayefick.

HAMPSHIRE, bounded by Berkshire on the N. Surrey and Suffex on the E. the English channel on the S. and Wiltshire and Dorsetshire, on the W. the chief towns Winchester, Southampton, and Portsmouth; and it comprehends the isle of Wight.

HAMPSHIRE-NEW, a pr. of New England, in North America, bounded by New Scotland on the N. by the Atlantic Ocean on the E. by the pr. of the Massachusetts Bay on the S. and by New York on the W. sub. to Great-Britain, and governed by a governor, council, and house of representatives: the governor and council appointed by the K. This country seems very proper for producing naval stores; a great part of it is appropriated by act of parliament, for furnishing masts, yards, &c. for the royal navy.

HAMPSTEAD, lat. 51. 34. a very desirable village, in Middlesex, 4 m. N. of London; admired for its air, its situation, its elegant buildings, and medicinal waters.

HAMPTON-COURT, W. lon. 20 min. lat. 51. 27. a town in Middlesex, sit. on the N. side of the Thames, 12 m. W. of London, and 2 W. of Kingston, in which is the finest palace the K. of Great-Britain possesses.

HAMPTON, W. lon. 2. 15. lat. 51. 38. a market town of Gloucestershire, sit. 12 m. S. of Gloucester.

HAMPTON, W. lon. 70. lat. 42. 35. a port town of New Hampshire, sit. 40 m. N. of Boston.

H A

the cir. of the Lower Rhine, and ter. of Wetteravia, is bounded by the lan. of Hesse-Cassel on the N. by the territories of the abbey of Fuld on the E. by the river Maine and the territories of Mentz on the S. and by the co. of Nassau on the W. being about 40 m. in length, and 15 in breadth; sub. to its Earl.

HANAU CITY, E. lon. 8. 45. lat. 50. 12. the capital of the co. of Hanau, is pleasantly sit. on the river Kunts, on the N. side of the river Maine, 13 m. E. of Francfort, and 12 m. N. W. of Aschaffenburg.

HANOVER, E. lon. 9. 45. lat. 52. 32. a city of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, capital of the King of Great Britain's German dominions, situate on the river Leina, 36 miles W. of Brunswick, is surrounded by a wall and other works of no great strength; nor is there any thing very elegant in the palace, or castle, which is rather commodious than magnificent, and the town generally ill built. The best edifice is the Roman Catholic church, which was assigned to the Papists on the late King's father being made the ninth Elector. That Prince also engaged to admit an apostolical vicar in his dominions from the Pope, and to permit him to reside in the city of Hanover; and divine service is performed here by the Roman Catholics, as in a cathedral, and their numbers are very considerable; but the established religion is the Lutheran. There is a court kept in this city in the King's absence, the same number of gentlemen, pages, domestics, and guards, as if he was present; and a French comedy acted three times a week, to which all people are admitted gratis; and there are frequently comforts, balls, and assemblies. The situation of Hanover is very agreeable, and there are several pretty seats in the neighbourhood. The Elector is absolute here, and in the rest of his German dominions; he is arch-treasurer of the Empire. His revenues are computed to amount to 400,000*l.* per. annum, and he is able to raise 30,000 men in all his territories, which besides Hanover, consists of the Duchies of Lunenburg and Zell, Bremen and Verden, and the D. of Lawenberg; most part of which lie between the rivers Weser and Elbe, and extend near 200 miles in length, from S. E. to N. W. and are from 150 to 50 in breadth; but then within these limits are the territories of several other Princes and states, as the bish. of Hildesheim, the D. of Brunswic Proper, Wolfembutte-Blanckenburg, the territories of the city of Bremen, and of several other Imperial cities. These dominions seem very well situated for a foreign trade, lying upon the German sea, and the two great rivers of the Elbe and the Weser; however, trade does not flourish here: either they have but few staple commodities, or men of substance do not apply themselves to foreign traffic. The country is pretty much over-run with wood, and the soil is not fruitful where it is not. Excepting timber, cattle, hogs, and some minerals, viz. a little silver, copper, lead, iron, vitriol, brimstone, quicksilver, and copperas; with mum, beer, and bacon, I don't find they have much else to traffic with.

HANSE-TOWNS, port towns of Germany, formerly confederated for their mutual defence, and protection of their trade, of which Lubec and Hamburg were the chief; they were all of them imperial cities, or sovereign states.

HARBOROUGH, W. lon. 1. lat. 52. 26. a town of Leicestershire, sit. 13 m. S. E. of Leicester.

HARBURGH, E. lon. 9. 30. lat. 53. 57. a port town of Germany, in the cir. of Lower Saxony, and D. of Lunenburg, sit. on the S. side of the river Elbe, opposite to Hamburg, and 30 m. N. W. of Lunenburg, said to be as well situated for a foreign trade as Hamburg, having the like advantage of importing and exporting their merchandize by the Elbe, and of vending their effects in the heart of Germany by that river.

which holds 800 hogheads, and is generally full of the best Rhenish wine, which every one was obliged to taste of who visited the late Elector's court, and some were not excused without swallowing such a dose as the Prince prescribed. There is a univ. in this city, and the Elector had one of the most valuable libraries in Europe; but either plundered and destroyed, or removed to the Vatican, and the Emperor's library at Vienna, when the Elector was driven from his dominions, anno 1621, and the Protestant inhabitants were cruelly treated. This city was sacked and plundered again by the French, in the year 1683; and in 1692, they almost demolished it, driving the people of the Palatinate from their dwellings, and obliging them to take refuge in foreign countries. Much the greatest part of the inhabitants of this city are Protestants, but their sovereign is a Papist, who using his Protestant subjects hardly, they complained to some Protestant powers, who procured their grievances to be redressed; but the late Elector was so exasperated at their applying to foreign powers, that he abandoned the city and went to reside at Manheim, which sufficiently mortified the Heidelburghers, as he carried most of the people of wealth and distinction with him. The present Elector, the young Pr. of Sultzbach, appears to be entirely in the French interest.

HELENA (ST.) W. lon. 6. 30. S. lat. 16. an island in the Atlantic ocean, sit. 1200 m. W. of the coast of Africa, and 1800 E. of the coast of S. America. It consists of one steep high rock, and looks like a castle in the middle of the sea; nor is there any possibility of landing but at one place, which is defended by a platform of 40 guns, beyond which is a fort, in which the governor resides, and adjoining to it is a pretty town of 40 or 50 houses, to which the natives come down with fresh provisions, when shipping arrives. The island is about 21 m. round, and the rock covered with about a foot of vegetable earth, produces corn, grapes, and all manner of fruits and vegetables almost, but no corn comes to perfection, being eaten up by the rats which burrow in the rock, and the climate is too warm to make wine. The natives have houses, plantations and fields, on the top of the rock, where they feed their cattle and manure their ground and gardens, with the produce whereof they supply the shipping which touches there, in their way from India. They are about 200 families, descended from English parents, who planted it by the assistance of the East-India company, after it was taken from the Dutch, in the reign of K. Charles II. and it is now sub. to the English East-India company.

The Landgrave of Hesse-Cassel, is an absolute Prince. His revenues are computed at 120,000 l. per annum, and he has generally a good body of forces on foot, which are so far from being a charge to him, that they are a great addition to his revenue, by the subsidies they bring in from sovereign powers. The 12,000 Hessians in British pay, for five years, were computed to be worth above a million sterling to him, and it is not to be doubted but he has made a great deal by French subsidies. As there are four branches of this family, viz. Hesse-Cassel, Homberg, Darmstat, and Rhinefield, they are of different persuasions in the point of religion. The subjects of Hesse-Cassel are Calvinists, as their late sovereign was, till he mounted the throne of Sweden, but he was compelled to turn Lutheran then, and abjure Calvinism. Prince Frederic, the eldest son of the present Landgrave, has embraced Popery. The Landgr. of Hesse-Homberg is a Calvinist, Darmstat is a Lutheran, and the Landgrave of Hesse-Rhinefield is a Papist. Some part of Hesse produces corn and wine, especially near the rivers Rhine, and Lahn, and they feed numerous flocks of sheep in their plains, whose wool is said to equal that of England, but great part of the country is forest, especially on the N. In their mountains are mines of copper and lead, which yield them considerable profit. This country is held to be the ancient seat of the Catti, mentioned by Tacitus.

HISPANIOLA, an island of America, in the Atlantic Ocean, is sit. between 67 and 74 degrees of W. lon. and between 18 and 20 degrees of N. lat. being about 420 m. long from E. to W. and 120 in breadth from N. to S. sit. 50 m. E. of Cuba, 70 m. E. of Jamaica, 60 m. W. of Porto-Rico, and 300 m. N. of Terra Firma; frequently called St. Domingo, from the capital city of that name. In the rivulets in the middle of the island, when the Spaniards arrived, there was found gold mix'd with the sands, but none is found at present. On the N. and S. side of the mountains are fine fruitful plains, well watered with rivulets, and liable to be overflowed in the rainy season towards autumn, and no place has more commodious harbours. There were no four-footed animals here, when the Spaniards discovered the island, but some ugly little dogs. They afterwards imported horses, oxen, sheep, asses, hogs, dogs, and other European animals, which multiplied exceedingly; the Spaniards deserting the island after the gold was exhausted, and they had destroyed all the natives, amounting to many hundred thousand men; hither the Buccaneers and other adventurers came afterwards to hunt the cattle, which were grown wild, and killed incredible numbers of them for their hides and tallow; and here the Buccaneers used to victual their ships. The French finding the island almost deserted, took possession of the N. W. part of it, which they still possess; whereupon the Spaniards returned and took possession of Domingo, and the S. part of the island again, to prevent other nations seizing of that, and interrupting their navigation to the continent. The country is pretty well stocked with timber, viz. oak, cedar, pine, brasil-wood, manchinea, the maho, and acoma tree, and such fruit-trees as are found between the Tropics; and both the French and Spaniards have plantations of sugar here, and have in a manner beaten the English out of that trade. Hispaniola also produces tobacco, and several gums and medicinal drugs. The capital city of St. Domingo was taken by Sir Francis Drake, the English admiral, anno 1586; but quit- ted again, as several other places were, in the reign of Q. Elizabeth; the court not thinking it good policy to keep them; but Cromwell was of another mind, and sent his generals, Pen and Venables, with the greatest force the English ever had in those seas, to possess themselves of St. Domingo, and being disappointed there, they afterwards subdued the island of Jamaica, anno 1654.

HOGUE, W. lon. 2. lat. 49. 50. a town and cape on the N. W. point of Normandy, in France, near which Admiral Rook burnt the French Admiral called the Rising Sun, with 12 more large men of war, the day after the victory obtained by Admiral Ruffel, near Cherburg, in May 1692.

HOHENLOE, or HOLACH county, sit. in the cir. of Franconia, where great disputes have lately happened between the count their sovereign, and his protestant subjects.

HOHIO, a river of N. America, which rises in the Apalachian mountains, near the confines of Carolina and Virginia, and running S. W. falls into the river Mississippi, and is by some reckoned the principal stream which forms the river Mississippi.

HOLDERNESS, a peninsula in the E. riding of Yorkshire, having the German sea on the E. and the Humber on the S. from whence the noble family of Darcy take the title of Earl.

HOLLAND, one of the United Provinces, sit. 100 m. E. of England, bounded by the German sea on the N. and W. by the Zuider sea, which separates it from West Friesland, Overysfel, and Guelderland on the E. and by Zeland and Utrecht on the S. about 100 m. long from N. to S. and scarce 30 m. broad, but enjoys the greatest foreign trade of any pr. in the world; and in point of strength and riches is equal to the other six of the United Provinces, though it has scarce any native, or staple commodities, or produce of its own, except some rich pastures, which furnish them with plenty of butter and cheese; and their seas and rivers, which furnish them with fish. They import every thing else from abroad, and yet have as great a variety of manufactures and merchandize as any nation whatever. It is a magazine, or storehouse, where the produce of every country is lodged, bought in very cheap, and often sold out very dear, to the same countries, sometimes, from whence they purchased them. Their fleet, if not their army, has been a match for almost any power in Europe.

HOLLAND, the S. E. division of Lincolnshire, a marshy country; gives the title of Earl to the noble family of Rich.

HOLM, W. lon. 3. lat. 54. 45. a port and market town of Cumberland, HOLSTEIN, a D. of Germany, in the cir. of Lower Saxony, is bounded by Sleswic, or S. Jutland, on the N. by the Baltic sea, and the D. of Saxlawenburg on the E. by the river Elbe, which separates it from the Duchies of Bremen and Lunenburg, on the S. and by the German sea on the W. being about 100 m. long, and 50 broad, a pleasant fruitful country, and extremely well situated for trade, as it lies on the Baltic and German seas. Their trade has been greater, when the Hanse-towns flourished, the chief of them being situated here; but there are still very considerable ports in this pr. particularly Hamburgh and Lubec. The K. of Denmark and the D. of Holstein-Gottorp have a joint dominion in great part of it, and of some towns and territories each of them is sole sovereign. There are also some imperial cities and sovereign states, which are governed by their respective magistrates; but the religion of the whole country is Lutheran. The K. of Denmark, as D. of Holstein, is a Prince of the Empire, as well as the D. of Holstein-Gottorp.

HOLYHEAD, W. lon. 4. 45. lat. 53. 26. an island and cape of the co. of Anglesey, in the Irish channel, where people usually embark for Dublin, in Ireland.

HOTTENTOTS COUNTRY, sit. between 15 and 35 degrees of E. lon. and between 23 and 35 degrees of S. lat. being the most southern promontory of Africa, comprehending the Cape of Good Hope, and the rest of the Dutch settlements there. It is a mountainous, but exceeding fruitful country, abounding in corn, wine, pasture, fruits, cattle, fish, fowl, and whatever is produced in the other quarters of the world, in the greatest perfection, where it is cultivated by the Dutch; but the natives neither plow nor plant the ground, but live chiefly by grazing of cattle, and what they take in hunting or fishing. The Hottentot nations, who inhabit this southern promontory, are sixteen in number; the Dutch suffer the natives to be governed by their own laws and customs, being very useful to their settlements, in furnishing them with cattle, and serving them in their husbandry, &c. for which they give them tobacco, wine, and brandy, and such provisions as they desire, in return. The Hottentot men are of a moderate stature; the women small, their complexion black; and in their thick lips, flat noses, and short hair, they resemble the negroes, tho' they are not so black when they are born, but take a great deal of pains to make their children so with grease and foot. The women have a callous flap, or skin, which hangs over the pudenda; the men have a cap of grease, foot, and cow-dung, mixed together, on their heads in summer, and in winter have flat caps of half dried skins; and they wear mantles, consisting of undressed sheep-skins, tied with thongs about their necks, which serve them for beds at night, and winding-sheets when they die: Their chiefs wear tygers skins. They conceal their nudities with a square piece of raw leather, of two hands breadth; their breasts, legs, and thighs have no covering. The women wear caps of raw leather, the crown a little raised, and a sheep-skin mantle, like the men; their apron something longer, and about their legs they wrap thongs of raw hides, to the bigness of a jack-boot, and a pouch with provision always hangs about their necks. They adorn themselves with rings, and thin plates of brass, tinsel, glass, and beads, and make their bodies shine with melted grease and fat instead of oil. They chuse the guts of animals rather than other meat, which they eat half raw, without without washing. They seldom kill their cattle, living chiefly on their milk, with roots, herbs, and fruits, unless at festivals, and then only on such as die of themselves. Their drink was milk and water, or butter-milk, 'till the Dutch introduced strong liquors, which they are very fond of. Their houses are round huts consisting of one room, covered with hides, or mats, where all ages and sexes lie promiscuously, tho' every man has his own wives, seldom above three. A circle of these huts upon a common, is called a kraal, or Hottentot's town, but looks more like a camp, and, like our tents, they remove them from one part of the country to another, when they want fresh pasture for their cattle. Every nation has a sovereign Prince, whose title is hereditary, but then he has a great council, which consists of the chiefs of every kraal, or town, of his nation, without whose concurrence he does nothing of consequence; and the chief of every kraal has an hereditary right to his command; but neither their Kings or chiefs have any revenue, but subsist on their own stock of cattle, and what they take in hunting. Their arms are a spear, or half pike, a bow and bearded arrows, and a dart of a foot long. They never fight on horseback, but discipline their bulls to run at, and disorder an enemy.

They expose their fathers in the fields to be devoured by wild beasts, when they become infirm and useless, as they do their female children when they have more than one at a birth. As to their religion, they believe a God who created the heaven and earth, and that he is good, but they build him no temples, nor worship him, or have any images, or representations of him; but at the appearance of the new moon, and at the full moons, they assemble, dance in circles, and make great rejoicings, throwing themselves into surprising distortions of body, stare wildly at the heavens, crossing their foreheads with a red stone, and invoking the moon to be propitious, and send them seasonable weather, and pasture for their cattle. They continue dancing, shouting, and prostrating themselves on the earth the whole night, and part of the next day, with some short intervals, resting only when they are quite spent with the violence of the action. They also worship their departed heroes, and consecrate woods, mountains, and rivers to their memory, which when they pass by, they put up a short prayer to the deity of the place, and sometimes dance about it. They have one rite peculiar to these people, which is the depriving the males of the left testicle at 8 or 9 years of age; at the performance whereof a sheep is sacrificed, and eaten by the company invited to it. They sacrifice also, and have festivals on a victory, and other joyful occasions, and upon the removal of their kraal, or town (as they always do upon the death of any person in it) they sacrifice a sheep. 'Tis evident they believe a future state, and the immortality of the soul, by the worship they pay to their departed heroes, and by the fears they entertain of their friends appearing to them after death; which is the reason of removing their camp, believing the dead never haunt any place but where they died.

HUDSON'S BAY, W. lon. 80. N. lat. between 51 and 63. sit. in the N. part of Canada, in N. America, where the English Hudson's bay company have several forts and settlements, and traffic with the natives for beaver-skins, and other skins and furs, to a very great value, being one of the most gainful trades our merchants have. [They export annually about 3,000 l. value, and their half-yearly sales are about 25,000 l. Eight or nine merchants have ingrossed nine tenths of the stock.] But if the French in the neighbourhood should attack their settlements, neither their garrisons or fortifications would be able to make long resistance.

HUDSON'S STRAITS, in North America, lie between 65 and 75 degrees of W. lon. and between 60 and 64 degrees of N. lat. being the passage out of the Atlantic Ocean into Hudson's bay.

HUNGARY, a kingdom sit. between 16 and 23 degrees of E. lon. and between 45 and 49 degrees of N. lat. bounded by the Carpathian mountains, which divide it from Poland on the N. by Transilvania and Walachia on the E. by the river Drave, which separates it from Sclavonia on the S. and by Austria and Moravia on the W. It is one continued plain of 300 m. and upwards wards from Presburgh, the capital to Belgrade, divided by the river Danube into the Upper and Lower Hungary.

There are no hills but the Carpathian mountains, which divide it from Poland, and in these are abundance of rich mines of gold, silver, copper, iron, vitriol, sulphur, and salt; the rest of the country is exceeding fruitful, abounding in corn, wine, and rich pastures, replenished with herds of cattle; and their numerous lakes and rivers afford them plenty of fish and fowl; but the country is very unhealthful, occasioned by a boggy sulphurous soil, and the sudden changes of the weather: a kind of pestilence visits this country once in three or four years, and it is called the grave of the Germans on another account, many thousands of them having perished here by the sword as well as sickness, while they contended for the dominion of it with the Turks the last 200 years.

The constitution of the government was a limited monarchy, and the crown elective, until the house of Austria found means to influence the States so far as to render the Sovereign absolute, and the crown hereditary, which is now possessed by the Empress Queen.

The established religion is popery, but half the people are protestants, who have suffered a very long and severe persecution from the house of Austria, and have been thereby frequently provoked to join the Turks, the French, and other enemies of that house: but in the late war they were the principal support of the Empress.

Their troopers are called Hussars, and their foot Heydukes: and the Insurgents are a militia that are raised on the last necessity.

No country is better furnished with baths and mineral waters, and the buildings of those at Buda were esteemed the most magnificent of any baths in Europe, while that city was under the dominion of the Turk.

H U

Game is so plentiful here, that it is the common food of the peasants; but with all these advantages, the common people are in a state of vassalage, to their respective lords, and the gentry have lost their ancient privileges.

America; the island lying E. and W. being about 140 m. long, and 60 broad, a chain of mountains running thro' the middle of it from E. to W. consisting of rocks, or stiff clay, but covered with good timber. On the S. side of the island are savannahs, or level meadow grounds, cleared of wood, and fit for pasture. There are an hundred rivers, or rather torrents, descending precipitately from the mountains, and carrying down with them stones and timber;

Amber; none of them navigable. The wind sets on the shore almost all day in every part of the island, and off the shore in the night. Earthquakes sometimes happen here; the town of Port Royal was almost swallowed up by one in the year 1692. In the mountains it rains and thunders almost every day; it sometimes hails here, but they never see frost or snow. Their rainy seasons, in the flat country, are in May and October, when they continue a fortnight; and these are the seasons for planting. The English inhabitants are much decreased of late years; there are four Negroes to one white man. Of the blacks there may be an 100,000, and there is a mixed breed of Malattoes and Mestise. The English eat much the same food as in England, and some other sorts, as yams, potatoes, rice, bread of Indian corn, and cassavi root, turtle, or tortoise. and the tropical fruits, such as guava's, plantains, cocoa-nuts and pine-apples; their wheat flour is all imported. Their liquors are water, Madeira wine, rum punch, and some liquors made of plantains and other fruits. The produce of the island is chiefly sugar, but they have plantations of coffee, of the cocoa, or chocolate nut, indico and tobacco, Jamaica pepper, cotton, woods for dying, and the mahogany and manchineel wood, salt, ginger, medicinal drugs and gums. The water is unwholesome near the sea-coasts, and has destroyed thousands of English seamen at Port-Royal. The common distempers of the country are fevers, fluxes and the dry gripes. This island was first discovered by Columbus, anno 1493; and the Spaniards continued possessed of it above 150 years, in which time they destroyed most of the natives. The English made themselves masters of it with very little opposition, in the year 1656, under the command of Pen and Venables, after they had been disappointed in their attempt upon Hispaniola.

JAPAN islands, sit. between 130 and 144 degrees of E. lon. and between 30 and 40 degrees of N. lat. the largest whereof, called Japan, (sometimes Nippon) gives its name to all the rest, and is about 600 m. long, and from 100 to 150 broad, the chief town whereof is Jeddo. The largest island next, is Sacock, parted by a very narrow channel from Japan, lying S. of it, and is about 500 m. round, the capital city Bongo. The third island in magnitude, is Tonfa, divided from Japan and Sacock by narrow channels, and is near 400 m. in circumference, the capital city Tonfa; besides these are a great many lesser islands about them sub. to Japan. These islands are all sub. to one sovereign, or emperor, who has 50 or 60 vassal Princes, or Kings, as they are called, under his dominion, and can depose or punish them as he sees fit. They are obliged to attend the court one half of the year, and have each of them a house within the verge of the King's palace, at Jeddo. The eldest sons of the nobility also, have their education at court, where they are kept till they are preferred to some post. This prince is attended by 5 or 6,000 of his guards when he goes out, and keeps up an army of 20,000 horse, and 100,000 foot, though to what purpose is not easy to conceive, having no enemies to contend with, unless he suspects his vassals may prove malcontents. His revenues are greater than those of any monarch upon earth, and even than all of them together, if we might credit those who have written of this country; and answerable to this immense revenue, do they make the riches of the country, pretending that their palaces are covered with gold plates instead of tiles. Such accounts as these are given us by the Portuguese, who first traffick'd with this country, and by some of our country-men, who traded to Japan 150 years ago; but these and all other Christians have been banished Japan these last hundred years on pretence of a conspiracy the Portuguese and their Japan proselytes had formed against the state. The Dutch only were admitted to trade thither afterwards; and they were permitted this privilege, 'tis said, on declaring they were no Christians, and then trampling upon the crosses to confirm the Japanese in this opinion. And the Japanese are so suspicious even of the Dutch, that when any of their ships arrive, they take away their guns, sails and helm, and carry them on shore till they are ready to sail; and the Dutch factors, who are shut up in a little peninsula, during the 8 months their shipping is absent annually, are not suffered to have so much as a lighted candle in their houses, in the night time. The goods the Dutch carry to Japan, are spices, sugars, silks, woollen and linen cloth, elephants teeth, and haberdashery wares; for which they receive in return, gold, silver, fine copper, cabinets, and other japan and lacquered wares. The Japanese use neither tables, beds, or chairs, but sit and lie upon carpets and mats, as the Turks do.

JAPARA, E. lon. 110. S. lat. 6. a port town of the island of Java, in the East-Indies, in Asia, sit. 250 m. E. of Batavia. JAVA, an island, of the E. Indies, in Asia, sit. between 102 and 113 degrees of E. lon. and between 5 and 8 degrees of S. lat. being about 700 m. long from E. to W. and 100 broad, the island of Borneo lying on the N. the straits of Baly on the E. the Indian ocean on the S. and the straits of Sunda and Sumatra on the W. the chief town Batavia, or Jacatra. This island is most part of it under the dominion of the Dutch, and besides the native Javans, is inhabited by Chinese, Malaysians, (natives of Malacca, or their descendants) Amboynese Topasses, (a mixed breed) Bugasses, (whose ancestors came from the island of Macassar) Tymoreans, and many other people, who have been brought from distant countries and islands by the Dutch; out of which several nations, the Dutch have formed a body of 10 or 12,000 regular troops, besides their European forces, to keep their subjects in awe. By transplanting such numbers, they peopled their colonies in Java, and secured the countries they had subdued, against any insurrections, or conspiracies, that might be formed against them in those islands and countries; for having the most considerable families in their power, which they had spared from those massacres they had committed in the spice islands and elsewhere, it was presumed the remainder would not have the spirit, or power, to attempt any thing against their tyrants. Besides land forces, the Dutch have such a fleet of men of war in their ports in Java, that they command all the coast of Asia and Africa, and give laws to the Europeans who trade in those seas, as well as to the natives, not suffering the Europeans to trade with any of the Indian nations but those they see fit. They have actually excluded the English, and all other nations, from those countries where the fine spices grow, and from all commerce with the great islands of Java and Macassar, or Celebes, and the continent of Malacca. And by their fleets and garrisons near the straits of Malacca and Sunda, can at any time exclude all nations from the trade to China. The island of Java is mountainous in the middle, but near the shore it is a level country, and encumbered with bogs and morasses pretty much, except near Batavia, Bantam, and other Dutch colonies, where the lands are well drained and cultivated. The only corn almost that grows in the country is rice. They have also plantations of sugar, coffee and tobacco; and their kitchen gardens produce peas, beans, roots, sallads, melons, &c. They have also abundance of grapes, but the climate is too hot for wine. They have cocoes, mangoes, oranges, and such other fruits as grow between the Tropics, and a great deal of good oak, cedar, redwood, and other timber. The Dutch levy what taxes they please on the inhabitants, but the Chinese who were some of the expertest merchants on that side of the world, brought them in the most considerable revenue, by the duties and customs they paid, and yet grew vastly rich and powerful, as the Dutch gave out, and entered into conspiracies to dispossess them of the island, and that they, the Dutch, had no way to secure themselves but by a general massacre of the Chinese, which they put in execution, in the year 1740. But the Dutch in Europe, pretended to be alarmed.

larmed at the barbarity of the action, and sent orders to Batavia, to try the governor for the fact. And indeed it seems strange, that when the Dutch had a fortified town, and the Chinese had delivered up all their arms, that the governor should still apprehend himself in danger from naked unarmed men: it is reported, that not only the governor, but many of the soldiers and others, who were concerned in this terrible massacre, (wherein 20,000 men, women and children, were destroyed) grew immensely rich by the plunder of the Chinese, which made it suspected that the wealth of that colony was the grand inducement the Dutch had to fall upon them.

as that of Norway, under the same parallel, but affords pasture for horses, cows, and other cattle, and the natives are very long-liv'd, a strong hardy race, who cloathe themselves with the skins of beasts; whales and other fish are very plenty on the coast, which makes the Dutch come and fish here sometimes; though the Danes claim the sole dominion of these seas. Their mountains are always covered with snow, and yet there are three Volcano's on them, from whence there continually issue flames and smoak. The largest of them is upon mount Hecla, which cannot be approached without danger. The Danes have several colonies on the coasts of this island, and have persuaded some of the natives, who are an honest tractable people, to profess Christianity, but those who live at a distance from their settlements, are still Pagans. The Danes and some other nations, trade with the natives for their hides, tallow, butter, whale-oil and bone, dried fish, and sea-horse teeth, which are esteemed equal to ivory.

JERSEY, W. lon. 2. 20. lat. 49. 20. an island of the English channel, sit. 15 m. W. of the coast of Normandy, in France, and 80 m. S. of Portland, in Dorsetshire, sub. to Great-Britain. It is about 30 m. in circumference, of difficult access, on account of the rocks, sands, and forts, erected for its defence. It contains 12 parishes, the chief town St. Hilary, in the S. of the island. There is more fruit than corn in the island, and it is well watered with rivulets. It lies extremely well for trade in time of peace, and to annoy the French with their privateers in time of war. They have a pretty woollen manufactory of stockings, caps, &c. and they are descended from French ancestors, and are still governed by the Norman laws. The courts of England have no jurisdiction here.

JERSEY NEW, in N. America, may be bounded by a line drawn from the river Delawar, to Hudson's river, in 41 degrees N. lat. on the N. by Hudson's river, which divides it from New-York, and by the Atlantic Ocean on the E. by the same ocean on the S. and by Delawar bay and river, which separate it from Pennsylvania, on the W. lying between 74 and 76 degrees of W. lon. and between 39 and 41 degrees of N. lat. being about 140 m. in length from N. to S. and 60 in breadth from E. to W. and usually subdivided into E. and W. Jersey, though the whole now constitutes but one royal government, i. e. the K. appoints the governor and council, and the freemen chuse the members of the representative body of the commons; and sometimes the governor of New-York is governor of New-Jersey, but by a distinct commission; the chief towns are Burlington, and Perth-Amboy, and Elizabeth town. The produce of the Jerseys is wheat, Indian corn, peas, beans, barley, oats, horses, black cattle, hogs, furs, skins, and pipe staves. To the English islands in the West-Indies they send bread, corn, flower, horse corn, salted beef, pork and fish, for which they receive rum, sugar, and other produce of those islands in return. They trade to England also with their furs, skins, and other produce, taking furniture and cloathing in return. The shipping of New-York and Jersey, also take whales, and send the oil and bone to England.

JERUSALEM, E. lon. 36. lat. 32. the capital city of Judea, or Palestine, in Asiatic Turkey, sit. 30 m. E. of the Levant, or Mediterranean Sea, 90 m. S. of Damascus, 300 m. S. of Aleppo, and 230 m. N. E. of Grand Cairo. It stands on a high rock, with steep ascents on every side, except on the N. surrounded with a deep valley, which is again encompassed with hills. The city is at present 3 m. in circumference, and has a little altered its situation; for mount Calvary, appropriated to the execution of criminals, was formerly without the walls, but has now drawn the city round about it, and stands in the middle of modern Jerusalem, and Mount Sion is left without the walls, which stood near the center; the walls and fortifications seem very antique however. The private buildings mean, and but thinly inhabited. The resort of Pilgrims hither only renders it considerable at present; and the accommodating them with lodgings and provisions, is the chief business of the inhabitants. For the protection of the Pilgrims against the Arabs, and to receive the tribute exacted of them, a Bascha always resides here with a guard of Janizaries. The church of the Holy Sepulchre, which the Pilgrims chiefly come to visit, stands upon mount Calvary, and is a magnificent fabric, in which every Christian nation almost has a peculiar chapel. Over the middle of the temple there is a cupola, open in the middle, at which it receives the light, and under this open cupola stands the glorified sepulchre. There are also in this church, 12 or 13 places consecrated on account of some particular actions done in them, relating to the death and resurrection of Christ; as the place where he was nailed to the cross, the place where the soldier stood who pierced his side, where the angels appeared to the women after the resurrection, &c. and on Good-Friday annually, our Saviour's passion is solemnized in this church, and all the parts of it acted; such as the nailing him to the cross; crowning him with thorns, taking the body down from the cross; and here is seen the cleft of the rock, which was made by the earthquake, when our Saviour expired.

INDIA PROPER, (the country first so denominated) is sit. between 66 and 92 degrees of E. lon. and between 7 and 40 degrees of N. lat. being bounded by Ubec Tartary and Thibet on the N. by another part of Thibet, the kingdoms of Afem, Ava and Pegu, on the E. the bay of Bengal and the Indian Ocean on the S. and by the same ocean and Persia on the W. being about 2000 m. in length from N. to S. and 1500 m. in breadth from E. to W. where broadest, tho' the southern part of the peninsula is not 300 m. broad; all the countries within these limits being now sub. or tributary to the Great Mogul. It is frequently called Indostan, a name supposed to be derived from the river Indus, on its western frontiers. It is also called Mogulstan, from the imperial family now upon the throne, who derive their pedigree from Tamerlane, a Mogul, or Mogul Tartar. It was the Emperor Aurengzebe who made a conquest of Golconda, Vissapour, and all the southern kingdoms of India, about the year 1685.

The Europeans had very little intercourse with India till the year 1498, when the Portuguese discovered the way thither by sea, round the Cape of Good Hope, and they enjoyed that traffic without a rival till the year 1600, when the English and Dutch put in for a share of it; and these three nations have had their forts and factories on the continent of India ever since; but the Dutch have driven both the other from the Spice Islands, and monopolized that trade these 100 years past. The produce of the continent of India, and what the Europeans import from thence, is chiefly chints, calicoes, muslins, some silk, and pepper, and diamonds, which are purchased by most nations with silver, but the Dutch frequently barter spices for them, which makes the India trade doubly advantageous to them. The northern part of India is a temperate, healthful climate; the southern countries too hot, especially when the hot winds blow in April and May, but they are refreshed with breezes from the sea constantly, about noon; for in the night, and early in the morning, the wind sets off the shore, and blows on the shore the rest of the day. The periodical rains visit them in June, and continue 'till October, which is the season for planting and sowing their lands towards the S. where they have scarce any grain but rice. In the northern countries they have good wheat, and almost all manner of grain; and in one part or other of the Mogul's dominions every thing is produced that can render life desirable, except liberty; for though the subjects that are at a distance from court live as easily as under most monarchies, yet the Mogul is an absolute Prince, and can command their lives and fortunes at pleasure. The Blacks inhabit the southern part of India, and are a people lately conquered; the complexion of those in the northern provinces is either white or an olive; these are the governing part of the nation, and of the Mahometan religion; the rest are Pagans, and worship idols of various shapes, some very monstrous, part human, and part beast or fish, and scarce any living animal but they adore, particularly the ox and the monkey. The Mogul's forces are computed to amount to 300,000 horse, some have called them a million, besides the forces of the Rajas, or tributary Princes, who are obliged to attend the Mogul with their respective troops. In the fair season, the Mogul usually takes the field, and makes a tour about part of his dominions, and all manner of tradesmen, merchants, and mechanics, follow the camp, scarce any body is left in the great towns; there are markets of all kinds in the camp, as in the best regulated towns; and when the time of the rains approach, they return into the towns again.

again. The Mogul's annual revenue is computed to amount to between 40 and 50 millions sterling, arising by the produce of the soil (of which he is proprietor, as well as sovereign, and every one is obliged to pay such a rent as is required by his commissaries) by duties and customs on merchandize, by forfeitures and escheats, being heir to all his great officers, and by presents, which are expected from all his governors, and those who have a dependance on him; and lastly, by the produce of the diamond mines of Golconda, which is not inconsiderable.

INDIA beyond Ganges, lies between 92 and 104 degrees of E. lon. and between the Equator and 30 degrees of N. lat. bounded by Tibet and Bouton on the N. by China, Tonquin, and Cochin-China, on the E. by the Indian Ocean on the S. and by the Hither India, the bay of Bengal, and the straits of Malacca, on the W. being near 2000 m. in length from N. to S. but of a very unequal breadth; in which limits are comprehended the Kingdoms of Asem, Ava, Fegu, Laos, Siam, Cambodia, and Malacca, governed by as many Indian Princes; only the Dutch have usurped the dominion of Malacca. The government in these countries is monarchical, but what the revenues or forces of the respective Princes may be, is uncertain; we having but very little intercourse with most of them, except near the coast. Great part of this country lying so near the Equator, would be intolerably hot, if it were not for the periodical rains which overflow the country, when the Sun is vertical; and they were not refreshed every day by the sea breezes. But then they have this inconveniency, that they are forced to build their houses upon high wooden pillars, and live in their upper rooms during the flood, which lasts 4 or 5 months, and can have no communication with one another but by boats, in the flat country. The complexion of the natives of all the Further India, is an olive colour; their religion Paganism, of various sects. There is no country where there are such numbers of elephants as in the Further India, and consequently they must have a great deal of ivory. Here also our merchants meet with gold and precious stones, canes, opium, and such other articles as are usually found in countries within the Tropics. But there is no other corn than rice, which they plant in the beginning of the rains, and the flood increasing as it grows, they have no occasion to water their fields, and when the waters retire, it is the time of their harvest.

JORDAN, a river of Asiatic Turkey, in the pr. of Judea, or Palestine, rising in mount Libanus, in the N. runs S. quite through the country, a course of about 150 m. forming two lakes; the first, which is almost dry in summer, called the sea of Galilee, and the lake of Tiberias, and sometimes the lake of Genezareth, being about 12 m. long, and 8 broad; the other called the Dead, or Salt sea, where Sodom and Gomorrah stood, is about 70 m. long, and 16 broad; but the ordinary channel of the river Jordan is not above 20 yards broad at present, and discharges itself into the lake called the Dead sea.

IPSWICH, E. lon. 1. 16. lat. 52. 12. a borough and port town of Suffolk, sit. on the river Orwel, 24 m. S. E. of Bury; sends two members to parliament.

IRELAND, an island of the Atlantic Ocean, sit. between 5 and 10 degrees of W. lon. and between 51 and 56 degrees of N. lat. being bounded by the Northern Ocean on the N. by St. George's channel, which divides it from Great-Britain, on the E. and by the Atlantic and Western ocean on the S. and W. being 250 miles long, and 150 broad, distant from Holy-head, in North Wales, 50 m. and from Galloway, in Scotland, 15 m. [It is the largest island in Europe, except Great-Britain. It is situated between the middle parallel of the 8th clime (where the longest day is 16 hours and a half) and the 24th parallel, or end of the 10th clime, (where the longest day is 17 hours and a half) so that London and Kinsale are in the same parallel, and so are Newcastle upon Tyne and Londonderry. The southermost promontory of Ireland, which is Missen head, is in near the same parallel of latitude with Dover; and the northernmost part of Ireland is equal to Brainton, 20 m. S. of Berwick; and suitable to this situation, the climate is so temperate, that neither the heat in summer is so scorching, as to drive the inhabitants to seek the shade, nor the cold in winter so sharp and chilling, as to oblige them to wear furs, as in more northern climates, or to force them to the use of flices; but at all times they enjoy a gentle kind of warmth, by reason of the pleasantness and temperate disposition of the air, which, as Speed observes, is most delightful and wholesome; and so pure, that no venomous animal is found in it. The area, or superficial content of the whole kingdom is, by the nearest computation from survey, found to be 11,042,642 Irish plantation acres, or 17,927,864 acres of English statute measure; and is held to bear proportion to England and Wales as 18 to 30.] It is divided into four large provinces, viz. Ulster on the North, Leinster on the E. Munster on the S. and Connaught on the W. It is a fruitful, level country, well watered with lakes and rivers, too much encumbered with bogs and morasses, but where these are drained they make very good meadow ground; and there is this convenience in the softness of the soil, that they may cut canals, and open a communication by water, from one part of the kingdom to the other by lakes, rivers, and canals, as they do in Holland. The soil seems to be richer in Ireland than in England, and produces corn, pasture, hemp, and flax in abundance. Their cattle abound to that degree, that they furnish France, Flanders, Spain, Portugal, and the West-Indies, with their beef and butter; and English ships are frequently victualled here. They abound also in excellent wool, which would bring them in treasure enough, if they were suffered to manufacture it, and export their cloth. And whether whether the English have done themselves any service by suppressing this manufacture in Ireland, and suffering the French to undersell us, and run away with the woollen trade in foreign markets, is a question that may easily be answered. Their linen manufacture indeed is come to great perfection, and vastly increased. This country is exceedingly well situated for trade, and has a great many secure and commodious harbours. They want only a little countenance and encouragement from England, to make them a great and wealthy people. Their laws differ but little from those of England, any more than their courts of justice, but they must be approved by the K. of Great Britain in council; and an act of the English parliament will repeal, or alter, any of their laws. They can appeal also from a decree of their courts, to the house of peers in Great Britain. The members of the commons keep their seats in parliament for life, unless the King dissolves them, or there happen a demise of the crown. The Lord Lieutenant, or Lord Deputy, and council, are appointed from time to time by the King; and there is usually a body of 12,000 men kept in pay on the Irish establishment, but scarce any of the natives of that country amongst them. They live in barracks, and are not quartered on the public houses, as in England, except on a march. As to religion six parts in seven of them are Papists, but connived at: there are also a multitude of Dissenters in the N. of Ireland. The established church is the same as in England, governed by 4 archbishops and 18 bishops, and their clergy are generally better provided for than in England. Dublin is the only university in the Kingdom, and that consists of one college, in which there are about 600 students of all sorts. In this fruitful country the common people are so hard put to it to get a livelihood, that many thousands of them have transported themselves of late years to the American plantations. Their nobility and men of fortune usually reside in London, and take but little care of their country: they screw up their tenants to the highest rack rents, till they break them, and spending all the produce of their estates abroad, their native country remains in a languishing condition. There are some noble exceptions, 'tis true, where gentlemen have applied the produce of their fortunes to the encouragement of their manufactures and improvement of that excellent soil, whose example may possibly induce others to try what improvement may be made for the service of their country, and their own particular advantage. [The four provinces, counties, cities, boroughs, bishops sees, post and market towns, mountains, lakes, rivers, &c. will be found dispersed, under their proper articles, in the present edition, where will be found a more compleat geographical description of this country than hath hitherto been published.]

IROQUOIS, or the five Indian nations in N. America, in alliance with the English, are bounded by Canada on the N. by the English plantations of New York and Pennsylvania on the E. and S. and by the lake Ontario, or Frontenac, on the W. They have long served as a barrier to the northern British colonies, against the French, and their Indians of Canada; but, 'tis said, the French have lately prevailed on the Mohawks, one of the five nations, to desert their ancient allies, the English. [Those who live about the lake Ontario, and river St. Lawrence, are called the northern Iroquois, and are in amity with the French. The five nations consider them as deserters.]

IRTIS, a great river which runs from S. to N. thro' Russia, falls into the river Oby, and makes part of the boundary between Asia and Europe.

ISTRIA, a peninsula sit. in the North part of the gulph of Venice, bounded by Carniola on the N. and on the E. S. and W. by the sea. The chief town Cabo de Istria; sub. to Venice.

ITALY, is sit. between 7 and 19 degrees of E. lon. and between 38 and 47 degrees of N. lat. bounded by Switzerland and the Alps, which separate it from Germany, on the N. by the gulph of Venice on the E. by the Mediterranean sea on the S. and by the same sea and the Alps, which separate it from France, on the W. and, if we include Savoy, which lies, indeed, on the W. side of the Alps, between Italy and France, we must extend it a degree further W. This is usually described, however, with Italy, as it is contiguous to Piedmont, and has the same sovereign, being a pr. of the K. of Sardinia's dominions. Italy is said to resemble a boot, and is in length, from the N. W. to the S. E. 600 m. and upwards, the breadth is very unequal; in the N. which may be called the boot top, it is 400 m. broad from E. to W. in the calf of the leg, or middle, it is about 120 broad, and towards the S. about the instep, 80 miles broad, and comprehends the following countries, or subdivisions. 1. In the N. of Italy are the Duchies of Savoy, Piedmont, and part of Montferrat, sub. to the K. of Sardinia; the ter. of Genoa, sub. to the Genoeze; the Duchies of Milan, Mantua, and the rest of the D. of Montferrat, sub. to the house of Austria; the D. of Parma, sub. to the Infant Duke; the D. of Modena, sub. to its own Duke; and the large territories of Venice, sub. to that republic. 2. In the middle of Italy are the D. of Tuscany, subject to the Emperor; the Pope's dominions, which almost surround Tuscany, and the state of Lucca. 3. In the S. division is the K. of Naples, sub. to the K. of the Two Sicilies.

ITALIAN ISLANDS lie in the Mediterranean sea, the chief whereof are Sicily, sub. to the K. of the Two Sicilies, or Naples; Sardinia, subject to that King; and Corsica, subject to the Genoeze. The chief produce of Italy is raw and wrought silks, velvet, wine and oil; and the principal ports with which we traffic, are Genoa, Leghorn, Naples, Venice, and Messina.

ITSCHOA, E. lon. 9. 8. lat. 54. 40. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Lower Saxony, and D. of Holstein, sit. on the river Stor, 10 m. N. E. of Gluckstat.

JUCATAN, YUCATAN, a peninsula of Mexico, in North America, sit. between 89 and 94 degrees of W. lon. and between 16 and 21 degrees of N. lat. It is generally a flat, level country, except towards the Isthmus, very unhealthful, and thinly inhabited, the air excessive hot, and the land near the coast usually flooded; the chief town Campeachy. It is in the bays of Honduras and Campeachy, the one on the East, and the other on the West of Jucatan, that the English cut their logwood; they have been driven indeed from the bay of Campeachy by the Spaniards, but still continue in great numbers at the bay of Honduras, and the Spaniards have not yet been able to dispossess them, tho' they frequently take the ships that traffic with them.

It produces also great quantities of woad, or wad, for dying, as well as corn. This country, with the D. of Berg, have been much contended for by the Electors of Brandenburg, Saxony, and the Elector Palatine; but the Electors of Brandenburg and Saxony (the Kings of Prussia and Poland) suffer the Elector Palatine to possess it at present.

JULIERS CITY, E. lon. 6. lat. 50. 55. capital of the D. of Juliers, in Westphalia, is sit. on the river Roer, 20 m. E. of Maestricht, and as many W. of Cologne.

JULPHA OLD, E. lon. 46. lat. 39. once the capital of Armenia, now in ruins, the inhabitants being transplanted to Ispahan, within a mile of which city they have a town called New Julpha, by some looked upon as a suburb to Ispahan; here they are encouraged and assisted by the Persians to carry on a foreign trade with all the countries of Asia, and are the most considerable merchants in the world. They suffer them also to profess the Christian religion; they have several churches in New Julpha, and come the nearest the Greek church, of any denomination of Christians. Asia.

IVREA, or JURA, E. lon. 7. 36. lat. 45. 22. a strong city in Italy, in the pr. of Piedmont, sit. on the river Doria, 25 m. N. of Turin; sub. to the K. of Sardinia.

JUTES, the ancient inhabitants of Jutland in Denmark.

JUTLAND, a peninsula of Denmark, anciently called the Cimbric Chersonese, sit. between 8 and 11 degrees of W. lon. and between 55 and 58 degrees of N. lat. bounded by the Categate sea, which separates it from Norway, on the N. by the same sea, which divides it from the Danish islands and Sweden, on the E. by Holstein on the S. and by the German ocean on the W. and is divided into N. and S. Jutland, the S. usually called Sleswic; the whole about 180 m. in length, from N. to S. and 90 m. in breadth, from E. to W. The soil of N. Jutland is not very fruitful, however they have corn enough for themselves, and abound in cattle, which they sell lean in Germany and the Netherlands, where they thrive extremely. Sleswic is more fruitful in corn, horses, and other cattle, with which they furnish the countries to the southward of them. The country is well situated for a foreign trade, and has excellent harbours, but they want stock to traffic with. N. Jutland is intirely under the dominion of the K. of Denmark, but the D. of Holstein has the joint dominion of part of Sleswic with him, and in some great towns and territories of Sleswic each of them has a distinct dominion. The Duke of Holstein's capital in Sleswic is the city of Gottorp. From this country came the LAPLAND, the most northerly part of Europe, is surrounded by the frozen ocean on the N. E. and W. and lies between 10 and 35 degrees of E. lon. and between 65 and 72 deg. of N. lat. The N. E. part whereof is sub. to Russia, and called Russian Lapland; the N. W. part of it is sub. to Denmark, and called Norwegian Lapland; and that part of Lapland which lies S. of these is called Swedish Lapland. But the exact limits of these divisions is not known, the people generally leading a wandering life, and having very few towns, but live in huts under the snow two thirds of the year. Here are very few animals or vegetables. The rein deer is the most useful animal they have, which draws their sledges over the snow with surprising swiftness; his skin also serves them for cloathing, and his flesh for food. They hunt foxes, martens, ermins, and other animals proper to their climate, whose furs they sell to their southern neighbours. In Swedish Lapland, about Torne and the Bothnic Gulph, they have mines of copper and iron which the Swedes work, and boast they have made Christians of many of their Lapland subjects; but 'tis certain they have not improved their morals, for furnishing them with heady, strong liquors, they are seldom sober when they can purchase them.

river Elbe, 25 m. N. of Prague; the see of a bishop.

LEWARDEN, E. lon. 5. 35. lat. 53. 20. a city of the United Provinces, capital of the pr. of West Friesland, sit. 66 m. N. E. of Amsterdam. It is an elegant city, was the usual residence of the Stadtholder the Prince of Orange, and here the States of the province assemble. There are navigable canals from this city to the sea, and to almost every considerable town in the pr. whereby it has a brisk trade.

LEWES, E. lon. 5 min. lat. 50. 55. a borough town of Sussex, sit. on the river Ouse, 5 m. N. of the English channel, and 40 m. S. of London; sends two members to parliament.

LEWIS. See FORT LEWIS.

LEWISBURG, W. lon. 61. 30. lat. 46. 50. capital of the island of Cape Breton, in N. America, sit. 160 m. N. E. of Annapolis in Acadie, and 240 m. S. W. of Placentia in Newfoundland, taken from the French by the English by General Pepperel, anno 1745, but restored to France by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, in 1748. [It is small but well built, the harbour, one of the best in the world, is strongly fortified.]

LEWIS ISLAND, W. lon. 8 degrees odd min. and between 58 and 59 degrees odd min. N. lat. lying 70 m. W. of the main land of Scotland, and 20 m. N. W. of the isle of Sky, and is about 80 m. in length, and 41 in breadth. This island is exceedingly well sit. both for the herring and cod fishery.

LEWIS PORT. See PORT LEWIS.

LEYDEN, E. lon. 4. lat. 52. 12. a city of the United Provinces, in the pr. of Holland, sit. on the old channel of the Rhine, near the S. end of the lake called Haarlem-meer, 4 m. E. of the ocean, and 20 m. S. of Amsterdam. It is one of the most elegant cities in Holland, and the largest next to Amsterdam and Rotterdam; but the air is bad, oc-caused by the stagnation of the waters of the Rhine, part whereof form Harlem-meer, and the rest have found new channels, which go under the names of the Waal and the Lech. Those that have viewed this city nicely, observe, that there are in it 30 islands, 24 canals, 180 streets, and 95 bridges. There are several great hospitals, and a univ. consisting of 2000 students; but there are only two colleges, most of the lads boarding in the town, and wearing no distinguishing habits; and as they have no exhibitions while they are scholars, so neither do they expect fellowships when they have taken their degrees. The schools consist of a large pile of brick building, three stories high; in the uppermost whereof the ingenious Elzvir had his printing-room. Adjoining to the schools is a physic-garden, where the professor of botany reads lectures. Their professors never wear gowns but at lectures, and when they preside at public disputations. Their library is in great esteem for its MSS. and their anatomy theatre is said to exceed that of Padua and Surgeons-hall in London, having a greater variety of skeletons and mummies of all kinds. There is a considerable woollen manufacture in Leyden.

LEYNA, a river of Germany, which rises on the confines of Hesse, and runs N. thro' the D. of Brunswick, passes by Gottingen, Calenberg, and Hanover, and discharges itself into the river Aller, at Batmar.

LEYTE, E. lon. 123. lat. 11. one of the Philippine islands, in Asia, separated from the island of Philippina by a narrow channel on the N. E. as it is from the islands of Behol and Cebu by another channel on the S. W.

LEZINA, E. lon. 16. 16. lat. 41. 40. a town of Italy, in the K. of Naples, and pr. of the Capitanate, sit. on a bay of the gulph of Venice, 75 m. N. E. of Naples.

LENAVILLIN, W. lon. 3. 20. lat.

L I

lat. 52. 48. a market town of Montgomeryshire, in N. Wales, sit. 10 m. N. of Montgomery.

LHON RIVER, rises in the lan. of Hesse-Cassel, and runs S. W. passing by Marburg, Wetzlar, and Naf-sau, and falls into the Rhine almost opposite to Coblenz.

LIBANUS MOUNTAINS, in Asiatic Turkey, sit. between Syria and Palestine, extending from Sidon on the Levant sea, eastward beyond Damascus, much taken notice of for the fine cedars they produce.

LIBAW, E. lon. 21. lat. 56. 40. a port town of Poland, in the D. of Courland, sit. on a bay of the Baltic sea, 80 m. E. of Mittau, sub. to the D. of Courland.

LIBOURN, W. lon. 25 min. lat. 45. a town of France, in the pr. of Guienne, sit. on the river Dordonne, 10 m. N. E. of Bourdeaux.

LIBYA, a great part of Africa, S. W. of Egypt, so called by the ancients.

LICER, or LEGAR, St. E. lon. 55. m. lat. 43. 6. a city of France, in the pr. of Gascony, sit. 35 m. S. of Toulouse, and 17 m. E. of St. Bertrand; the see of a bish.

LICH, or LICHA, E. lon. 8. 30. lat. 50. 28. a town of Germany, in the lan. of Hesse, and co. of Solms, sit. 18 m. N. of Frankfurt.

LICHTENBERG, E. lon. 12. lat. 50. 26. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Franconia, and mar. of Cullembach, sit. 20 m. N. of Cullembach.

LICHTENFELS, E. lon. 11. 10. lat. 50. 20. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Franconia, and bish. of Bamberg, sit. on the river Maine, 15 m. N. E. of Bamberg.

LIDD, E. lon. 58. min. lat. 50. 58. a market town of Kent, sit. near the English channel, 5 m. S. W. of Romney, and. 22 m. S. of Canterbury.

LIDDESDALE, a county of Scotland, bounded by Tiviotdale on the N. Cumberland on the S. E. and Annandale on the S. W.

L I

LIDKOPING, E. lon. 13. 30. lat. 58. 40. a town of Sweden, in the province of W. Gothland, sit. on the Wener lake, 64 m. N. E. of Gottenburg.

LIECHTENAU E. lon. 10. 45. lat. 49. 18. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Franconia, and mar. of Anspach, sit. 17 m. S. E. of Nuremberg, and subject to the city of Nuremberg.

LIEFKINSTOCK, E. lon. 4. 5. lat. 51. 25. a fortress of Dutch Flanners, sit. on the W. side of the river Scheld, opposite to Lillo, 7 m. N. W. of Antwerp.

LIEGE bishopric, a ter. of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, (though by some reckoned a pr. of the Netherlands, being in a manner furrounded by the Netherlands) is bounded by Brabant on the N. and W. by the pr. of Limburg on the E. and by the pr. of Luxemburg and Namur on the S. The river Maes, or Mues, running along the S. E. confines of the bish. and dividing it from the pr. of Limburg. It is 70 m. in length from N. to S. and 25 in breadth from E. to W. and in some places 50 m. broad. A pleasant fruitful country, having extensive fields of corn, and a great deal of rich pasture and meadow ground. There are also some mines of lead and iron, and quarries of marble; but most considerable for the great quantities of brimstone and vitriol which the country produces, as well as mineral waters, particularly near the Spa, or Spaw.

LIEGE CITY, E. lon. 5. 36. lat. 50. 40. the capital of the bish. of Liege, in Germany, sit. on the river Maes, 12 m. S. of Maestricht, 30 m. N. E. of Namur, and 50 m. E. of Brussels, being about 4 m. in circumference; a populous, wealthy city; two branches of the river Maes, and other rivulets or canals, run through several of the streets, and form little islands. No city in Germany or France can equal it in fine churches and convents: there are are not less than 100 churches of all sorts, and a very numerous clergy belonging to the churches and monasteries, which are so pleasantly sit. and have such endowments, that the city is sometimes called the paradise of the ecclesiastics; and among other religious houses, here is one of English nuns, and they have a univ. of great fame. The fortifications of the town are not very strong, being commanded by the neighbouring hills, but the citadel is capable of making a good defence. The late bishop, who was also Elector of Cologn, put it into the hands of the French at the beginning of Q. Anne's war, but the D. of Marlborough took it from them, anno 1702; and the French besieging it again, anno 1705, they were obliged to raise the siege by the same general, on his return from the Moselle. The magistrates of Liege pretend that it is an imperial city, or sovereign state; but they have suffered very severely for disputing the authority of their bishop, who is in fact absolute sovereign of the city, as well as the bishopric. He is chosen by the 60 major canons, who are most of them of noble extraction. This bishop is one of the most considerable ecclesiastical Princes of Germany, having within his diocese 52 baronies, 18 walled towns, and 400 villages full of people, with a revenue of 300,000 ducats, or nobles, per annum; and is able to maintain a body of 8000 men, without oppressing his subjects, who are generally Roman Catholics.

LIERE, E. lon. 4. 30. lat. 51. 15. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in the pr. of Brabant, sit. on the river Nethe, 9 m. N. of Mechlin, or Malines, and 12 m. S. E. of Antwerp.

LIERS, E. lon. 5. 50. lat. 50. 41. a village of the bish. of Liege, in the cir. of Westphalia, in Germany, sit. 4 m. N. of Liege, and 10 m. S. of Maestricht; where the late battle was fought between the allies commanded by Prince Charles of Lor-rain, and the French commanded by Count Saxe, Oct. 1746.

LIFFEY, a river of Ireland, which rises in the co. of Wicklow, runs W. through that co. into Kildare, and then turning N. E. runs through the co. of Dublin, and having passed by the city of Dublin, falls into the Irish channel a little below it.

LIFFORD, W. lon. 8. 45. lat. 54. 47. a town of Ireland, in the co. of Donnegal, and pr. of Ulster, [the shire town of the co. It hath a barrack for a troop of horse, and sends 2 memb. to parl. sit. on the river Foyle 99 m. N. W. of Dublin.]

LIGNE, E. lon. 3. 35. lat. 50. 45. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in the pr. of Hainault, sit. on the river Dender, 12 m. N. W. of Mons.

LIGNITS, E. lon. 16. 18. lat. 51. 16. a city of Bohemia, in the pr. of Silesia, sit. 28 m. N. W. of Breslaw.

LIGNY, E. lon. 5. 12. lat. 48. 38. a town of Lorrain, in the ter. of Bar, 7 m. S. E. of Bar-le-duc, and 30 m. W. of Nancy.

LILLERS, E. lon. 2. 32. lat. 50. 38. a town of the French Netherlands, in the pr. of Artois, 18 m. N. W. of Arras.

LILLO, E. lon. 4. 7. lat. 51. 25. a fortress of the Netherlands in Dutch Brabant, sit. on the E. side of the river Scheld, 8 m. N. of Antwerp, and commands the navigation of that river.

LIMA, a pr. of Peru, in S. America, bounded by that of Quito on the N. by the country of the Amazons on the E. by the pr. of Los Charcas on the S. and by the Pacific ocean on the W. being about 800 m. in length from N. to S. but not 400 m. broad in any place.

LIMA CITY, or LOS REYES, W. lon. 76. S. lat. 12. 30. is the capital of the pr. of Lima, and of the whole empire of Peru; and is sit. on the banks of the river Lima, 6 m. E. of the Pacific ocean, and of the port town of Calao, in a fruitful plain,

Plain, 350 m. W. of Cusco, which was the capital in the reigns of the Incas, or Indian sovereigns. The city is 4 miles in length, and 2 in breadth, exceeding rich, and plentifully supplied with all manner of provisions, and with European as well as Indian fruits. This being the only country, between the tropics, where grapes come to perfection, and make good wine; for here it never rains, but their vineyards and fields are watered by rivulets, which descend from the mountains of the Andes, and will ripen at any time of the year, if the waters are turned into them; whereas, in other countries between the tropics, the periodical rains happening at the time the grapes are ripe, they burst, and will not make good wine. The buildings of this city are very low, seldom more than one story, and extremely slight, scarce ever covered with any thing heavier than reeds or matting; for if they were more substantial, they would be in danger of being buried in the ruins of their houses by the frequent earthquakes that happen here: and they have no occasion to provide against rain or stormy weather, there being neither rain or storms to disturb them on this coast; but their earthquakes are very terrible; the city was almost overturned by them in the years 1586 and 1687, and almost destroyed again by an earthquake in Oct. 1746. They would be too happy if it were not for such shocks; for the adjacent country is a perfect paradise, producing plenty of corn, wine, oil, sugar, flax, and fruits; and the heat of the climate is constantly moderated by cool sea-breezes, or the land-winds from the mountains of the Andes. This city was founded by Pizarro, the Spanish general, who conquered Peru in the year 1534, giving it the name of Cividat de les Reyes, or the City of the Kings, because he laid the foundation on that day of the year when the Kings of the East made their presents to our Saviour; but it has changed this name for that of the valley on which it stands, viz. LIMA.

LIMALE, E. lon. 4. 30. lat. 50. 45. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in the pr. of Brabant, sit. on the river Dyle, 13 miles S. E. of Brussels.

LIMBURG DUCHY, a province of the Austrian Netherlands, bounded by the D. of Juliers on the N. and E. by Luxemburg on the S. and by the bishop of Liege on the W. being about 30 m. long, and 25 broad; consisting of good arable and pasture land, with plenty of wood, and some of the best iron mines in the Netherlands.

LIMBURG, E. lon. 6. 5. lat. 50. 37. the capital city of the D. of Limburg, sit. on the river Vefse, 20 m. S. E. of Liege, and 18 m. S. of Aken, or Aix la Chapelle. It is strongly situated on a rock, almost inaccessible. This is sub. to the house of Austria; but the rest of the strong towns, viz. Dalem, Rolduc, and Fauquemont, or Fauconberg, are in the possession of the Dutch.

* LIMERICK, a co. in the pr. of Munster, in Ireland; hath the river Shannon on the N. Tipperary on the N. E. Kerry on the W. and Cork on the S. It is a fruitful and populous tract, the soil requiring little or no manure in most places, and affording much grass, and a large breed of cattle: it produces rich crops of all sorts of corn and rape, with some hemp. It gives title of Viscount to a branch of the noble family of Hamilton. It contains 375320 Irish plantation acres, 16624 houses, 130 parishes, 10 baronies, 3 boroughs, and sends 8 members to parliament.

LIMERICK, W. lon. 8. 30. lat. 52. 35. a city of Ireland, in the co. of Limeric, and pr. of Munster, sit. on the river Shannon, 52 m. N. of Cork, Cork, and 87 m. S. W. of Dublin; the strongest fortrefs in the kingdom. It was besieged by K. William III. in the year 1690, and tho' there was no army to relieve it, the garrison compelled the King to raise the siege. The English and Dutch forces invested Limerick again on the 21st of September, 1691, and lost abundance of men before it; and when the town capitulated on the 13th of October following, the garrison obtained very honourable and advantageous conditions, being permitted to retire wherever they saw fit; and they were tolerated in the free exercise of their religion by these articles. [It is the third largest city in Ireland, and was originally built by the Danes, and walled in the time of K. Henry II. It is situated on an island in the river Shannon, and is a place of great strength by nature, assisted by art, being fortified round with strong walls, bastions, and ramparts, with a castle and citadel, with bridges into the counties of Limerick and Clare. The river is navigable from hence to the sea, near 60 miles. Its trade consists in the export of provisions, and is much increased of late years. It hath a military governor, and town major on the establishment, and the garrison generally consists of 22 companies of foot. The civil government is by a mayor, recorder, sheriffs, and town clerk, who, with the freemen, return two members to parliament. It is the see of a bishop united to Ardferit and Aghadoe, and is graced with a fine cathedral. The place is well built, and contains 3700 houses. Provisions are extremely cheap in this city, but the situation renders the air moist, and consequently unwholesome to strangers.]

LIMMINGTON, or LEMMINGTON, W. lon. 1. 45. lat. 50. 45. a borough town of Hampshire, sit. on a bay of the English channel, opposite to Yarmouth in the isle of Wight, 12 m. S. W. of Southampton, sends 2 memb. to parl.

LIMNEVADY, W. lon. 7. 16. lat. 55. 5. a town of Ireland, in the co. of Londonderry, and pr. of Ulster, sit. 14 m. N. E. of Londonderry.

LIMOGES, E. lon. 1. 22. lat. 45. 52. a city of France, in the pr. of Guienne, capital of the ter. of the Limosin, sit. on the river Venne, 100 m. N. E. of Bourdeaux, a large populous city, and the see of a bishop.

LIMOUX, E. lon. 2. lat. 43. 12. a town of France, in the pr. of Languedoc, sit. on the river Aude, 35 m. W. of Narbonne.

LIMPURG, E. lon. 7. 45. lat. 50. 26. a town of Germany, in the Electorate of Triers, sit. on the river Rhon, 20 m. N. of Mentz.

LINCH, or LINKE, E. lon. 2. 20. lat. 50. 51. a town of French Flanders, sit. 12 m. S. W. of Dunkirk.

LINCOLN, W. lon. 27. min. lat. 53. 16. the capital city of the co. of Lincoln, sit. on the river Witham, 115 m. N. of London, and 50 S. of York. It was anciently one of the greatest cities in England; but is not very considerable at present, tho' the diocese is still the largest in England. From this city the noble family of Clinton takes the title of Earl, and it sends 2 memb. to parl. It is a co. of itself, and has a ter. about the city sub. to it.

LINDENFELS, or LINDENFELD, E. lon. 8. 40. lat. 49. 37. a town of Germany, in the pal. of the Rhine, sit. 15 m. N. of Heidelberg.

LINDKOPING, E. lon. 15. lat. 58. 36. a town of Sweden, sit. in the pr. of E. Gothland, 93 m. S. W. of Stockholm.

LINDOW, E. lon. 9. 40. lat. 47. 28. a city of Germany, in the cir. of Suabia, and ter. of the Algow, sit. on a little island at the end of the lake of Constance, 30 m. S. E. of Constance.

LINDSEY, the North division of Lincolnshire, from whence the noble family family of Bertie take the title of Marquis.

LINGEN, E. lon. 7. lat. 52. 46. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Westphalia, capital of the co. of Lingen, sit. on the river Ems, 45 m. N. of Munster.

LINLITHGO, or LINLITHGO, a town of Scotland, in the co. of Lothian, capital of the ter. of Linlithgo, sit. 16 miles W. of Edinburg, from whence the noble family of Levingston take the title of Earl.

LINTON, E. lon. 12. min. lat. 52. 10. a market town of Cambridgeshire, sit. 10 m. S. E. of Cambridge.

LINTS, E. lon. 14. lat. 48. 18. a city of Germany, in the cir. of Austria, capital of the Upper Austria, sit. on the river Danube, 105 m. W. of Vienne. It is a very elegant city, to which the Austrian family and the nobility usually retire in the summer season.

LINTS, E. lon. 6. 50. lat. 50. 34. a town of Germany, in the cir. of the Lower Rhine, and Electorate of Cologne, sit. on the river Rhine, 17 m. S. of Cologne, and sub. to that Elector.

LIONS, capital of the Lionois, in France, situate at the confluence of the rivers Rhone and Soane. See Lyons.

LIPARI islands, sit. in the Mediterranean, 40 miles N. of Sicily, between 13 and 16 deg. of E. lon. and in 39 degrees of N. lat. sub. to Naples. These islands were called by the ancients Æoliæ and Vulcaniæ, feigned by the poets to be the seats of Vulcan and Æolus; two of them, viz. Stromboli and Hiera, being vulcanoes, whose flames are seen a great way at sea.

LIPPA, E. lon. 22. lat. 46. 10. a town of the bannat of Temeswaer, in Hungary, sit. on the river Merish, 16 m. N. of Temeswaer, and 45 m. E. of Segedin.

LIPPE, or LIPSTAT, E. lon. 8. lat. 51. 40. a city of Germany, in the cir. of Westphalia, capital of the co. of Lippe, sit. on the river Lippe, 30 m. S. of Munster.

L I

LIQUE, E. lon. 2. lat. 50. 42. a town of the French Netherlands, in the pr. of Artois, sit. 12 m. W. of St. Omers.

LIS, a river of the Netherlands, which rises at Lisburg in Artois, and running N. E. into Flanders, passes by Aire, St. Venant, Menin, and Courtray, uniting its waters with the Scheld at Ghent.

LISBON, W. lon. 9. 25. lat. 38. 45. the capital of the kingdom of Portugal, sit. on the N. bank of the river Tagus, about 10 m. from the mouth of it, 80 m. W. of the frontiers of Spain, 300 m. W. of Madrid, and 850 m. S. W. of London. It is about 6 m. long, winding with the river from which it rises with an easy ascent. It is surrounded only by a single wall, on which are 77 antique towers, of no great strength. There are 26 gates on the river side, and 17 on the land side; and it is computed there are 30,000 houses, and 200,000 inhabitants. The streets are narrow and steep, the town standing on seven hills, which makes it inconvenient for coaches, and therefore litters are much used. The houses of the citizens are very mean, with lattice windows; but those of the nobility are elegantly built with stone, and have large gardens belonging to them. There are 40 parish churches besides the cathedral, and 40 convents of both sexes. There are several handsome squares; the finest of them has the king's palace on one side, and on another side the river, from whence may be seen large fleets of ships at anchor, and others perpetually going in and out of that spacious harbour. In this square they have their bull fights; and all people of distinction assemble to see the combats between the cavaliers and the brutes, their adversaries. And here also the officers of the inquisition perform those terrible executions of burning and roasting men alive, who happen to be of a different faith from those of the Romish church. At these executions, people of distinction (ladies as well as gentlemen) assemble, and are taught to rejoice and huzza at the murdering and torturing a helpless, innocent man, as if they had gained a victory over their enemies. The harbour of Lisbon will contain several thousand sail of ships, which ride in the greatest security; and the city being viewed from the river, or the southern shore, affords a fine prospect, the buildings rising gradually from the river up the hills, on which it stands. Nor is the prospect less entertaining if we look from the town, where we see a river 3 miles over, underneath, and ships of every nation of Europe almost riding in it; and beyond, a beautiful country, intermixed with towns and villages. The ships ride in 18 fathom water in the harbour; but the entrance is difficult, and cannot be passed without a pilot, which is indeed the case of most great rivers. There is no port town of Europe that has a more extensive foreign trade, except London and Amsterdam.

LISBURN, W. lon. 6. 20. lat. 54. 31. a town of Ireland, sit. on the river Laggan in the co. of Antrim and pr. of Ulster, 7 m. S. W. of Belfast, [and 72 m. N. of Dublin. It is a borough which returns two members to parliament, and gives title of Viscount to the noble family of Vaughan.]

LISIEUX, E. lon. 16. min. lat. 49. 14. a large city of France, in the pr. of Normandy, sit. on the river Tonque, 38 m. S. W. of Rouen, and 27 m. E. of Caen, the see of a bishop.

L'ISLE, or RYSSSEL, in the French Netherlands (called the island, from its standing in a kind of lake formerly; but the waters are now drained off) is sit. in E. lon. 3. lat. 50. 42. on the river Deule, 25 m. N. of Arras, and 12 m. W. of Tournay; a large populous city, capital of French Flanders, beautifully built, and strongly fortified, as the English and their confederates found when they took it in the year 1708. They lost a great many thousand men before it, and it was by great good fortune they took it at last after a siege of near three months. It was yielded to the French again at the peace of Utrecht, anno 1713, in consideration of their demolishing Dunkirk. The silk manufacture, and that of fine linen or cambric, are in great perfection here; and their camblets are much admired.

LITHUANIA, a pr. of Poland, is bounded by Samogitia, Livonia, and part of Russia on the N. by another part of Russia on the E. by Volhinia and Polesia on the S. and by Prussia and Polachia on the W. being of a circular form, pretty near 250 m. over either way, and contains 8 palatinates or counties. It is called the great duchy of Lithuania, and may, in some respects, be looked upon as an independent state, in alliance with Poland, being governed by its own peculiar laws and magistrates, though united under one sovereign, who is the titular head of both nations: for they are, in reality, both of them republics, and each of them send their representatives to the diet, or general assembly of the states; and each of them has its distinct provincial diet, or assembly of the states, which enact laws for their respective subjects.

LIVADIA, a pr. of European Turkey, the ancient Achaia, is bounded by Thessaly on the N. by the Archipelago, or the Egean sea, on the E. by the Morea, or Peloponnesus, on the S. from which it is separated by the gulphs of Lepanto and Engia, and the isthmus of Corinth; and by Epirus, or Janna, on the W. the capital city Setines, or Athens.

LIVERPOOL. See LEVERPOOL.

LIVONIA, anciently a pr. of Poland, since of Sweden, now of Russia, is bounded by the gulph of Finland on the N. by Ingria and Great Novogorod on the E. by Lithuania and Courland on the S. and by the Baltic, or Livonian-sea, on the W. being about 160 miles long from N. to S. and 120 broad, and is usually subdivided into two parts; that on the N. called Eastonia, or Eastland; and that on the S. Lettenland, or Letticia; the chief towns whereof are Narva, Revel, and Riga, all of them good harbours. It is a country fruitful in corn, with which it supplies Sweden, Germany, and many other countries. And as it is extremely well situated for a foreign trade, and abounds with commodious harbours, it has been contended for many hundred years, by the neighbouring nations, and sometimes possessed by one, and sometimes by others; so that the inhabitants are a mixture of Germans, Danes, Poles, Swedes, and Russians. Terrible were the calamities which this country suffered in the beginning of this century; for, while the Russians and Swedes were contending for the dominion of it, the Czar Peter the Great, doubting whether he should be able to maintain the possession of that part of the country he had taken from the Swedes, permitted the Calmucks and other Tartars of his army to commit unheard of barbarities. And at length, when the Czar had made an entire conquest of the country, observing the natives to be more inclined to their old masters the Swedes than to Russia, he compelled the natives to abandon their country, and drove multitudes of them in chains as far as the confines of the Caspian sea; though the Czarina Catharine prevailed on the Czar afterwards to recall them, she being a native of this country; but most of them perished before that edict was published. The Livonians also were afflicted by plague and famine, and their country miserably harassed and laid waste before they were driven from it, and other Russian nations being introduced here, the Czarina now remains in the quiet possession of all Livonia.

LOHN river. See LHON.

LOIRE, the finest river of France, rises in the mountains of the Cevennes, and running N. and N. W. through Lionois and Orleans, passes by Nevers and Orleans; after which, it runs due W. by Tours, Angers, and Nants in Britany, falling into the bay of Biscay, 40 m. below Nants. The whole course of the river computed to be about 500 miles.

LOMBARDY kingdom comprehended almost all the N. of Italy, viz. Piedmont, Milan, most of the ter. of Venice, Mantua, Parma, Modena, and some other provinces. It was erected by the Longobards, or Lombards, a German nation, on the decline of the Roman empire. Their first K. Alboin began his reign anno 568, and was succeeded by twenty-one Princes of his family, who remained masters of it near 200 years; but Astolphus, the last king, being at war with the Pope, and laying siege to Rome, Pepin, king of France came to the assistance of his holiness, and raised the siege; and Charlemain, the son of Pepin, put an end to the kingdom of the Lombards about the year 760, and laid the foundation of a new empire, which comprehended Germany, France, Italy, and part of Spain.

LOMMOND, a lake of the co. of Lenox, in Scotland, which runs almost the whole length of the county, and has several islands in it.

LONDON, the metropolis of Great Britain, where the first meridian is fixed in the present maps, lies in 51 deg. 30 min. N. lat. 300 m. S. of Edinburgh, and 200 N. W. of Paris; 180 m. W. of Amsterdam, and 500 S. W. of Copenhagen; 600 N. W. of Vienna, 1360 N. W. of Constantinople, 800 N. E. of Madrid, 820 N. W. of Rome, 270 S. E. of Dublin. The form of London, including Westminster and Southwark, comes pretty near an oblong square, 5 m. long, if measured in a direct line from Hyde-park to the end of Lime-house, and 6 m. if we follow the winding of the streets; and the greatest breadth is 2 m. and a half. The circumference of the whole, 16 or 17 miles; but impracticable almost to measure it exactly, on account of its irregular form.

Much the greatest part of the town lies on the N. side of the river Thames; the body of it rising gradually from the river, and standing for the most part upon an eminence; but the S. E. and S. W. parts of the town, and that part of it which lies on the S. side of the river, lie low, and, at spring tides, are subject to floods. There are no hills in the town, except that we ascend from the river, that to Holborn, and that we ascend to the cathedral of St. Paul's from the bottom of Holborn and Fleet-street. The principal streets are generally level, exceedingly well built, and extended to a very great length. These are inhabited by tradesmen, whose houses and shops make a much better figure than those of any other tradesmen in Europe. People of distinction usually reside in large elegant squares, of which there are great numbers at the W. end of the town, near the court. And here we find the royal palace, which makes no great figure, but is sit. in a pleasant park, where we see great numbers of people of the first quality walking in fine weather; but what contributes most to the riches and glory of this town is the port, whither several thousand ships of burden annually resort from all countries; and where the greatest fleets never fail to meet with wealthy merchants, ready to take off the richest cargoes. The numbers of people in the whole town are computed to be about one million. In the city of London, properly so called, which is about 3 m. in circumference, there are 12,000 houses. In the parishes without the walls, but within the liberties, 36,320. In the parishes which lie in Middlesex and Surrey, and are a part of the town, 46,300 houses. And in the city and liberties of Westminster, 28,330 houses. And as to the number of souls in each of these grand divisions, if we multiply the number of houses in the city of London by eight and a half, we shall find there are 102,000. By the same rule, there will be found 308,720 in the 16 parishes without the walls; 393,550 in the 20 out-parishes of Middlesex and Surrey; and 240,805 in the city and liberties of Westminster. All which added together, make 1,045,075 people in the whole town. Which calculation possibly may be something of the largest, but not much. London has scarce any wall about it which is visible. Its strength consists in the number of its inhabitants, which are computed to be one seventh of all the people of England.

* LONDONDERRY, a co. in the pr. of Ulster, in Ireland, which has Donnegal on the W. the sea on the N. Antrim on the E. and Tyrone on the S. a pleasant and fruitful country, well well planted with English, by the citizens of London, in the reign of K. James I. who granted the greater part of it to them, on condition of settling it with English, it being escheated to the crown by the rebellion and attainder of O'Neal. They were incorporated by the name of (the society of the governors and assistants of London, of the new plantation of Ulster in the Realm of Ireland.) It contains 251510 Irish plant. acres, 12235 houses, 38 parishes, 4 baronies and 3 boroughs, and returns 8 memb. to parliament.

LONDONDERRY, W. lon. 7. 40. lat. 54. 52. a city of Ireland, in the pr. of Ulster, and co. of Londonderry, sit. on the river Mourn near its mouth, 5 m. S. of the lake or bay of Loughfoyle, 114 m. N. W. of Dublin, and 50 m. W. of Carickfergus, the cap. of the pr. of Ulster, and co. of Londonderry; rendered memorable by the long siege it sustained against the forces of K. James II. anno 1689, when he was in possession of almost all the rest of the kingdom.

[It is a city and co. in itself, and was built by the citizens of London, in the reign of K. James I. It is the see of a bishop, is governed by a mayor, recorder and sheriffs, and returns two members to parliament. The garrison consists of six companies of foot. It hath a military governor also, who is commander of Culmore fort. The noble family of Pitt take the title of Earl from this city.

LONGFORD, a co. of Ireland, in the pr. of Leinster, bounded by the co. of Leitrim and Cavan on the N. by Meath on the E. and S. and by the co. of Roscommon on the W. [It contains 134700 Irish plantation acres, 4953 houses, 24 parishes, 6 baronies, and 4 boroughs, and returns 10 memb. to parliament. It is small and much encumbered with bog, intermixed with a tolerable good soil.

* LONGFORD, W. lon. 8. lat. 53. 42. the shire town of the co. so called in the province of Leinster, in Ireland, sit. on the river Cromlin, which falls a few miles below this place into the Shannon. It returns two memb. to parliament; hath a barrack for a troop of horse, and gave title of Viscount to the family of Aungier, and now gives title of baron to the noble family of Pakenham.

LONG-ISLAND, belonging to the pr. of New-York, in N. America, lying between 71 and 74 degrees of W. lon. and in 41 deg. 30 min. N. lat. is separated from the continent of New-York and Connecticut by a narrow channel, and is about 100 m. in length, and 12 in breadth, containing the 3 counties of Queen's-county, Suffolk-county, and Richmond-county. Here is a fine plain in the middle of this island, to which they have given the name of Salisbury-plain; and having an excellent breed of horses, have races here, to which the gentlemen of New-England and the neighbouring colonies resort, as the gentlemen of Old England do to Newmarket. The produce of this island is chiefly provision, such as British and Indian corn, salted beef, pork, fish, and strong beer, which they send to the sugar colonies, and receive sugar, rum, cotton, and indigo in return. They have also a whale fishery, sending their oil and bone to England, and taking cloaths and furniture in return. And their other fisheries are very considerable.

LOREDO, E. lon. 12. 50. lat. 45. a town of Italy, in the Polesine de Rovigo, and ter. of Venice, sit. on the river Adige, 20 m. E. of Rovigo.

LORETTO, E. lon. 15. lat. 43. 15. a city of Italy, in the marq. of Ancona, in the Pope's ter. sit. 15 m. S. of Ancona, 3 m. W. of the gulph of Venice, and 145 E. of Rome. It is a small fortified town, consisting of one street within the gate, and another without, but the richest in the world. According to catholic tradition, the chamber of the blessed Virgin (in which she was born, and was saluted by the Angel, and brought up her son Jesus till he was 12 years of age) was brought by Angels into

Dalmatia, on the East side of the gulph of Venice, in the year 1291, or thereabouts, but the people of that country not expressing a due veneration for it, it was three or four years afterwards, transported over the gulph, into Italy, and at length fixed at Loretto, and a magnificent church, the present cathedral, built over it, in the middle whereof it now remains, under the cupola. They also erected four walls of white Parian marble to surround the holy chamber, half a foot distant from it. The chamber is 40 feet long, 20 broad, and 20 in height, without any roof or covering. In it is an image of the blessed Virgin with a little Jesus in her arms, and a triple crown on her head, her whole person covered almost with diamonds and pearls, and round the statue is a kind of rainbow of precious stones, of various colours, all the ornaments, altars, and utensils in the place, being inexpressibly rich. The gallery, in which the treasures are lodged, is filled with gold, jewels, vessels and ornaments more precious than gold; the votive donations of Emperors, Kings, Popes, and Princes, for many hundred years past; silver works are not thought worthy to be admitted here. To this holy house some years there have resorted 500,000 pilgrims, between Easter and Whitsuntide, and during the space of two days in September, when they celebrate the feast of the Virgin's nativity, not less than 200,000 have been here, and none of these come empty handed, but contribute something to increase the treasure. Pope Sixtus V. first made Loretto a city and bishopric, and it is esteemed the most sacred place under heaven, by all good Catholics.

LORN, the N. part of Argyleshire, in Scotland, bounded by Lochabar on the N. by Brodalbin on the E. by the rest of Argyleshire on the S. and by the sea on the W.

LORRAIN DUCHY, which once made part of the cir. of the Upper Rhine in Germany, is bounded by the D. of Luxemburg on the N. by Alsatia, the

the D. of Deuxponts, and the pal. of the Rhine on the E. by the county of Burgundy or French Compté on the S. and by Champaign, a pr. of France, on the W. being of a round form almost, and upwards of 100 m. over either way. The E. and S. parts of it are mountainous; the mountains of Vauge separating it from Alsace and Burgundy; and on the N. W. are some uncultivated forests. The rest of the country has a fruitful soil, producing plenty of corn, wine, and excellent pasture. In their hills are mines of silver, copper, lead and iron; and their salt springs are so numerous, that they yielded the Duke 200,000 l. per. ann. The chief rivers are the Maes, the Moselle, and the Sarre, which rise in the S. of Lorraine, and run N. through this country. It is sub-divided into three parts, viz. 1. Lorraine proper. 2. The D. of Bar, or Bar-le-duc. And, 3. French Lorraine, consisting of the bishoprics of Metz, Toul, and Verdun; the last of which was confirmed to France by the treaty of Munster, anno 1648. The rest of Lorraine which the French had possessed themselves of, was restored to the Duke, and confirmed to him by the Pyrenean treaty, anno 1660; but the French reserved a liberty of garrisoning some towns, and marching through Lorraine into Alsace when they pleased. And in the year 1670, Lewis XIV. seized on all Lorraine again, and kept it till the peace of Ryfwic, anno 1698, when it was restored to the Duke except a few small towns. And it was agreed, that the fortifications of Nancy, the capital city of Lorraine, should be demolished. The French King making himself master of Lorraine again, in the war with the confederates, anno 1702, was obliged to restore it to the Duke again by the treaty of Utrecht, or rather Rastat, anno 1714. In the last war between France and the Emperor Charles VI. which ended in a peace concluded in the year 1735, one of the articles was, that the D. of Lorraine should yield his country to France; at least that K. Stanislaus, father of the Q. of France, should have the dominion of Lorraine, with the title of Duke during his life; and that after his decease, Lorraine should be united to the crown of France; and that the Duke of Lorraine, in consideration thereof, should be constituted Grand Duke of Tuscany, in Italy, after the death of the then reigning Grand Duke; which happening anno 1737, the D. of Lorraine took possession of Tuscany, and yet remains sovereign of it, and is since elected Emperor.

LOTHIAN, a co. of Scotland, bounded by the Frith of Forth on the N. by the German sea on the E. by Clydesdale, Tweeddale, and Mers, on the S. and by Sterling on the W. the capital city of this shire, and of the kingdom, is Edinburgh.

* LOUGHCORRIB, a lake in the co. of Gallway, and pr. of Connaught, in Ireland, upwards of 20 miles long, and from one to six miles broad, from the south end of which a river issues, called in old M.S.S. Galvia, or Galiva, which washes Gallway, and falls into the bay of that name.

* LOUGH CUAN. See STRANGFORD LAKE.

* LOUGH DERG, a famous lake in the co. of Donnegal, and pr. of Ulster, in Ireland, in which is an island island much frequented by pilgrims of the R. C. religion, on account of a place they call St. Patrick's purgatory, which is no other than a dark small cell, in which the pilgrims are confined for 24 hours, after going through a course of fasting, prayer and penance; sit. 24 m. S. W. of Londonderry

* LOUGH ERN, a large lake in the co. of Fermanagh, and pr. of Ulster, in Ireland. This lake is divided into the upper and lower loughs, by a contraction of the waters, both which branches from the S. E. to the N. W. points, may be reckoned 23 Irish miles; but it is of an unequal breadth. It is diversified with near 400 islands mostly well wooded; and abounds with great plenty and variety of fish, particularly salmon, the fishery of which, in the river which runs out of the Lough, lets for 500l. a year. This lake being within a few miles of the sea, affords a free navigation to most of the inland counties of the N. W. parts of Ulster, having several large towns seated on its banks.

* LOUGH FOYLE, an inlet of the sea, so called, in the co. of Londonderry, in Ireland: it is about 14 miles long, and from 6 to 8 m. broad. The city of Londonderry stands on the river Foyle, 3 m. S. of the lake, which see.

* LOUGH LANE, a celebrated lake in the co. of Kerry, and province of Munster, in Ireland, about 8 English miles in length, and about 4 miles broad. It is interspersed with a variety of beautiful islands covered with arbutus and other evergreen shrubs, as are the lofty mountains that surround one side thereof: it abounds in trout and salmon, and hath several seats adjacent. The echoes on and about this place are very remarkable: In short its beauties are not to be described in the small compass of the design of this work, nor are they to be seen without rapture.

* LOUGHNEAGH, a lake in the pr. of Ulster, in Ireland, the largest in Europe, those of Ladoga and Onega in Muscovy, and that of Geneva in Switzerland excepted; it being 20 miles long, and 15 miles broad. It borders on the co. of Armagh, Tyrone, Londonderry, Antrim, and Down; and tho' fed by six considerable rivers, and four of lesser note, it hath but one narrow outlet, which not affording a sufficient vent, occasions it frequently to overflow the low grounds on its coast.

It is remarkable for an healing virtue, by which persons who have bathed in it for evils, ulcers, and running sores, have been shortly cured. Also for petrifying wood, which is not only found in the Lake itself, but in the adjacent soil at a considerable depth; and on its shores several beautiful gems have been discovered. It abounds with great variety and plenty of fish, and one sort called the Dolochan, a species of large trout, is said to be peculiar to it. The area of this lake is supposed to be 100,000 acres.

LUBEC, E. lon. 10. 35. lat. 54. 20. a city and port town of Germany, in the cir. of Lower Saxony, and D. of Holstein, sit. on the river Trave, 10 m. S. W. of the Baltic sea, 40 m. N. E. of Hamburgh, and 36 W. of Wismar. It was the chief of the Hans-towns, and is a rich populous city, pleasantly situated and elegantly built, in which are 20 parochial churches, besides the cathedral. It is an imperial city, or sovereign state, governed by its own magistrates. The bishopric, or rather the lands of the bishopric, has been enjoyed by Protestant Princes, ever since the year 1561, when the Lutheran religion was established here; and devolves as an appendage, or inheritance, on a younger son of the Duke of Holstein Gottorp, who is stiled Duke of Holstein-Eutin, from the place where he usually resides, 4 miles from this city. The present bishop is King of Sweden. The form of their government is aristocratical, none having any share in it but the nobility and persons of fortune, and their territories, which lie about the city, are about sixty miles in circumference, containing several towns and villages. During the flourishing state of the Hans-towns the friendship of this city, their capital, was much courted by the powers of Europe, for they were able to fit out 200 ships of war, and could turn the scale to which side they pleased, in the wars between the northern Princes and States. They have still a great foreign trade, but ships of burthen come up no higher than the town of Travemund, which lies at the mouth of the river Trave.

LUCCA, E. lon. 11. 20. lat. 43. 45. a city of Italy, capital of the republic of Lucca, sit. on the middle of a fruitful plain, about 15 miles wide, near the river Serchia, 10 m. N. of Pisa, and 12 E. of the Tuscan sea; it is about 3 m. in circumference, surrounded by a wall and other modern fortifications, and the town as elegantly built as other Italian cities. This republic has been established about 300 years. The legislative authority is lodged in a senate of 200 noblemen, or other merchants and tradesmen, of ample fortunes. The executive power is administered by the Gonfalonier, or Standard-Bearer, the chief officer of the state, and a council of nine members, who are changed every two months. All elections of officers are made by balloting in the senate, from whence it appears, that this state is an aristocracy. The ordinary revenues of the state amount to 30,000 l. per annum, and they can raise and pay 10,000 men on any exigency; but their greatest security was in the protection they received from the house of Austria, when they were insulted by the French and Spaniards for adhering to that house, in the late wars in Italy. They oblige all travellers to leave their arms at the gate, and will not suffer any one to wear a sword in the city. It is the see of a bishop, immediately subject to the Pope, and he officiates in the robes of an archbishop. By the diligence of the natives it has acquired the name of Lucca the Industrious. They have considerable manufactures of silk, and gold and silver stuffs. Their olive oil is in great esteem, and they have plenty of wine, but little little corn. The common people usually eat chestnuts instead of bread, as they do in other parts of Italy. Their ter. is about 25 m. long, and 20 broad, bounded by Modena on the N. Tuscany on the E. and S. and the Tuscan sea and the ter. of Genoa on the W.

LUCERA, E. lon. 16. 6. lat 41. 20. a town of Italy, in the K. of Naples, and ter. of the Capitanate, sit. 65 m. N. E. of Naples.

LUCIA ISLAND, W. lon. 61. lat. 13. 30. one of the Caribbee islands, in America, sit. 70 m. N. W. of Barbadoes, and 21 S. of Martinico, being 22 m. long, and 11 broad, some part of it hilly, but the greatest part of it a rich soil, well watered with rivulets, and furnished with timber, and hath several good bays and commodious harbours. To this island the English of Barbadoes have constantly resorted to cut timber, and furnish themselves with other necessaries they wanted; and the English looking upon themselves as proprietors of it, the crown of Great-Britain have constantly included it in the commission of the Governor of Barbadoes; and in the year 1722, the late K. George made a grant of it to the D. of Montague, to plant it, and send colonies thither, who thereupon sent several ships, provided to make a settlement there, under the convoy of one of the King's men of war; but the French raised a superior force in the island of Martinico, invaded the island of St. Lucia, and drove the English planters from thence, who were thereby ruined, and the D. of Montague lost all the expence he had been at in this expedition, amounting to 40,000l. at least. However the court of England did not think fit to resent the injury, or indeed take any notice of it, tho' this island, 'tis acknowledged on all hands, would have been of great advantage to England; if it had been planted and fortified, no armament could have been carried on by the French at Martinico, against Barbadoes, or any of the English Caribbee islands, but must have been known immediately at St. Lucia, and time given them to prepare for their defence, or a diversion made by the islands of Barbadoes and St. Lucia in their favour. The French, since the peace of Aix, have planted and fortified this island.

LUCONIA, or MANILLA, the chief of the Philippine Islands, in Asia, sit. in the Pacific Ocean, between 117 and 123 degrees of E. lon. and between 12 and 19 degrees of N. lat. 300 m. S. E. of China, and 160 m. S. of Formosa, being 400 m. and upwards, in length, but of an unequal breadth, in some places 200 m. and in others not 100 broad. The country is not so hot as might be expected in this climate, being well well watered by large lakes and rivers, and the periodical rains, which lay all the plains under water. There are several volcanoes in their mountains, which occasion earthquakes, and variety of hot baths. The inhabitants of the island are a mixture of Chinese, Malays, and Blacks, the last inhabiting the mountains and inland places, and supposed to be the original inhabitants. Besides these, there are great numbers of Spaniards, Portuguese, and Mestees, and a mingled breed, being compounded of all these. But the Blacks of these islands have long hair, and good features, and do not at all resemble the Negroes of Africa; and there is one class of the inhabitants, that so little admire their native complexion, that they paint their skins; from whence they have obtained the name of Pintadoes, or Picts. Luconia, or Manilla, lies so happily between the rich Kingdoms of the E. and W. that it has been esteemed the best situation in the world for a foreign traffic. For thither silver is brought from New Spain, or Mexico and Peru, diamonds from Golconda, and formerly fine spices from the Spice islands in their neighbourhood, which the Dutch monopolize at present, silks, tea, Japan and China ware, and gold-dust from China and Japan, and two large ships sail annually to Acapulco in Mexico, returning loaded with silver, by which they make 400 per cent. profit; and no soil in the world produces greater plenty of all things necessary for food, as appears by the multitude of inhabitants that subsist in the mountains, on what the earth produces spontaneously, or what they take in hunting; and in the sands of their rivulets they meet with plenty of gold-dust. The fruits of America, particularly the cacao, or chocolate-nut, thrive as well here, as in their native soil. The Spaniards have the dominion of Luconia, and almost all the rest of the Philippine Islands; and their Viceroy acts as arbitrarily here, as in any of their settlements, being at so great a distance from Spain, and it is one of the most profitable posts belonging to the Spanish monarchy. The ecclesiastical government is lodged in the archb. of Manilla, who has a great many suffragans under him; and the officers of the inquisition exercise their authority here, as in other Popish countries, only they suffer the natives, the Chinese, and Mahometans, to profess their respective religions. It was near this island of Luconia, that Mr. Anson took the rich Acapulco ship, the treasure whereof he brought to England, anno 1744.

LUNENBURG DUCHY, a pr. of Germany, in the cir. of Lower Saxony, including Zell, is bounded by the river Elbe, which separates it from Holstein and Lawenburg on the N. by the mar. of Brandenburg on the E. by the D. of Brunswic on the S. and by the D. of Bremen and Westphalia on the W. being 100 m. long, and 70 broad; part of it a barren sandy desert, another part of it covered with woods and forests; but it has some fruitful lands near the banks of their rivers: however, it is generally a cold, uncomfortable country; and the people esteemed the greatest churls in Germany; but as it abounds in wild hogs, deer, and other venison, the German nobility frequently resort thither to hunt in the season. The duchies of Lunenburg and Zell, on the death of George-William, the last Duke, anno 1705, devolved on the Electors of Hanover, his only daughter and heirs, and are now descended to his present majesty King George II. as heir of the said Princess, and the late King George, Elector of Hanover, consort to that Princess.

LUNENBURG, E. lon. 10. 20. lat. 53. 35. capital of the D. of Lunenburg, sit. on the river Ilmenow, 45 m. N. of Zell, and 30 m. S. E. of Hamburg. The figure of the town is an oblong, and the circumference about 2 m. the streets broad, and tolerably well built. At the salt-springs, near this city, great quantities of salt are made, which is the principal employment of the inhabitants, and brings a good revenue to the sovereign.

MACKERAN, E. lon. 66. lat. 26. capital of the pr. of Mackeran, sit. 100 m. N. W. of Tata.

MACRO, or MACRONISSA, an island of the Archipelago, near the coast of Achaia, sit. 20 m. E. of Athens.

* MACROOMP, a small market town in the co. of Cork, and pr. of Munster in Ireland, sit. 16 m. N. W. from Cork, and 130 S. W. of Dublin.

MADAGASCAR, or ST. LAURENCE, is an island of Africa, sit. between 43 and 51 degrees of E. lon. and between 12 and 26 degrees of S. lat. 300 m. S. E. of the continent of Africa, and is about 1000 m. in length from N. to S. and generally between 2 and 300 m. broad. It abounds in corn, cattle, fish, fowl, and all manner of animals and vegetables that are to be found on the continent of Africa. Here are a great variety of hills, valleys, woods, and champaign, and it is well watered with springs and rivers; nor does there want good harbours; and yet, not any European nation has thought it worth while to plant colonies here, it producing no merchandize that will bear the expence of so long a voyage, except Negroes, which are purchased here as well as on the continent by trading ships. But, besides Negroes, there are white men, and a tawny generation, upon the coast, who are descended from the Arabs, as is evident from their language and their religious rites, having a mixture of Mahometanism, Judaism, and Paganism; but they have no mosques or temples, or any stated worship.

The country is divided amongst a great many petty sovereigns, to whom the seamen that touch there give the title of Kings and Princes, who making war on each other, as they do on the continent, sell their prisoners for slaves to the shipping which call here; taking cloathing, utensils, and other necessaries in return. European pirates frequently have their stations in the harbours of this island; among whom was Every, or Avery, so much talked of about 50 years ago, and to suppress whom five English men of war were sent thither. But these pirates seem to be as powerful as any of the princes of Madagascar, and bid defiance to their enemies, who come to attack them, either by sea or land. It was conjectured, the pirates would have formed a petty state in this island, having 6 or 7 sail of ships with them, on the N. E. part of Madagascar, whither they used to carry in the prizes they made in the Indian seas, and fortified the avenues to the harbour where they secure them; but what is become of them (whether they remain there, or have left the island) is uncertain.

MADERA's are islands that lie in 16 deg. of W. lon. and between 32 and 33 deg. of N. lat. sit. in the Atlantic ocean, 300 m. N. of the Canary islands, and 300 W. of Sallee in the empire of Morocco in Africa. The largest of them is called Madera, or rather Mattera, by the Portuguese, from its being covered with wood. It is about 120 m. in circumference. The woods being burnt down, and the island made fruitful by the ashes, it was planted with vines by the Portuguese, and produces incredible quantities of wine, which has that peculiar good quality, that it keeps best in the hottest weather and in the hottest climates, where other wines turn sour; and this is the reason they drink scarce any other wine in Jamaica and the Caribbee islands. The other islands are exceeding small, and produce little wine. They were planted by the Portuguese, anno 1425, and are still subject to that crown.

MADRE DE POPA, W. lon. 76. lat. 11. a town and convent of the Terra Firma, in S. America, sit. on the river Grande, 50 m. E. of Carthagena; almost as much resorted to by the Catholic pilgrims of America, as the chapel of Loretto is by the pilgrims of Europe; and numberless miracles are said to have been wrought too by the Blessed Virgin in favour of the Spanish fleets, and sea-faring men, which makes them very bountiful in their offerings at her shrine.

MADRID, W. lon. 4. 15. lat. 40. 30. capital of the pr. of New Castile, and of the kingdom of Spain, sit. almost in the middle of a large, sandy plain, surrounded with high mountains, 800 m. S. W. of London, 680 S. W. of Paris, and 300 E. of Lisbon; being about 7 m. in circumference, without walls or fortifications, containing several grand streets and spacious squares; the largest and most magnificent is that of the Place Mayor, surrounded by stately, uniform houses, five stories high, with balconies to every story; the whole supported by a cloister or collonade with arches; here their chief market is held, and here they celebrate their victories and successes by bull-fights; but their finest houses have only laticevice-windows. The nobility have no courts or yards before their houses, but they stand even with the street. There are 3 royal palaces at Madrid, called the Palace Royal, the Casa del Campo, and the Buen Retiro.

MADRID also is the name of a ruinous royal palace in France, not far from Paris.

MADRIGAL, W. lon. 75. 30. N. lat. 30. min. a city of S. America, in the pr. of Popayan, 120 m. S. of the city of Popayan; sub. to Spain.

MADURA, a pr. of the Hither India in Asia, bounded by Tanjour on the N. E. by the Indian sea, which separates it from the island of Ceylon, on the S. E. and by the mountains of Balagat, which divide it from Malabar, on the W. The Prince of this country is subject, or at least tributary, to the Mogul.

MADURA CITY, cap. of the pr. of Madura, E. lon. 77. lat. 10. sit. 100 m. N. of Cape-Comorin, the most southern promontory of the Hither India, 300 m. S. W. of Fort St. George, and 150 m. S. E. of Calicut. The natives most of them Blacks.

MAELA, W. lon. 20 min. lat. 41. 16. a town of Spain, in the pr. of Aragon, on the confines of Catalonia, sit. 50 m. S. E. of Saragossa.

MAES river, rises in Burgundy, and runs N. through Lorrain and Champain into the Netherlands, having passed by Toul, Verdun, Sedan, and Dinant, and receives the Sambre at Namur; after which it runs N. E. by Liege, Maestricht, Venlo, and Grave, then W. to Gorcum, and having joined the Waal, runs W. to Dort, discharging itself into the German sea a little below the Briel.

MAESLAND SLUCE, E. lon. 4. lat. 52. a town of Holland, in the ter. of Delfland, situate 5 miles South of Delft.

MAESTRICHT, E. lon. 5. 40. lat. 50. 55. sit. on the river Maes, 13 m. N. of Liege, and 35 E. of Louvain. The town which, lies on the W. side of the river, is in Liege, but the wyche or suburb, which is on the E. side of the river, is in Limburg; the whole is garrison'd by the Dutch, who have also the civil government of that part of Maestricht call'd the town, which is about 4 m. in circumference, and strongly fortified. There are 3 Dutch churches, but more of the Roman Catholics, who are most numerous. The Dutch took this town from the Spaniards, anno 1632, but it was taken from them by the French K. in person, anno 1673, who restored it again to the Dutch by the treaty of Nimeguen, anno 1679, in whose possession it remains.

MAESYCH, E. lon. 5. 45. lat. 51. 10. a town of Germany, in the bish. of Liege, sit. on the river Maes, 16 m. N. E. of Maestricht.

MAGADOXA, E. long. 41. N. lat. 2. capital of the ter. of Magadoxa, sit. at the mouth of a river of the same name on the coast of Anian in Africa, 220 m. S. of Adea.

MAGDEBURG DUCHY, in the cir. of Lower Saxony in Germany, is bounded by Brandenburg on the N. and E. by Anhalt and Halberstat on the S. and by the D. of Brunswic on the N. W. being 60 m. long, and 30 broad. It is divided by the river Elbe; the East side whereof is great part of it forest, the W. a fruitful country.

MAGDEBURG, E. lon. 12. lat. 52. 15. the capital of the D. of Magdeburg, is sit. on the river Elb, 70 m. W. of Berlin. This D. was an archb. till the year 1648, when it was assigned to the Elector of Brandenburg, and converted into a duchy, the revenue whereof is 100,000 l. per annum. In this univ. Luther the reformer was educated.

MAGDELENA, a great river of S. America, which rising near the equator, runs N. thro' the Terra-firma, and joining its waters with the river Cance, obtains the name of the river Grande, and falls into the N. sea below the town of Madre de Popa.

* MAGEE, an island sit. on the N. E. coast of the co. of Antrim in Ireland, on the N. side of Carrigfergus bay, being 6 m. long, and 2 broad, W. lon. 6 lat. 54. 50.

M A

* MAGHERAFELT, a post town in the co. of Londonderry, and pr. of Ulster in Ireland, sit. on the borders of Loughneagh, 88 m. N. W. of Dublin.

* MAGHERALIN, or MARALIN, a small well planted village, sit. on the river Logan in the co. of Down, and pr. of Ulster in Ireland, noted for it's being the seat of the bish. of Dromore and others, and also for a great linen trade. Sit. 2 m. N. W. of Lurgan.

MAGELLAN STRAITS, sit. between 76 and 84 degrees of W. lon. and between 52 and 54 degrees of S. lat. being upwards of 300 m. in length from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, but of a very unequal breadth, being in some places several leagues over, and in others not half a league; the land on both sides mountainous. These were discover'd and pass'd by Ferdinand Magellan, a Portuguese, in the service of Spain, anno, 1520, in his attempt to find a way to the East-Indies by the W. which he effected; but being killed in the Molucca islands, his ship return'd by the Cape of Good Hope, round Africa, and was the first that ever surrounded the globe. Admiral Drake pass'd them also in his voyage round the world; but ships that have gone to the S. sea of late years have pass'd round Cape Horn, in which they find fewer inconveniences than in passing the straits.

MAGGIORE LAKE, sit. partly in the D. of Milan, and partly in the country of the Grisons, being about 35 m. long, and 6 broad, the river Tessin running through it.

MAGNA VACCA, E. lon. 13. lat. 44. 50. a port town of Italy, in the D. of Ferrara, and ter. of the Pope, sit. on the gulph of Venice, 16 m. N. of Ravenna.

MAGNELONE, a lake in the S. part of Languedoc in France, near the Mediterranean sea, and which runs parallel to it from the city of Agde to Aigue Mortes, being 40 m. long, and 1 broad.

MAGNI, E. lon. 1. 50. lat. 49.

M A

12. a town in France, in the pr. of the Isle of France, fr. 27 m. N. W. of Paris.

MAIDENHEAD, W. lon. 45 min. lat. 51. 33. a market town in Berkshire, 12 m. N. E. of Reading.

MAIDSTONE, E. lon. 37 min. lat. 51. 20. the county town of Kent, sit. on the Medway, 36 m. S. E. of London, and 22 m. W. of Canterbury; sends two members to parliament.

MAILAZAIS, W. lon. 45 min. lat. 46. 29. a city of France, in the pr. of Orleans, and ter. of Poictou, sit. 20 m. N. of Rochelle.

MAINE, a river of Germany, which rising on the E. side of the cir. of Franconia, runs from E. to W. through that cir. passing by the cities of Bamberg, Wurtzburg, Aschaffenburg, Hanau and Francfort, and discharges itself into the Rhine at Mentz.

MAINE, the N. W. part of the pr. of Orleanois in France; the capital, Mans.

MAINE, a British pr. of New-England, in America, bounded by Nova Scotia on the N. E. by the Massachuset bay on the S. and by the pr. of New Hampshire on the S. W. and N. W.

MAINLAND, the chief of the islands of Shetland, in the co. of the Orcades in Scotland.

MAJORCA, a Spanish island in the Mediterranean sea, sit. about 80 m. S. of the coast of Catalonia, and 100 m. E. of Valencia, and is about 60 m. long and 45 broad. It is a mountainous country, but produces corn, wine, oil and fruit, and has several good harbours. This was the chief of those islands called by the ancients, Baleares, famous for their slingers.

MAJORCA CITY, E. lon. 2. 30. lat. 39. 30. the capital of the isle of Majorca, sit. at the bottom of a large bay on the S. W. part of the island, and contains about 6000 houses, surrounded by a wall and other modern fortifications. It is the see of a bish. and contains 22 churches besides the cathedral.

MAIRE

M A

MAIRE STRAIT, sit. between Terra del Fuego in S. America, and Staten island, a passage to Cape Horn, which being discover'd by Le Maire, obtain'd his name. It is little used at present, ships going round Staten island as well as Cape Horn into the South sea.

MALABAR COAST, sit. on the S. W. part of the peninsula of the Hither India in Asia, is bounded by Vissiapour on the N. by the mountains of Baligate on the E. and by the Indian ocean on the W. and S. being about 400 m. long, and 100 broad, divided among a great many petty princes and states, but tributary to the Mogul. There are several European powers that have colonies and settlements on this coast, from whence they import chiefly pepper.

MALACCA, the most southerly part of the further peninsula of India in Asia, is bounded by Siam (of which kingdom it is sometimes reckon'd a part) on the N. by the bay of Siam and the Indian ocean on the E. and by the straits of Malacca, which separate it from the island of Sumatra, on the S. W. being about 600 m. long, and generally about 200 broad, but in many places much less. The people of Malacca are more subject to the Dutch, who possess all the strong places on the coast, than to the K. of Siam, or any other power. The Dutch compel the people of Malacca to traffic with them on such terms as they prescribe, excluding all the rest of the nations of Europe from all commerce with the natives.

MALACCA CITY, capital of the country, is sit. in 100 degrees of E. lon. and 2 degrees 30 min. N. lat. in a flat country close to the sea. The walls and fortifications are founded on a solid rock, and carried up to a great height; the lower part of them washed by the sea at every tide, and on the land-side is a wide canal or ditch, cut from the sea to the river, which makes it an island. The inhabitants consist of Dutch, Portuguese, Chinese, Moors, Malaysans, and some Armenian merchants; but it is not a place of great trade at this day. It was taken from the Portuguese by the Dutch, anno 1640, when it enjoyed a flourishing trade, and was more frequented than any other town in India, except Goa; for here was the rendezvous of their shipping from China, Japan, and the spice islands, but the Dutch have removed the trade to Batavia, and make use of this fortress chiefly to command the straits, and keep the natives in subjection. The tawny people, who inhabit this part of the country, and the neighbouring islands, are usually called Malays.

MALAGA, W. lon. 4. 45. lat. 36. 40. a city and port town of Spain, in the pr. of Granada, sit. on the Mediterranean sea, 66 m. N. E. of Gibraltar. It stands at the foot of a steep mountain, close to the sea, and is neither very large nor well built, but is considerable on account of its trade, its harbour, and the strength of its fortifications. Near this city the English, and their confederates the Dutch, commanded by Sir George Rook, obtained a victory over the French fleet, anno 1704; since which the French have never attempted to dispute the empire of the sea with them: tho' the victory had been more compleat, if the English had not spent most of their ammunition in taking Gibraltar, and the Dutch had not sent away part of their squadron to convoy their merchant ships home.

MALAMOCCHO, a little island and port town in the Lagunes of Venice, in Italy, sit. 5 m. S. of that city.

MALDA, E. lon. 87. 30. lat. 24. 30. a town of India, in the pr. of Bengal, in Asia, sit. on the river Ganges. Here some European nations have their factors; sit. about 100 m. N. of Huegly.

MALDIVIA ISLANDS, (sit. in the Indian ocean, 500 m. S. W. of the continent of the Hither India, and the island of Ceylon) are a great number of small islands, not less than 1000, extending themselves from the second

Second degree of S. lat. to the seventh degree of N. lat. They are generally flat, low lands, surrounded by rocks and sands, and probably were planted by the Arabians, the people being of the same complexion, and of the Mahometan religion, governed by one sovereign. The channels between the islands are very narrow, and some of them fordable. They do not produce either rice, corn, or herbage; but the natives live upon coco-nuts, and other fruits, roots, and fish: they have little or nothing to barter with other nations, unless those shells called cowries, or blackmoors teeth, with which they abound; and these serve instead of small coin in many parts of India.

MALDON, E. lon. 50. min. lat. 51. 45. a port town of Essex, sit. at the mouth of the river Chelmer, near a bay of the sea, 10 m. E. of Chelmsford; sends two members to parliament.

MALBROUIT, W. lon. 2. 16. lat. 27. 45. a town of France, in the pr. of Britany, sit. on the river Ouse, 37 m. E. of Port Lewis.

MALINES. See MECHLIN.

MALEING, E. lon. 30. min. lat. 51. 20. a market town of Kent, sit. 5 m. W. of Maidstone.

MALLOW, W. lon. 8. 35. lat. 52. a town of Ireland, in the co. of Cork, and pr. of Munster, sit. on the river Blackwater, 17 m. N. of Cork city, and 113 m. S. W. of Dublin. It returns 2 memb. to par. has a barrack for 1 troop of horse, and is noted for a polite assembly at the hot wells, resembling those of Bristol, who meet here, in the summer season.]

MALMEDY, E. lon. 6. 5. lat. 50. 30. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Westphalia, and bish. of Liege, sit. 9 m. S. of Limburg.

MALMOE, E. lon. 13. 20. lat. 55. 20. a port town of Sweden, in the pr. of Gothland, and ter. of Schonen, sit. on the Baltic sea, 20 m. S. E. of Copenhagen.

MALMSBURY, W. lon. 2. 7. lat. 51. 34. a borough town of Wiltshire, sit. 30 m. N. W. of Salisbury; sends two members to parliament.

MALO (Str.) W. lon. 2. lat. 48. 40. a city and port town of France, in the pr. of Britany, sit. on a rock, in the English channel, surrounded by the sea, but joined to the continent by a causeway, 38 m. N. W. of Rennes, and 10 m. N. of Dinant. The harbour is one of the best on the coast, but of difficult access, and will not admit of large vessels. It is but an ill-built town, inhabited chiefly by sea-faring men, and in time of war by privateers, who made abundance of prizes in the war with England, in the reign of K. William, which drew on them a bombardment, that did not, however, do them much harm.

MALORPA, or MELORA, a little island of Italy, on the coast of Tuscany, 10 m. W. of Leghorn, E. lon. 11. lat. 43. 20.

MALPARTIDO, W. lon. 6 lat. 39. 20. a town of Spain, in the pr. of Estremadura, sit. 14 m. S. of Placentia.

MALPACUET BATTLE, anno 1709. See BUAREGNIS.

MALTA, E. lon. 15 lat. 35. 15. an island in the Mediterranean, sit. 60 m. S. of Cape Passaro, in Sicily, and 200 m. E. of Tunis, in Africa. It is of an oval figure, 20 m. long, and 12 broad. It is a white, soft rock, covered a foot deep with earth; producing indigo, cotton, grapes, olives, figs, lemons, oranges, and other fruits; but they have not corn enough for their use, nor make any wine, but import both from Sicily; however it produces plenty of pease, beans, and other pulse, melons and garden stuff; and they have very good springs, but no wood, except their fruit-trees. This island was successively subject to the Phœnicians, Carthaginians, and the Romans; and the Emperor Charles V. gave it to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, after they had lost the island of Rhodes; which they defended 200 years against all the power of Turkey. They were attacked in the island of Malta by Solymann, the Turkish Emperor, anno 1566 1566, but he was forced to abandon the island, after he had lost above 20,000 men in the attempt. The Knights formerly consisted of 8 several nations, but now only of 7, the English having withdrawn themselves on account of their superstitious rites. All the Knights are to be of ancient, noble families, and legitimate; the Grand Crosses, or heads of each nation, are stiled Grand Priors, having each of them their convents of Knights, and estates in every Popish nation appropriated to their maintenance, which are stiled Commanderies. The Priors chuse a grand Master, and are all subject to the Pope in spirituals, and depend also pretty much on those Princes where their lands or commanderies lie. They are obliged to suppress all pirates, and are engaged in a perpetual war with the Turks, Algerines, and other Mahometans. The Knights take vows of celibacy, chastity, &c. and as to matrimony, they generally keep their vow, but introduce, however, great numbers of Grecian Girls, who serve them in the quality of concubines.

M A

MALTA CITY, E. lon. 15. lat. 35. 15. capital of the island, consists of three towns, separated by channels, which form so many peninsulas of solid rock, rising a great height above the sea, and have secure harbours within them, capable of receiving whole fleets; and as the situation is strong, so no art is wanting in the fortifications, to render it impregnable. The streets are spacious, and the houses built of white stone, hewn out of their rocks. Besides the city, there are in the island 26 parishes, and between 30 and 40 villages, containing 50,000 souls, of which one half are military men, and unmarried. Malta is the see of a bish. suffragan of Palermo, in Sicily.

MALTON, W. lon. 30 min. lat. 54. 8. a borough town of Yorkshire, sit. on the river Derwent, 20 m. N. E. of York; sends two members to parliament.

MALVA, a pr. of the Hither India, in Asia, sit. in the middle of India, under the tropic of Cancer; sub. to the Mogul.

MALVASIA, or NAPOLI DE MALVASIA, a city and port town of European Turkey, in the pr. of Morea, sit. on the Archipelago, 30 m. E. of Misitra, or Lacedæmon, and 70 m. S. W. of Setines, or Athens.

MAN ISLAND, sit. in the Irish sea, in 4 degrees 30 min. W. lon. and between 53, 50, and 54, 25 N. lat. 35. m. W. of the coast of Cumberland, and 28 m. N. of Anglesey in Wales, 10 m. S. of the coast of Galloway in Scotland, and 40 E. of the coast of Down in Ireland, from whence the three kingdoms of England, Scotland, and Ireland, may be easily seen at once. It is near 30 m. long, and 8 or 9 broad, containing 17 parishes; the chief towns Ruthin, Douglas, and Peel. The soil is good, consisting of arable and pasture, more than is sufficient for the subsistence of the natives; and the air is esteemed healthful, the people living to a great age. They are a mixture of English, Scots, and Irish, and have a King or Prince of their own, who is the D. of Athol, at present. Their staple commodities are wool, hides, and tallow; and they lie very advantageously for foreign traffic, but more so for the running of goods, which, I presume, was the reason of bringing them under the same laws as England, in relation to the customs. There is a bish. suffragan to York, stiled bish. of Sodor and Man, but he has no seat or voice in the British house of peers, but performs every other part of a bish. by ordaining priests and deacons. The present bish. is the Rev. Dr. Hilderley.

MANAR, E. lon. 79. lat. 9. an island in the Indian sea, in Asia, between the island of Ceylon, and the continent.

MANCHA, a ter. of Spain, in the pr. of New Castile, a mountainous country, sit. between the heads of the rivers Guadiana and Guadalquivir, the feigned scene of some of Don Quixote's adventures.

N. lat. The N. end of the bay of Chesepeak, divides Maryland in two parts, called the eastern and western shores. It is bounded by Pensilvania on the N. by another part of Pensilvania and the Atlantic ocean on the E. by Virginia on the S. and by the Apalachian mountains on the W. It being about 140 miles long, and as many broad. The lands next the sea are low, but they rise gradually, till they terminate in the Apalachian mountains: they were covered with wood, till cleared by the planters; intermixed, however, with savannahs and meadow ground, and watered with many fine rivulets and springs. Their chief produce at present is tobacco, as in Virginia. And the planters live in farms, dispersed about the country, and not in towns; and they have the like convenience of shipping coming up almost to their doors, by the bay of Chesepeak, and navigable rivers; it is a proprietary government. The Lord Baltimore, both governor, and proprietor; the council appointed by him, and the house of representatives chosen by the freeholders. But while this noble family were Catholics, the crown took the government into its hands after the revolution, and it was then a royal government. There are more Roman Catholics here, than in any of the plantations; their first proprietors and governors having been such.

MASSACHUSET COLONY, the principal sub-division of New England, is bounded by New Hampshire on the N. by the Atlantic ocean on the E. and S. and by Connecticut and New York on the W. being about 100 m. long, and 40 broad. This country produces plenty of Indian wheat, but they have little other grain; they have also plenty of mutton, beef, pork, fish and fowl; the country also produces flax and hemp, and they have manufactures of leather, linen, and woollen. They build a great many ships, having timber and other materials for that purpose, and sell them both to the English and foreigners. They have mines both of copper and iron, and manufacture some of their iron, but their manufactures of wool, iron, and leather, as well as that of hats, are discouraged by Old England. They traffic with the Sugar islands, furnishing them with salt meat, fish, and other provisions, and take sugar and molasses in return, and have set up still-houses for making rum; there are also some sugar-bakers amongst them. Their government has a mixture of the royal and the charter government, for though the King appoints a governor, the assembly of representatives appoint the council, or upper house, nor will they fix a salary on their governor, that they may have the greater influence on him. This is much the most powerful colony we have, both by sea and land; they have mariners enough to man a large fleet, and can raise 20,000 land men in case of necessity. As to their religion, the bulk of the people are independents, but abundance of them come over to the church of England of late. MECKLENBURG DUCHY, a pr. of Germany, in the cir. of Lower Saxony, is bounded by the Baltic sea on the N. by Pomerania on the E. by Brandenburg on the S. and by the Duchies of Holstein, Lunenburg, and Lawenburg, on the W. being about 100 miles long, and 60 broad. It is a fruitful country, well watered with lakes and rivers, and extremely well sit. on the Baltic, for a foreign trade, some of the principal Hans towns lying in this pr. viz. Rostock, Wismar, Swerin, &c. The Duchy is sub. to the D. of Mecklenburg, who assuming an arbitrary power of taxing his subjects, they appealed to the Aulic Council, which determined, that according to the constitution of that country, the nobility and gentry could not be taxed above a certain sum; and decreed that the D. should restore what he had unjustly taken away from them; for refusing which, he was expelled his dominions, and the administration of the government given to his brother by a decree of the aulic council for a time. He was restored about 10 years after, and on his death his son Prince Frederic, the reigning Prince, succeeded him.

MEDITERRANEAN SEA, extends from the straits of Gibraltar to the coasts of Syria and Palestine, being upwards of 2000 m. in length, but of a very unequal breadth. The West part of it separating Europe from Africa, and the Levant, or East part of it, dividing Asia from Africa, Spain, France, Italy, Turkey in Europe, and Natolia, or the Lesser Asia, bounding it on the N. and the Empire of Morocco, Algiers, Tunis, Tripoli, Barca, and Egypt, bounding it on the S. The strait of Gibraltar, between Europe, and Asia, being about 16 m. over, a strong current sits through it, out of the Atlantic ocean, into the Mediterranean constantly, which requires a good gale of wind to stem it; but whither these waters run, or whether there be any subterraneous passage to carry them off, is uncertain; some imagine they evaporate, or are attracted by the sun, which is the reason they never rise higher at one time than another; for they don't observe a tide, but in some few places of the Mediterranean, viz. at Tunis, Messina, Venice, and Negropont, and they are the most irregular in the world at Negropont, flowing at some times of the moon, 6 or 7 times in 24 hours.

MESSASIPPI, or MESCHASIPPI, a country of N. America, bounded by Canada on the N. the British plantations on the E. the gulph of Mexico on the S. and the pr. of New Mexico on the W.

MESSASIPPI RIVER, which gives the name to the country, rises in Canada, and runs to the southward, till it falls into the gulph of Mexico. It is a large navigable river, said to run above 2000 m. to which, as well as the adjacent country, the French lay claim, and have possessed themselves of part of the country, ever since the year 1712, giving the river the name of St. Louis, and the country the name of Louisiana, and have made great efforts towards planting it, as it is a most fruitful and desirable country, of vast extent; tho' the E. part of it, in reality, belongs to Great-Britain, and the W. to the Spaniards, who have planted part of these countries long since, and are every day extending their settlements into it. The French raised the expectations of their people so high, in relation to the immense riches that were to be acquired by planting it, in the year 1719, that every one was ready to throw his money into the stocks; which the company sold at upwards of 2000 per cent. but the government seized most of the money, and the adventurers were ruined; which put a stop to the planting this country, at that time, but it has been encouraged since, and if the English don't oppose their encroachments, before they are grown too powerful on that side, they are like to be very troublesome neighbours to the British plantations.

plantations. [In 1670, two ships sent by Dr. Cox, of New-Jersey, first discovered the mouth of this river, and sailing up 100 m. took possession and called it Carolina; and next year the French first found it out. They have no other inlet to their colonies of N. America but by this river; and that of St. Lawrence whose mouths are above 1000 leagues asunder, and both their entrances are of very difficult access.]

MEUSE RIVER. See MAESE.

MEXICO, which 260 years ago was a potent and extensive empire in America, is now a province of Spain, and has obtain'd the name of NEW SPAIN.

It is divided into OLD and NEW MEXICO.

OLD MEXICO is situate between 83 and 116 degrees of W. lon. and between 8 and 28 degrees of N. lat. bounded by New Mexico, or Granada, on the N. by the gulph of Mexico on the N. E. by Terra Firma on the S. E. and by the Pacific ocean on the S. W. being upwards of 2000 m. long. and from 60 to 600 broad.

It is generally a mountainous country, high hills running through it from the S. E. to the N. W. The highest mountains are near the coast of the Pacific ocean, many of them Volcano's. The eastern shore is a flat level country, abounding in bogs and morasses, and overflowed in the rainy season, but so covered with thickets of Bambou cane, Mangroves, and bushes, that the logwood cutters are forced to make their way through it with their hatchets. The hills between the mountains and the flat country are best inhabited, and there the air is most temperate. Within the tropic of Cancer they have their annual periodical rains, and when the sun is vertical, is their coolest season; the sun being obscur'd by clouds, and the flat country under water, their fair weather is when the sun is in the southern signs, at the greatest distance from them.

The time of planting Indian corn and rice is in May and June, when the rains begin, and they reap in October or November, when the fair season commences: The springs and rivers are very low in March and April, and the beginning of May; the country then then affords neither grafs or herbage, unless it is water'd, but the trees are always green, and their fruit-trees blossom and bear almost all the year round.

Their fruit trees are the Cabbage-tree, the cacao, or chocolate-nut, venella's, plantains, pine-apples, coco's, sapadillo's, avagato pears, mammee trees, guava's, prickly pears, oranges and lemons, &c. with a great variety of gums and drugs. Their forest trees are cedar, logwood, manchineal, bamboe, mangroves, mahoe, white wood, &c.

There were neither horses, neat cattle, camels, elephants, sheep, hogs, goats, asses, or dogs, except some little dumb dogs, until the Europeans imported them; but they had lions, tygers, bears, elks-deer, moose, peccaree, warree, beavers, opossums, armadillos, guanoes, and flying squirrels, racoons, crocodiles, manatee monkeys, parrots, macaws, pelicans, cormorants, and a variety of snakes, scorpions, and insects, among which the cochineal is the most valuable.

The present inhabitants of Mexico are, 1. native Indians, 2. Spaniards, 3. Crioli, the descendants of Spaniards, 4. Metees, 5. Negroes, and, 6. Mulattoes.

Mexico is governed by a Spanish viceroy, who acts as despotically as any Prince in Europe. It is divided into three audiences, where their supreme courts of judicature are held, viz. 1. The audience of Guadalajara, or New Galicia, the most northern division. 2. The audience of Mexico Proper, which is the middle division; and, 3. The audience of Guatimala, the most southern division; and each of these audiences is again subdivided into several provinces, which will be found under their respective heads. Their forces by sea or land are not formidable, and they have but few fortified towns; their best sea-ports have been taken and plundered by an inconsiderable number of Buccaneers, and their territories are too extensive to be defended in every part.

The revenues of the crown are vastly great, arising from the king's 5th of gold and silver, from the excise and other duties, and customs, and from the rents and services, by which all the lands are held of the crown.

The ancient Mexicans worshipped one supreme God, the planets, and departed heroes, and, according to the Spaniards, sacrificed men.

The present inhabitants are obliged to profess popery on pain of the inquisition, and the Spanish clergy are very numerous, as well as monks and nuns; but the chief dignities in church and state are conferr'd on native Spaniards, and not given to the Crioli, descended from them. These are hardly used by the Spaniards, and very little trusted, and would scarce oppose any European power that should invade their country.

MEXICO CITY, W. lon. 103. lat. 20. the metropolis of New Spain at present, and anciently of the empire of Mexico, is situate in the middle of a spacious lake, and cannot be approached but by causeys of a great length: it is of a square figure, about six miles in circumference, and vastly populous, admir'd for its spacious streets and squares, the beauty of its buildings, the coolness of the situation in this hot climate, and its natural strength. It is an archbishopric, and contains 29 monasteries, 22 nunneries, and a great number of parochial churches; but the Spaniards and Crioli do not make a tenth part of the inhabitants, the other nine are either Negroes and Mulattoes that have obtain'd their freedom, or a mix'd breed of Spaniards and Indians.

MEXICO NEW, including California, is situate between 100 and 140 degrees of W. lon. and between the tropic of Cancer and 48 degrees of N. lat. bounded by unknown lands on the N. by Florida on the E. by Old Mexico on the S. and by the Pacific ocean on the W. a temperate, fruitful country, and abounds in rich silver mines, of which the chief are those of St. Barbe; the capital city Sta. Fe, W. lon. 110. lat. 36.

MILAN DUCHY, in Italy, bounded by Switzerland on the N. by the

ter. of Venice and the Duchies of Mantua and Parma on the E. by the Appenine mountains, which separate it from Genoa, on the S. and by Piedmont on the W. being about 80 m. in length, and 60 in breadth, well watered with lakes and rivers, a temperate air, and the whole country one fruitful plain, almost, abounding with corn, wine, and delicious fruits, intermixed with great numbers of fine towns and villages, and sub. to the house of Austria.

MILAN CITY, E. lon. 9. 30. lat. 45. 25. the capital of the Milanese, in Italy, sit. on the rivers Olana, and Lombro. 250 m. N. W. of Rome, and 100 m. N. E. of Turin. The city is of a round form, 10 m. in circumference, containing 300,000 inhabitants: it is surrounded by a wall, and other modern fortifications, which would require an army to defend them; but the citadel is one of the strongest fortresses in Italy, and the town contains a great many spacious streets and squares, elegantly built. Their manufactures are chiefly silk, brocade, and other rich stuffs; their works of steel and crystal much admired, and their artificers such excellent artists, that they seem to have monopolized the trade of that part of Italy, and are accordingly esteemed a rich and thriving people. The Milanese is subject to the house of Austria, who have a Vicar-General, or Viceroy in this city; and the revenues of this Duchy are computed to amount to 300,000 l. per annum. The civil government is lodged in a senate, but subject to the countrol of the Viceroy; and the several cities and districts of Milan are governed by their own magistrates, sub. to the like countrol. Milan is the see of an arch-bishop. Some territories of the Milanese were ceded by the Empress to the K. of Sardinia for his services in the late wars. See Moll's maps.

The lageſt of them ſcarce 30 m. in circumference. They produce neither corn, rice, or cattle, except goats. They have, however, ſago bread, oranges, lemons, and ſome other fruits: but what is peculiar to theſe iſlands, and in return for which they are furniſhed with the produce of every other country, is their cloves, which grow upon trees reſembling bay-trees, the fruit growing in cluſters, like bunches of grapes. The Portugueſe and Spaniards were the firſt Europeans that found the way to theſe iſlands; the Portugueſe by the E. and the Spaniards by the W. The Engliſh and Dutch afterwards traded with the natives; but the Dutch in the reign of K. James I. drove every other nation from thence, erected fortrefſes upon them, and eradicated the cloves there, planting them in the adjacent iſland of Amboyna, where they have made themſelves too ſtrong to be attacked by any power with ſucceſs. But, if the

S. of Paris; a little city, in which it is computed there are between 2 and 3000 inhabitants, among whom are a great number of physicians, and 200 apothecaries, who get a good livelihood by their numerous compositions, viz. Hungary-water, oil of Spike, Capillary syrups, essences, perfumes, &c. which they distribute all over Europe. The delightfulness of the situation, and serenity of the air, draw a great many people of distinction hither; and the reputation of enjoying a healthful air, that will restore broken constitutions, occasions foreigners to resort hither from all parts of Europe. People do not only practise physic here, but study it, this being a university designed chiefly for students in that science.

MOROCCO EMPIRE, in Africa, comprehending the kingdoms of Fez and Morocco, is bounded by the Mediterranean sea on the N. by the river Mulvia, which divides it from Algiers, on the E. by Bildulgerid on the S. and by the Atlantic ocean on the W. being about 500 m. long, and 200 broad. It is a fine country, consisting of mountains and vast extended plains, none of them unfruitful; of the mountains those of Atlas are the chief, extending from Algiers in the E. to the ocean in the W. which from them has obtained the name of the Atlantic ocean. Their animals of most use here, are camels, and they have a very fine breed of horses; and in their desarts are found lions, tygers, leopards, and serpents of a prodigious size, if travellers don't deceive us. Their soil produces wine, good wheat, rice, and barley, and would yield a great deal more, if well cultivated; but only the Jews plant the vine; the olive also thrives here, and yields excellent oil. They have also dates, figs, almonds, lemons, oranges, pomegranates, and a variety of other fruits; nor do they want flax or hemp; but wood, especially timber, is scarce here. They have no ships of war, war, only some small pyratival vessels, which they croud with men, and take great prizes sometimes, especially the Sallee rovers; but as for merchant ships or a foreign trade, they carry on none on their own bottoms. Their trade by land is either with Arabia or Negroland; to Mecca they send caravans consisting of several thousand camels, horses, and mules, twice every year, partly for traffic, and partly on a religious account; great numbers of pilgrims taking this opportunity of visiting Mecca. They carry thither fine woollen manufactures, Moroccoskins, indigo, cochineal, and ostrich-feathers, bringing back silks, muslins, calicoes, coffee, and drugs. By the caravans which go to Negroland, they send salt, silks, and woollen manufactures, taking gold, ivory, and Negro slaves in return; and with these Negroes the Emperor recruits his cavalry.

The Emperor is absolute in his dominions, and the crown is said to be hereditary; but if there be more sons than one, they usually fight it out on the decease of their father, till there is but one left. This nation is disturbed by civil wars on every change, but the Prince who is most in favour with the soldiers usually succeeds; for there is always a very numerous army kept up. It is computed that the black cavalry and infantry alone, amount to 40,000 men, and the Moorish horse and foot (which are white, or tawny rather) amount to near as many, but the Blacks are esteemed their best horse, and these they chiefly rely on, both in their domestic and foreign wars. The revenues of the Emperor arise from the tenth of all corn, and of all captives and prizes taken, and duties on goods imported and exported, the whole amounting to 500 quintals of silver, each quintal 330 l. sterling. As to their religion it is Mahometanism, and I think of the Persian sect; and there are great numbers of Santos and Marabouts, that pretend, like other hermits, to a more than ordinary sanctity, and have a great influence over this people.

MOROCCO CITY, capital of the kingdom: of Morocco, in Africa, W. lon. 9. at. 32. sit. 200 m. S. W. of Fez. Both the city and the fortifications are now in a declining state, the seat of the empire being removed from thence; and it is much to be doubted if ever it was that elegant city which some old writers make it.

S. lat. 15. the capital of the pr. of Mosambique, sit. on an island at the mouth of the river Mosambique, which forms a commodious harbour, defended by a citadel, and the town itself is regularly fortified. This island is 30 m. round, and very populous; the Portuguese having the dominion of this, and the adjacent country, have built several churches and monasteries in it, and the friars assure us they make great numbers of proselytes in this part of Africa. Here also they barter their merchandize with the natives, whom they have taught taught to cloath themselves, for gold, ivory, and slaves; and here their shipping takes in refreshment, in their voyages to the E. Indies, and the country producing great herds of cattle, they salt up beef here, to send to their other plantations, or sell it to European shipping.

Nicaragua on the S. and Honduras on the W. and indeed the Spaniards esteem it a part of the pr. of Honduras, tho' they have no colonies in the Moskito country. When the Spaniards first invaded this part of Mexico, they massacred the greatest part of the natives, which gave those that escaped into the inaccessible part of the country, an insuperable aversion to them; and they have always appeared ready to join any Europeans that come upon their coast against the Spaniards, and particularly the English, who frequently come hither, and the Moskito men being excellent marksmen, the English employ them in striking the manatee-fish, and many of the Moskito Indians come to Jamaica, and sail with the English in their voyages: and some officers have been lately sent into that country to see if it may not be an advantage to Britain to fix some colonies amongst them.

NANTS, W. lon. 1. 30. lat. 47. 15. a city of France, in the pr. of Britany, sit. on the river Loir. 30 m. E. of the ocean, and 45 m. W. of Angers, a large populous city, and has as extensive a foreign trade as any city in the K. tho' no ships of burden can come so high up the river, but are obliged to unload at Pambeuf, near the mouth of the river.

NANTUCKET, W. lon. 70. lat. 41. an island on the coast of New England in N. America, sit. 80 m. S. of Boston, the people whereof apply themselves chiefly to the whale-fishery on the coast, and have lately fished for whales in Greenland, being as dextrous at it as the Dutch, tho' not so numerous; and if they were encouraged by their mother country, 'tis said, we should not be under a necessity of purchasing such vast quantities of whalebone from Holland, as we have done of late years.

NANTWICH, W. lon. 2. 32. lat. 53. 6. a market town of Cheshire, sit. 17 m. S. W. of Chester.

NAPLES kingdom, one of the Sicily's, is the S. E. part of Italy, being sit. between 14 and 19 deg. of E. lon. and between 38 and 43 deg. of N. lat. bounded by the gulph of Venice on the N. E. by the Mediterranean sea on the S. E. by Sicily and the Tulcan

N A

Sea on the S. W. and by the Pope's territories on the N. W. being divided from the island of Sicily only by the narrow strait or pharo of Messina.

NAPLES CITY, E. lon. 15. lat. 41. the cap. of the kingdom of Naples in Italy, sit. 140 m. S. E. of Rome, and 15 degrees E. of London, being 7 miles in circumference within the walls, and as much more if the suburbs are included, and contains about 300,000 inhabitants. It stands on an eminence, rising gradually from the sea to a moderate height, on a fine bay of the sea of 30 m. diameter; and the islands which lie before it form a secure and commodious harbour. On the E. is a large plain, on the further side whereof is mount Vesuvius, and on the W. a large hill, on which stands the castle of St. Elmo, and a Carthusian monastery, from whence we are entertained with the finest prospect in the world: Here it is seldom cold in winter, and in summer the cold breezes from the mountains and the sea make the hottest part of it very tolerable: nor is the sea subject to storms; and they have so bold a shore, that large ships may lie close to the kays. Corn, wine, and oil, are excellent in their kind, and exceeding plentiful; and the air is pure, serene, and healthful. The buildings are magnificent and elegant, and inhabited by people of distinction: nor can there be in all respects a more desirable situation, did not the eruptions of Vesuvius, and earthquakes, sometimes disturb their quiet, as well as the frequent revolutions observed in this K. for it being so desirable a country, the neighbouring powers are perpetually contending for it; Germany, France, and Spain, have alternately had the dominion of it; it seldom has the same sovereign forty years. The dignified clergy and nobility of this K. are very numerous; there are, 'tis said, 25 archb. 125 bish. 300 princes, dukes, marquisses, and earls. The clergy possess one third of the K. the crown, the nobility, and gentry, the rest; the peasants have scarce any thing they can call their own; they are subjects and vassals to their respective Lords, manure their lands, plant their vineyards, and oliveyards, and are allowed only a subsistence sufficient to enable them to perform their daily drudgery, and receive justice in their lords courts, in cases that are not capital, inasmuch that every lord or gentleman, who is proprietor of the soil, is sovereign of the people who live upon his estate. Tho' they abound in silk, that manufacture is not great; they send most of it abroad unwrought: and all the merchandize and produce of this rich soil is carry'd abroad in foreign shipping, they having few ships of their own, or indeed merchants, the proprietors of the lands selling the produce of their respective estates to foreigners. The natives being many of them of Spanish extraction, they follow the Spanish modes, and cloath themselves in black, which makes the silk manufacture the less. They have a numerous militia, the nobility and gentry holding their lands by military tenures; but these are little depended on, and seldom call'd out, the K. usually maintaining 15,000 regular troops in time of peace, and can raise twice that number in time of war: they had no men of war lately, but are beginning to build some; and they have a fleet of armed gallies. The revenues of the crown are computed to amount to one million sterl. per. ann. which arise from a composition with the nobility and gentry for certain sums, in lieu of their personal services, from a duty on houses, and almost a general excise. It was a tax on fruits, which the common people live upon, that occasioned the insurrection under Massinello; and it seems fruit has been exempt from taxes almost ever since: those who are most oppressed by taxes are the Genoese, and other foreigners, whose estates lie in this country, and these are pretty numerous. Naples has been governed by Spanish, or German vice-roys, till Don Carlos, the late K. of Spain's second son, was set upon the throne by the united powers of France, Spain, and Sardinia, anno 1734. And as this Prince obtained the crown by force, by the like force he must defend his possession, unless he can obtain the affections of the people by a wise and gentle administration. The crown claims a power of taxing the nobility and gentry, and raising what forces the court thinks necessary; but 'tis dangerous carrying these prerogatives too high, as long as the K. has so powerful a competitor as the Q. of Hungary. The clergy are not taxed here, but grant a free gift, which is proportionable to the taxes on the laity at least.

NAPOLI DE MALVASIA, E. lon. 23. 30. lat. 36. 51. a port town of the Morea, sit. at the entrance of the gulph of Napoli de Romania, and 40 m. S. E. of that city.

NAPOLI DE ROMANIA, E. lon. 23. 20. lat. 37. 30. a city and port town of European Turkey, in the pr. of the Morea, sit. at the bottom of a bay of the same name in the Archipelago, 60 m. S. W. of Setines or Athens, one of the strongest towns in the Morea, and said to contain 60,000 Grecian inhabitants, besides Turks. It is the see of an archb.

NARAGANSET, the ancient name of a country in New England in America, E. of the river Connecticut, now in the county of New London.

NARBARTH, W. lon. 4. 46. lat. 51. 50. a town of Pembrokeshire in South Wales, sit. 10 m. N. E. of Pembroke.

NARBONE, E. lon. 2. 40. lat. 43. 18. a city of France, in the pr. of Languedoc, lying in a valley surrounded with mountains, 6 m. W. of the Mediterranean, with which it has a communication by a canal, as it has also with the royal canal, being 60 m. W. of Montpellier. 'Tis a large city, and in the time of the Romans was the capital of this part of Gaul, called from hence Gallia Narbonensis; and here are still the ruins of the capital, a marble amphitheatre, and noble aqueducts. It is the see of an archb. who is president of the states of Languedoc.

NARBOROUGH island, W. lon. 85. S. lat. 45. an isle of South America, in the Pacific ocean, sit. on the coast of Chili, 100 m. S. of the island of Chiloe, where Sir John Narborough refreshed his men when he was sent into the South Sea, in the reign of K. Charles II. to see if it was feasible to settle colonies on the coast of Chili.

NARNI, E. lon. 13. 30. lat. 42. 36. a town of Italy in the Pope's ter. in the pr. of Umbria, sit. 45 m. N. of Rome, where there are the ruins of a marble bridge built by Augustus, one of the arches whereof was 150 foot high, and 200 broad.

NARSINGA, E. lon. 78. lat. 14. 50. a city of the Hither India, in the pr. of Bijnagar or Narsinga, sit. 200 m. N. W. of Fort St. George.

NARVA, E. lon. 27. 35. lat. 59. sit. on the river Narva, which divides Livonia from Russia, 100 m. S. W. of Petersburg, a large city and port town of Livonia, besieged by the Russians in the year 1700, but relieved by Charles XII. K. of Sweden, who gained a signal victory over the Russians with 20,000 men, tho' the Russians were 100,000 strong. But the Czar Peter the Great afterwards took Narva by storm, and transplanted the inhabitants to Astracan; and the Russians have been in possession of Narva, and all Livonia, ever since, making it one of the stations of their fleet.

NARVAR, E. lon. 79. lat. 25. a city of the Hither India in Asia, capital of the pr. of Narvar, sit. 70 m. S. of Agra.

NASEBY, W. lon. 50 min. lat. 52. 20. a village near Rothwell in Northamptonshire, sit. 10 m. N. of Northampton. Here the parliament gain'd a decisive victory over the Royalists, on the 14th of June, 1645.

NASSAU, a co. of Germany, in the cir. of the Upper Rhine, and lan. of Hesse Cassel, and ter. of the Wette-

NATAL TERRA, a country on the S. E. coast of Africa, between 23 and 30 deg. of S. lat. and between 25 and 35 deg. of E. lon. Several European ships have touched here, and agree it is a plentiful country, but no nation of Europe have thought fit to send any colonies thither.

NATOLIA, the modern name of the Lesser Asia. See ASIA THE LESSER.

* NAVAN, a borough in the co. of E. Meath, and pr. of Leinster, in Ireland, which sends 2 memb. to parl. sit. on the river Boyne, 22 m. N. W. of Dublin. It hath a barrack for one troop of horse, W. lon. 7. 10. lat. 53. 40.

NAVARINO, a port town of European Turkey in the pr. of the Morea, sit. 10 m. N. of Modon, and 90 m. S. W. of Corinth.

NAVARRE, a pr. of Spain, bounded by French Navarre on the N. E. by Arragon on the S. E. by old Castile on the S. W. and by Guipuscoa, a ter. of Biscay, on the N. W. being 100 m. long, and 60 broad, a mountainous country, colder than the rest of Spain, and produces very little corn, wine, or fruits, but feeds great herds of cattle, and abounds in good timber, and hath some iron mines in it.

NAVARRE, French, or the lower Navarre, is bounded by the ter. of Labour on the N. by the Pyrenees, which divide it from Spanish Navarre, on the S. W. and by the pr. of Bearn in Gascony on the E. and is about 30 m. long, and 15 broad, one of the barrenest provinces in France.

* NAUCHEES, a tribe of Indians, seated near the mouth of the Mississippi, in N. America, who live under a most despotic government. Tho' they very seldom go to war, nor delight in destroying their fellow creatures, yet the French cut numbers of them off in 1730, and built fort Rosulie on the river, E. of Mississippi, to awe them.

NAVEREINI, W. lon. 1. 5. lat. 43. 25. a town of France, in the pr. of Gascony, and ter. of Bearn, sit. 16 m. S. E. of Bayonne.

NAXIA, or NIXIA, E. lon. 26. lat. 36. 30. one of the islands of the Archipelago, lying S. E. of Micone, and E. of Paros, 100 m. in circumference, the country fruitful, and well watered, woods, hills, and valleys, agreeably intermixed. The greatest part of the inhabitants Greek Christians, the rest Latins; and each of them has their archbishop. The Turks suffer them to be governed by their own magistrates, according to their respective laws and customs; however, an officer of the Turks comes hither once a year, to collect the taxes, and to him they appeal if they think themselves injured. They live merrily on the good wines the island produces in their several quarters, but the Latins and Greeks can no more agree in common conversation, than they do in religious rites and ceremonies.

NEATH, W. lon. 4. lat. 51. 42. a market town of Glamorganshire, in S. Wales, sit. on the river Neath, near Bristol channel, 28 m. N. W. of Landaff.

N E

NECKAR, a river of Germany, which rising in the S. of the cir. of Suabia, runs N. through that cir. passing by Tubingen, Stutgard, Hailbron, and Morfbach, and then turning W. falls into the Rhine at Mannheim.

NEEDHAM, E. lon. 1. 6. lat. 52. 18. a market town of Suffolk, sit. on the river Orwel, 8 m. N. W. of Ipswich.

NEEDLES, two capes, or points, at the W. end of the isle of Wight, very difficult to pass on account of the sands and rocks.

NEGOMBO, E. lon. 78. lat. 7. 25. a port town on the W. coast of the isle of Ceylon, in the Indian ocean, in Asia; sub. to the Dutch.

NEGRAIS, E. lon. 92. 30. lat. 17. a port town of Pegu in the Further India, in Asia, sit. on the E. side of the bay of Bengal, 240 m. W. of the city of Pegu.

NEGRIL POINT, the most westerly promontory of the island of Jamaica, in America.

NEGRO CAPE, E. lon. 14. S. lat. 17. a promontory of Angola, on the W. coast of Africa, being the most southerly country in Africa, to which the Europeans resort to purchase slaves.

NEGROES ISLAND, E. lon. 120. lat. 10. one of the Philippine islands, in the Indian ocean, in Asia, sit. between the islands of Panay and Cebu, so called because most of the inhabitants are Blacks; sub. to Spain.

NEGROLAND, or NIGRITIA, a country in Africa, lies between 18 degrees W. and 15 degrees E. lon. and between 10 and 20 degrees of N. lat. the great river Niger running through it, from E. to W. It is bounded by Zaara, or the desert, on the N. by unknown countries on the E. by Guinea on the S. and by the Atlantic ocean on the W. and there are several several European settlements on the branches of the river Niger, especially near their mouths. The generality of the people are black, but there are a tawny race intermixed with them; both of them of the Mahometan religion. A great many nations inhabit the banks of the river Niger, of different languages, and independent on each other. It is a fruitful country, abounding in rice, Guinea-grain, and Indian-corn, where it is cultivated, and does not want cattle; coco-nuts, plantains, pulse, palm-trees, and tropical fruits they have in abundance. The Europeans traffic with them for slaves, gold, ivory, bees-wax, and drugs, particularly gum senega, which is a profitable article.

NEGROPONT, anciently EUBEA, an island in the Egean sea, or Archipelago, sit. N. E. of the coast of Achaia, or Livadia, from which it is separated by a narrow channel called the Eurippus, or strait of Negropont. The island is 90 m. long, and from 2 to 25 m. broad, abounding in corn, wine, fruits, fish, flesh, and fowl; but what this island has ever been remarkable for, is the variable tides, which are sometimes regular, and at others irregular, according to the age of the moon: these are regular from the three last days of the old moon, to the eighth of the new, on the ninth day they become irregular, and continue so to the thirteenth inclusive, and then they flow 12, 13, or 14 times, and ebb as often, in 24 or 25 hours; but neither the regular or irregular tides rise much above a foot.

NEGROPONT, or EGRIPOS CITY, E. lon. 24. 30. lat. 38. 30. capital of the island of Negropont; sit. 34 m. N. of Setines, or Athens, and 70 m. N. E. of Corinth, on the W. side of the island, where the strait is so narrow, that it is joined to the continent of Livadia, by a bridge. The walls of the town, in which the Turks reside, are two miles round; and the suburbs where the Christians inhabit, much larger. The Captain Bassa, or Admiral of the Turkish fleet, is Beglerbeg, or Viceroy of the island, and of the neighbouring continent of Greece; and a fleet of galleys generally lie in that port. This is much the largest of all the islands of the Archipelago, and with the rest, subject to the Turks.

NEISSE, or NEISS, E. lon. 16. 45. lat. 50. 25. a town of the D. of Silesia, in the K. of Bohemia, sit. on the river Neisse, 43 m. S. of Breslaw.

NEIVA, a river of Muscovy, which separates Carelia from Ingria, and on which the capital city of Petersburg stands, rises in the lake Ladoga, and running W. falls into the gulph of Finland.

NELLENBURG, E. lon. 9. lat. 47. 55. a city of Germany, in the cir. of Suabia, cap. of the county of Nellenburg, sit. 15 m. N. of Constance; sub. to the house of Austria.

NELSON FORT, [or FORT YORK, called by the French Bourbon river] W. lon. 91. lat. 57. a fort and settlement on the W. side of Hudson's bay, in Canada, in N. America, sit. at the mouth of Nelson river, on a bay of the sea, 600 m. N. W. of Rupert fort, and 250 m. S. E. of Churchill fort, sub. to Great Britain, and in possession of the factors of the Hudson's bay company. [It is the finest and largest river in the bay.]

NEMÆA, the name of a town in the Morea, 30 m. S. of Corinth, where the ancients celebrated games in honour of Hercules.

NEMOURS, E. lon. 2. 45. lat. 48. 17. a city in the isle of France, 42 m. S. of Paris.

* NENAGH, a post town in the co. of Tipperary, and pr. of Munster, in Ireland, sit. 63 m. S. W. of Dublin.

NERAC, E. lon. 10. min. lat. 44. 8. a town of France, in the pr. of Gascony, in the ter. of Bazadois, 10 m. W. of Agen.

NERICIA, a pr. of Sweden, bounded by Westmania on the N. Sunder land on the E. and Gothland on the S. W.

NERO, E. lon. 128. S. lat. 4. a fortress sit. at the W. end of one of the Banda islands of the same name, in the Indian ocean, in Asia, 60 m. S. of the island of Ceram, and 120 m. S. E. of Amboina. This is one of those forts, by which the Dutch command the navigation of those seas, and defend their usurped dominion of the islands, where only mace and nutmegs grow : it is sometimes called fort Nassau.

NETHERLANDS, sit. between 2 and 7 degrees of E. lon. and between 50 and 53 degrees 30 min. of N. lat. bounded by the German sea on the N. by Germany on the E. by Lorraine and France on the S. and by another part of France and the British seas on the W. extending near 300 m. in length from N. to S. and 200 m. in breadth from E. to W. The ancient name of this country was Belgia, but since denominated the Netherlands or Low Countries, from their low situation, near the mouths of several great rivers; the maritime parts whereof were a morass, till drained by the industry of the numerous people that retired hither from the persecutions and oppression of the Spaniards, and other bigotted powers. These provinces are in number 17, and formerly enjoyed great privileges, being governed by as many Princes, under the various titles of Dukes, Counts, or Lords, but became at length united by marriages, compact, or conquest, in the house of Burgundy, anno 1430; and came under the dominion of Spain, about the year 1506, by a marriage between the heirs of the houses of Burgundy and Spain, and were by Charles V. Emperor of Germany, and K. of Spain, constituted part of the circle of Burgundy. Philip II. K. of Spain, succeeding his father the Emperor Charles V. and persecuting and oppressing his subjects in the Low Countries, either upon account of their opposing his encroachments on their liberties, or embracing the doctrines of the reformation, occasioned a civil war in these countries; and at length, 7 of the 17 provinces, threw off the Spanish yoke, and formed an alliance at Utrecht, anno 1579, which obtained the name of the Union of Utrecht : and these provinces have ever since been called the United Provinces. The other ten provinces were reduced to the obedience of Spain, and were subject to that crown, till conquered by the allies, and resigned to the house of Austria by the treaty of Utrecht, anno 1713; under whose dominion most of the ten still remain, and are called the Austrian Netherlands. But Artois, part of Flanders, Hainalt, and the Cambresis, are in the possession of the French, and called the French Netherlands. The Dutch also possess the N. part of Brabant and Flanders, which are therefore called Dutch Brabant, and Dutch Flanders. As to the produce, constitution, and government of the Netherlands, these are treated of under the heads of the AUSTRIAN NETHERLANDS, and UNITED NETHERLANDS.

NETHERLANDS AUSTRIAN and FRENCH, consist of 10 provinces, viz. 1. Flanders, 2. Brabant, 3. Antwerp, 4. Mechlin, or Malines, 5. Limburg, 6. Luxemburg, 7. Hainalt, 8. The Cambresis, 9. Namur, and 10. Artois.

The soil is generally fruitful, producing good corn and pasture, and their gravelly light lands are now as valuable as the rich heavy ground, by the improvements they have made with sown grass, turnips, &c. but chiefly by their plantations of flax and hemp; their manufactures of linen and lace are brought to great perfection, viz. their lawns, cambricks, Mechlin and Brussels lace; their tapestry is very rich, and they have still a good woollen manufacture, particularly camblets and light stuffs.

Flanders is a flat country, scarce a hill or a stone to be met with in it. The richest land lies between Dunkirk and Bruges, extending 40 m. in length, abounding in wheat, barley, and as good meadow and pasture as is to be met with in Europe : but between between Bruges and Ghent, and Ghent and Antwerp, is a gravelly or sandy soil, and that part of Brabant which lies between Antwerp and Holland, is equally unfit for corn, but enriched with plantations of flax, hemp, and hops.

The rest of the Austrian Netherlands consists of little hills and valleys, woods, inclosed ground, and champion fields, not unlike England; and their numerous rivers and navigable canals give them a great advantage of us, carriage of the produce of the country from one part to another costing very little.

They had the greatest woollen manufacture in the world while Bruges was the market for English wool, and the foreign trade of Antwerp exceeded that of any port in Europe, until the Dutch built forts at the mouth of the Scheld, and turned the current of trade to Holland. No country has more great towns, or finer fortifications. It has been the seat of war these 200 years almost, the French and Spaniards, and their allies, contending perpetually for this rich country.

The legislative authority of the respective provinces is, or ought to be, vested in the sovereign, and the states of each province, which consist, 1. of the bishops, abbots, and dignified clergy, 2. of the nobility and gentry; and 3. the burghesses of their great towns, who meet at Brussels, but assemble in separate houses, and make laws for their respective provinces. The civil and canon law are in force here where they do not interfere with the municipal laws of the country.

By the ancient laws of the country, no foreign forces ought to be introduced; but this is not regarded now, either by the Austrians or French, any more than some of the rest of their privileges. By the treaty of Utrecht their barrier towns were to be garrisoned by 25,000 Dutch. Their religion is moderate popery, the Inquisition does not reign here.

NEUENSTAT, E. lon. 9. 20. lat.

NEUFCHATEL, E. lon. 6. 35. lat. 47. 10. sit. at the N. end of the lake of Neufchattel, 20 m. N. W. of Bern: a well built town, cap. of the counties of Neufchattel and Valengin; governed by a council of 60 burghers. They are com-burghers with the canton of Bern, their only protector, and umpire of all the differences between them and their sovereign.

NEUFCHATEL, and Vallengin counties, are bounded by the bish. of Basil on the N. by the lake of Neufchattel on the E. by the canton of Bern on the S. and by Franche Comte in France on the W. being about 40 m. long, and 20 broad, sub. to the same prince, and form together one little state, for they are a free independent people, though they have a prince at their head. No laws are made but by the three estates; no taxes raised, or magistrates appointed, but by the states. The whole country is of the reformed religion, except two Roman Catholic villages. Upon the death of the Dukes of Nemours, sovereign of Neufchattel, anno 1707, there were many competitors, but the states made choice of the K. of Prussia to succeed her, who derived his title from the house of Orange and Châlons. The country produces some good wine, but is for the most part a mountainous barren soil.

NEWFOUNDLAND, an island sit. in the Atlantic ocean, in America, between 55 and 61 degrees of W. lon. and between 47 and 52 degrees of N. lat. separated from New Britain, or Eskimaux, by the narrow strait of Belisle on the N. bounded by the ocean on the E. and S. and by the bay of St. Lawrence on the W. lying about 40 m. N. E. of Cape Breton. This island is of a triangular form, 350 m. in length, from N. to S. and 200 m. in breadth at the base, from E. to W. where broadest. It is a much colder country than England, the ground being covered with snow five months in winter; but it is much hotter in summer. It is a mountainous, barren country, but well supplied with wood and water, and has several commodious bays and harbours. The fishing banks on this coast are frequented by most European nations; seldom less than five or six hundred sail of ships are laden here with cod-fish annually, the season continuing from the spring till autumn. The French had once some settlements here, but the property of the island was yielded to the English English by the treaty of Utrecht ; only the French are allowed the liberty of curing their fish on the northern coast of the island ; but it is so cold and uncomfortable a country, that there are not above 4 or 500 families of English remain here all the year, besides the garrisons of St. John's, Placentia, and other forts ; but in the fishing season there may be 10,000 people more here. There are but few native Indians on the island, but in the winter the Indians of New Britain pass the straits of Belisle, and come over to hunt here. The English had no clergymen among them till lately, but now the society for propagation of the gospel, send a missionary thither, who usually resides at Bonavista, but is a kind of itinerant preacher, visiting Trinity Harbour, Placentia, and other settlements, as he has opportunity. There is plenty of venison, fish, and fowl, in the island, but very little corn, fruit, or cattle : the inhabitants receive most of their provisions, as well as cloathing and furniture, annually from England, at the return of the shipping.

W. being 400 m. in length, from E. to W. and 120 broad from N. to S. It is one of the pleafantest and most fruitful provinces in Mexico, lying on the N. and S. seas, and well watered with lakes and rivers; so that it is much cooler than could be expected in a country that lies within 12 degrees of the equator. The chief cities in this pr. are Leon, Rin, Lejo, and Granada.

NICARAGUA LAKE and RIVER, runs thro' the middle of the pr. the W. end lying within 5 leagues of the S. sea, and the river which runs from it, falls into the N. sea; but there are such terrible cataraacts, or water-falls, in the river, that it is not navigable in many places.

NICARIA, E. lon. 26. 5. lat. 37. one of the islands of the Archipelago, in Asiatic Turkey, sit. W. of Samos; one of the least and barrenest of the Grecian islands, and the people said to be the most slothful and unpolished.

mountainous country, produces wine and oil, but little corn.

NICE CITY, E. lon. 7. 15. lat. 43. 40. capital of the co. of Nice, sit. on the Mediterranean, at the mouth of the river Var, 70 m. S. of Turin, 40 m. S. of Coni, and 10 m. N. of Antibes in France. It is a well fortified town, and said to be defended by a strong castle, but has been often taken by the French, with very little trouble, sub. to the K. of Sardinia.

NICE, E. lon. 30. 5. lat. 41. a town of Asiatic Turkey, sit. in the Lesser Asia, 50 m. S. E. of Constantinople. It was anciently a large, populous, and well-built city, and is still a considerable town. Here Constantine the Great assembled the first general council, anno 325, to suppress the Arian heresy; and here the Greek Emperors resided after Constantinople was taken by the Turks.

NICHOLAS (ST.) E. lon. 6. 15. lat. 48. 36. a town of Germany, in the D. of Lorrain, sit. 10 m. S. E. of Nancy.

NICOBAR ISLANDS, sit. in the Indian ocean, in Asia, N. of the island of Sumatra, at the entrance of the bay of Bengal, 300 m. W. of the further peninsula of India, between 92 and 94 degrees of E. lon. and between 7 and 10 degrees of N. lat. the largest of these islands, which gives name to the rest, and lies farthest S. is 40 m. long, and 15 broad. The natives are of a tawny complexion, and live in little huts, having no towns, and go almost naked. Their country is almost covered with wood, and produces no corn, but they have a fruit which they boil, and serves them instead of bread; they have also coco-nuts, plantains, and other tropical fruits, on which they live, with the fish they take, but seem to slight flesh, though they have hogs and poultry enough, with which they supply the ships which touch here: and yet these people, as well as their neighbours of the Andaman islands, were reported to be cannibals, when the Europeans first visited them. The natives, in return for the provisions they furnish ships with, take iron, tobacco, and linen, and don't seem to have any commerce with the nations on the adjacent continent; nor to be of any of the sects of religion we meet with there, having no images or temples, but seem to worship the moon.

NICOMEDIA, E. lon. 30. lat. 41. 20. a city of Asiatic Turkey, in the Lesser Asia, sit. at the bottom of a bay of the sea of Propontis, 30 m. S. NIGER, a great river of Africa, whose source is uncertain, runs from E. to W. thro' the middle of Negroland, discharging itself into the Atlantic ocean, by three channels, the most southerly called Rio Grande, that in the middle the Gambia, and that on the N. the river Senega. It is 300 m. between the northern and southern channels, and all the low country between them is annually overflowed, at the latter end of the summer, as Egypt is by the river Nile, much about the same time, both proceeding from the periodical rains, which fall within the tropics. But that all the three branches proceed from one river is meer conjecture, they may be three different rivers; however, near the mouth of them the Portuguese, English, and French, have several factories and settlements, where they traffic with the natives for slaves, gold, ivory, gum-senega, wax, and other drugs.

NIGRITIA. See NEGROLAND in Africa.

NILE, the great river of Egypt, in Africa, has its source in Abyssinia, or the Upper Ethiopia, in 12 deg. N. lat. It runs generally from S. to N. thro' Abyssinia into Egypt, and then continues its course N. in one stream, till it comes below Cairo, to the Delta, where it divides; one branch discharging itself into the Mediterranean at Damietta, and the other 100 m. to the westward of it, at Rosetta. In the upper part of the stream, we have been told, there are dreadful cataracts, where the water falls in sheets, from high precipices; but later travellers of credit, of our own nation, assure us there are no such cataracts, only some rocks, which indeed hinder navigation, but the water does not fall in sheets from high hills, or precipices, as was currently reported by the ancients, and moderns till very lately. It runs, it is observed, through the hilly country of Upper Egypt, with greater rapidity than it does thro' the Delta or Lower Egypt, where the country is level; which is the case of many other rivers. There are great rejoicings every year when the Nile rises to a certain height, their future harvest depending on it. The just height of the inundation, according to Pliny, is 16 cubits; when it arises but to 12 or 13 a famine is expected, and when it exceeds 16 there is danger apprehended: the moderns do not agree exactly with the ancients about the height of the inundation, but there is no great difference in their accounts. The river begins to rise gradually in May or June; and there stands a pillar on an island opposite to Old Cairo, divided into picks, a measure of about two feet, to observe how much it rises; and when it is high enough, the khalis, or great canal is cut, from whence it is conveyed into other reservoirs and cisterns, to be distributed to their fields and gardens, as they want it. As to the Delta, or Lower Egypt, that is all overflowed; there needs no art to carry it into their fields. This part of the country is always sowed with rice therefore, which grows in water. Their towns standing on little eminences, during the flood appear like so many islands. This overflowing of the Nile, is occasioned by the periodical rains, which annually fall within the tropics, where the source of the Nile is; and that which makes the flood the greater is, that Ethiopia, or Abyssinia, where it rises, is full of high mountains, from whence the waters shoot in torrents, and swell the river beyond its usual bounds.

NIMEGUEN, E. lon. 5. 50. lat. 51. 55. a city of the United Netherlands, sit. on the river Waal, in the pr. of Guelderland, 10 m. S. of Arnheim, and 52 m. S. E. of Amsterdam. It surrendered to the French, anno 1672, after a siege of 6 days, and they continued in possession of it till 1674. Here was made the treaty between the Dutch and their allies, with France, anno 1679, called the treaty of Nimeguen.

NORWAY, a K. of Europe, sit. between 4 and 30 deg. of E. lon. and between 58 and 72 deg. of N. lat. bounded by the Atlantic ocean on the N. and W. by Swedish Lapland, and other provinces of Sweden, on the E. and by the sea called the Categate and Schaggerac, which separates it from Denmark, on the S. The air of Norway is excessive cold, especially within the polar circle, where their winter continues 8 or 9 months, and the ground all that time covered with snow. It is a barren country, not affording corn or cattle sufficient for the natives. A high chain of mountains runs from S. to N. between Norway and Sweden, called the Dofrine hills; and the rest of the country is incumbered with rocks and mountains, which produce but little food. However, the country produces excellent oak and firr timber, pitch, and tar; and in their hills are mines of copper and iron, and some silver. They have also a very great fishery, and dry their stock-fish upon the rocks, without salting them; furnishing the rest of Europe with stock-fish, and these make part of the food of our seamen in their voyages. The three kingdoms of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark, were sometimes under the dominion of three several sovereigns, and sometimes under one; and Denmark and Norway are now subject to the same Prince, who is absolute in all his dominions, and ('tis said) he treats Norway like a conquered province. The religion, both of Denmark and Norway, is the Lutheran. See DENMARK.

NOVA ZEMBLA, or NEWLAND, which the Dutch call the island of Weygats, is sit. in the North, or Frozen ocean, between 50 and 80 deg. of E. lon. and between 70 deg. of N.

lat. and the N. pole, separated from the pr. of Samoiëda, in Russia, by a narrow strait, called the straits of Weygats. Whether it be an island, or part of some great continent, is uncertain; no ships having ever passed to the northward of it, tho' many attempts have been made to find out a N. E. passage to China that way. The Dutch, indeed passed the straits of Weygats, S. of Nova Zembla, and wintered on the E. side of it, anno 1596, but did not find it practicable to sail farther for the fields of ice they met with. There are no constant inhabitants here, but the Samoieds and Ostiaks climb over the mountains of ice in the straits, when they are frozen over, and hunt elks and rein-deer here, at the proper season.

W. of Ratibon, and 40 m. S. of Bamberg. It is 7 m. in circumference, defended by a wall, a castle, and other works, but of no great strength. It is very populous, and has the best inland trade of any town in Europe; their clock-work, and manufactures in iron, steel, ivory, wood, and alabaster, are much admired, and afforded exceeding cheap; and from hence come most of those toys we call Dutch toys. It is nothing but the genius and industry of this people that procure them the flourishing trade and plenty they live in; for it is a barren country, and produces scarce any thing to traffic with, but what receives the greatest part of the value from their labour and art. It is an imperial city, or independent state, the governors and magistrates elected out of the nobility, and the Burgher-master, or chief magistrate, changed every month; the legislative authority being lodged in a council, or diet, of 400 of the principal burghers. In this city are kept the regalia used at the Emperor's coronation. The established religion is the Lutheran; the Calvinists are forced to go 3 m. out of town to church, and the Papists are allowed to perform divine service only in one church, when the Lutherans have done with it. The territories of Nurenburg are about 30 m. in length, and 20 broad, in which they have a great many good towns and villages. The mar. of Nurenburg is divided into several districts, which are sub. to the Princes of the house of Brandenburg. See Moll's map of Germany.

ORLEANS CITY, E. lon. 2. lat. 47. 55. a city of France, capital of Orleanois, sit. on the river Loyre, 70 m. S. of Paris, consisting of 20 parishes, and is about 4 miles in circumference. It has a very great trade, considering it is an inland town, having a communication with W. France and the ocean by the river Loyre, as well as with the provinces in the S. and by the canal of Orleans it has a communication with the river Seyne, Paris, Rouen, and the English channel. It is a bishop's see, and university; and here French is spoken in the greatest purity. They still commemorate that heroine, Joan of Arc, who restored the French affairs after the conquest of their country by Henry V. King of England; they have her statue in compleat armour on the great bridge here: her obliging the English to raise the siege of this city, being the first exploit she performed.

ORLEANS FOREST, in the neighbourhood of this city, consists of 100,000 acres, well planted with oak, elm, and other valuable timber.

ORLEANS ISLAND and TOWN, W. lon. 73. lat. 47. [sit. in the river of S. Laurence, in Canada, in N. America, 340 m. N. W. of Boston, a little E. of Quebec; sub. to France.

ORMUS, E. lon. 56. lat. 27. 30. an island at the entrance of the gulph of Persia, in Asia, sit. opposite to Combron on the continent, 240 m. S. E. of Schiras, and 370 S. E. of Isfahan. This island is 30 m. in circumference: while the Portuguese possessed it, it was the richest magazine in the world; they made it the center of trade between Europe and Asia; here the fine spices, and other merchandize of the E. were laid up, and afterwards distributed to the rest of the world; and here the Portuguese built one of the most elegant cities in Asia. But something above 100 years ago, the Dutch dispossessed the Portuguese of most of their settlements in India; and the Persians, by the assistance of the English, expelled the Portuguese from Ormus; for which the English E. India Company were allowed great advantages in the Persian trade, and even suffered to share the revenues of the customs, on that side, with the Persians; and, till the late civil wars, received between 3 or 4000 l. per annum, in lieu of them. As to the island of Ormus itself, it never produced any thing but salt, which grows in a solid crust, two inches deep upon the surface of the earth; and the hills appear, at a distance, as if they were covered with snow; nor is there a drop of fresh water on the island, but what is preserved in cisterns, in the time of the rains: the Portuguese used to fetch their water from the continent.

continent. Upon the demolishing of Ormus, the Great Shah Abbas, Sophi of Persia, removed the trade to Gomboron, on the opposite shore, and gave it the name of Bander Abassi, or the port town of Abbas.

ORONOQUE, a river of South America, rises S. of the equator, and runs N. thro' the countries of Guiana and Caribbiana, falls into the Atlantic ocean, in 8 degrees of N. lat. almost opposite to the island of Trinity. It was in this river that Sir Walter Raleigh went in search of a gold mine, in the reign of K. OSTEND, E. lon. 2. 45. lat. 51. 15. a city and port town of the Austrian Netherlands, in the pr. of Flanders, sit. 12 m. W. of Bruges. It stands in a perfect marsh, surrounded by wide trenches, which are filled with the sea-water, and is fortified according to art, so that it may be esteemed one of the strongest towns in Flanders, and is the best harbour on that coast, though the town is not large; nor was it much taken notice of till the year 1601, when it was defended three years against all the power of Spain, by the English and Dutch, the Spaniards losing 70,000 men before the place. The French seized it on the death of Charles II. King of Spain, anno 1700, but the confederates recovered it after the battle of Ramellies, anno 1706. The late Emperor, Charles VI. was about to establish an East India Company here, but was forced to drop the design by the English and Dutch, which provoked that Prince to enter into an alliance with France. Ostend was taken by the French, 1745; but was ceded to the house of Austria by the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle, in 1748.

OSTIA, E. lon. 13. lat. 41. 30. a port town of Italy, in the Pope's ter. and Campania of Rome, sit. at the mouth of the Tiber, 10 m. S. of Rome, and formerly the port town to it, but the harbour is now choaked up, and Civitta Vecchia is the Pope's chief port.

OUSE, a river which rises on the confines of Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire, and running N. E. thro' Bucks, Bedfordshire, Huntingdonshire, Cambridgeshire, and Norfolk, passes by Buckingham, Bedford, Huntingdon, and Ely, discharging itself into a bay of the German sea at Lynn.

OUSTIACH, or OSTIACH COUNTRY, is a part of Asiatic Russia. These people extend along the river Irtis, to its confluence with the river Oby; from whence they extend themselves northward, along the banks of the Oby and Jenisa, till they fall into the gulph of Mangasea, or the Frozen ocean; inhabiting the banks of several rivers, which fall into the Oby and Jenisa. They have no towns; but live in huts, that are easily moved, or new built, whenever they go to hunt or fish, which seems to be the employment of these people at the proper seasons, having no corn in their country, or following any kind of husbandry.

* OUTAWAES, a great and powerful nation in N. America, who live on a river so called, which joins upon the Catacaqui river (the out-let of the Great Lakes) a little above Montreal, and extend N. W. to near the S. W. part of Hudson's bay. They deal considerably at the N. York trading houses at Oswego. In May 1723 a number of them came to Albany, and desired to be admitted as a friendly nation among the Mohawk nations, or Iroquois.

OXFORD, W. lon. 1. 15. lat. 51. 45. the capital city of Oxfordshire, the see of a bishop and university, sit. at the confluence of the Isis and Cherwell, 55 m. W. of London, and 60 m. S. W. of Cambridge; being situate on an eminence, almost encompassed with meadows, except on the E. The whole town, with the suburbs, of a circular form, about 3 miles in circumference; consisting chiefly of two spacious streets, which cross each other in the middle of the town. There are in this university 20 colleges, and 5 halls; several of which standing in the streets, give the city an air of magnificence. The river being navigable from hence to London, they send great quantities of corn and malt thither by capacious barges, and import coals and other provisions the same way from London. As the colleges and town are very beautiful, so the people of the city seem more humane, and better polish'd, than in any other town in England. The city elect two members of parliament, and the university as many: K. James I. granted the university this privilege, and the like to the university of Cambridge.

PACIFIC OCEAN, or S. SEA, separates Asia from America, being 10,000 m. wide in the broadest part. It was called Pacific from the moderate weather mariners met with on the coast of Peru, and generally between the tropics in that sea; tho' it appears, it is no less stormy than other seas without the tropics, towards either pole. It was called the South Sea, because the Spaniards passed the isthmus of Darien from N. to S. when they first discover'd it; tho' it is properly the Western ocean, with regard to America.

PACTOLUS, a river of Lydia, in the Lesser Asia, celebrated by the ancient poets for its golden sands.

PADUA, E. lon. 12. 15. lat. 45. 30. capital of the pr. of Padua, sit. 22 m. W. of Venice, in a fine plain, watered by the rivers Brent and Bachilio. The form of the city is circular, and about 7 m. in circumference; but the ground within the walls not half built at present, and great part of the houses tumbling down; tho' it has been one of the most flourishing cities in Italy. In the time of the Romans, the inhabitants amounted to 100,000; but, at present, they are not 30,000; and the university, which might have vied with the best, is reduced to one college: however, here is still a manufacture of woollen cloth; and the adjacent country abounds with oil and wine, and the most delicious fruits. The people, however, are generally miserable, through the tyranny and oppression of the Venetian republic. There is an image of the Blessed Virgin here, which, according to their traditions, flew hither from Constantinople, when that city was taken by the Turks; and they have another of equal probability, viz. That this city was founded by Antenor, and a colony of Trojans.

PAIS RECONQUIS, is a part of Picardy in France, which was conquered by Edward III. king of England, and remained in possession of the English above 200 years; but was lost in the reign of Q. Mary, anno 1558, being the last of the territories on the continent of France that the English were masters of. The chief towns in this re-conquered country, are Calais, Guisnes, Ardres, and Oye.

PAITA, W. lon. 80. S. lat. 5. a port town of Peru in S. America, sit. 500 m. N. W. of Lima, sub. to Spain, frequently plundered by the Buccaneers. It was plunder'd and burnt by Commodore Anson, the governor refusing to ransom it, 1741.

PAIX, W. lon. 72. 30. lat. 20. a port town sit. on the N. side of the island of Hispaniola, in America, built by the French, and subject to France, sit. 75 m. N. E. of Petit Guava's.

PALACIOS, W. lon. 6. 5. lat. 37. a town of Spain, in the pr. of Andalusia, sit 15 m. S. of Seville.

PALAIS (ST.) W. lon. 1. 8. lat. 43. 23. a town of France, in the pr. of Gascony, capital of the Lower Navarre, sit. 12 m. S. E. of Bayonne.

of Bally by a narrow strait; sub. to its own Prince.

PALAMOS, E. lon. 2. 40. lat. 41. 50. a port town of Spain, in the pr. of Catalonia, sit. on the Mediterranean, 15 m. S. E. of Girone.

PALANKA, E. lon. 19. lat. 48. 12. a town of Upper Hungary, sit. 30 m. N. of Buda, sub. to the house of Austria.

PALATINATE of Bavaria, or the Upper Palatinate, in the cir. of Bavaria, in Germany, sometimes called the Nortgöw, from its northern situation, in respect to the Elector of Bavaria's other dominions. It is bounded by Voighland, in the cir. of Upper Saxony, on the N. by Bohemia and Austria on the E. by the river Danube, which separates it from the D. of Bavaria, on the S. and by Suabia, and part of Franconia on the W. being about 70 m. long, and 40 broad; a mountainous, rocky country; but, in some places their valleys produce good corn and pasture. They have also some vineyards; but their wine has a sharp, unpleasant taste. In their hills are rich mines of copper, silver, and iron; and the forges and manufactories of iron are very considerable in this country. This Palatinate was taken from the Elector Palatine, with his other territories, on his assuming the title of King of Bohemia in opposition to the Emperor, anno 1620; and transferred to the D. of Bavaria, with the title of Elector. And tho' the rest of the Elector Palatine's dominions were restored to his posterity, with an 8th Electorate, by the treaty of Westphalia; yet this part of the Palatine's territories, called the Upper Palatinate, with the Electoral dignity, was confirmed to the house of Bavaria. The chief town in the Upper Palatinate is Amberg.

PALATINATE of the Rhine, sit. in the cir. of the Lower Rhine, in Germany, is bounded by the archbishopsrics of Mentz and Triers on the N. by the circles of Franconia and Suabia on the E. and by Alsatia and Lorrain on the S. and W. being upwards wards of 100 m. long, and from 50 to 70 broad. The Rhine, the Neckar, and other fine rivers running through it, contribute to render it one of the pleasantest and most fruitful provinces of Germany; only unhappy in lying on the frontiers of France, whose Princes have burnt and plundered this country, and demolished its fine towns more than once in the late wars. It is always obliged to subsist large armies of friends, as well as enemies, whenever there happens a quarrel between France and the German Princes. There are more Protestants than Papists in the Palatinate; but the sovereign having been a Papist for a considerable time, the Protestants here suffer great hardships. They profess their religion, however, publicly; and have most of the churches in the capital city of Heidelberg: but the lands of the church are either alienated, or in the hands of the Roman Catholics. The Elector Palatine is sovereign of the greatest part of the Palatinate: of the Duchies of Newburg, Juliers, and Berg; the city of Dusseldorp; and lordship of Ravensstein. He is director of 3 circles, viz. 1. of the Lower Rhine, jointly with the Elector of Mentz; 2. of the Upper Rhine, as Prince of Simmeren, with the Bishop of Worms; and 3. of Westphalia, as Duke of Juliers, alternately with the K. of Prussia, who is Duke of Cleves. The revenues of the Palatinate arise by a toll on all vessels going along the Rhine, Neckar, and other rivers; and from the duties on corn, wine, and other provisions; the whole estimated at 300,000 l. per ann. He keeps up a body of 6 or 7000 men in the time of peace; and in the late wars maintained 12,000 regular forces many years. There is a dispute subsisting between the Elector Palatine and the Elector of Hanover, about the titular office of Arch-treasurer of the Empire.

PALAZULO, or PLAZZO, E. lon. 14. 15. lat. 37. 40. a town of Sicily, in the Val. de Noto, sit. 80 m. S. W. of Messina.

P A

PALAZULO, E. lon. 10. 12. lat. 45. 30. a town of Italy, in the ter. of Venice, and pr. of Brescia, sit. on the river Oglio, 26 m. N. E. of Milan.

PALENCIA, or PLACENTIA, W. lon. 5. lat. 42. 12. a city of Spain, in the pr. of Leon, sit. on the river Cea, 60 m. S. E. of Leon.

PALERMO, E. lon. 13. lat. 38. 30. capital of the island of Sicily, sit. on the N. coast of that island, on a bay of the Mediterranean, which forms a commodious harbour, 150 m. W. of Messina. It is a well-built city, surrounded with a wall, and other fortifications; but of no great strength, as appears by the Germans abandoning it on the invasion of the Spaniards, anno 1718. It stands in a pleasant fruitful country; and is the residence of the Viceroy; but the trade of this city, though very considerable, is not equal to that of Messina.

PALESTINE, a part of Asiatic Turkey, is sit. between 36 and 38 degrees of E. lon. and between 31 and 34 degrees of N. lat. bounded by mount Libanus, which divides it from Syria, on the N. by mount Hermon, which separates it from Arabia Deserta, on the E. by the mountains of Seir, and the desarts of Arabia Petræa, on the S. and by the Mediterranean-sea on the W. so that it seems to have been extremely well secured against foreign invasions. It was called Palestine, from the Philistines, who inhabited the sea-coasts. It was called also Judea, from Juda; and the Holy Land, from our Saviour's residence and sufferings in it: and it is called Canaan, and the Promis'd Land, in the Scriptures. It is 150 m. in length, and upwards; and 80 in breadth; and in the time of Solomon, it seems to have extended from the Mediterranean sea to the river Euphrates. It is generally a fruitful country, producing plenty of corn, wine, and oil, where it is cultivated; and would be able to supply its neighbours with corn and wine, as it did formerly, if the present inhabitants were as industrious. The country about Jerusalem is the most mountainous and rocky ; but these mountains feed great herds of cattle, abound in milk and honey, and produce excellent wine and olive oil, where they are cultivated ; as the valleys between the mountains do good crops of corn.

PALESTRINA, E. lon. 13. 30. lat. 42. a city of Italy, in the Pope's ter. and Campania of Rome, sit. 30 m. E. of Rome.

PALICAT, or PELICATE, E. lon. 80. lat. 14. a port town of the Hither India, in Asia, sit. on the coast of Cormandel, 70 m. N. of Fort St. George. Here the Dutch have a factory.

PALIMBAM, E. lon. 103. S. lat. 3. a town on the island of Sumatra, in the E. Indies, in Asia, sit. 120 m. N. E. of Bencoolen ; sub. to the Dutch.

PALMA, W. lon. 9. lat. 38. 30. a town of Portugal in the pr. of Alentejo, sit. on the river Cadoan, 24 m. E. of St. Ubes.

PALMA, or PALAMODA, E. lon. 13. 30. lat. 46. 12. a town of Italy, in the ter. of Venice, and pr. of Friuli, sit. 8 m. N. of Aquileia.

PALMA, W. lon. 74. lat. 4. 30. a city of Terra Firma, in S. America, in the pr. of Granada, sit. 50 m. N. W. of St. Fe de Bigota ; sub. to Spain.

PALMA ISLE, W. lon. 19. lat. 29. one of the Canary islands in the Atlantic ocean, sit. 60 m. N. W. of Teneriff, and 200 m. W. of the continent of Africa, producing the best palm sack or canary ; sub. to Spain.

PALMAS CAPE, W. lon. 8. lat. 4. 30. a promontory on the ivory coast of Guinea in Africa.

* PALMERSTOWN, a place in the co. of Dublin, and pr. of Leinster, in Ireland, which gives title of Viscount to the noble family of Temple, and is a great fair for horses ; sit. 3 m. W. of that city.

PALMYRA, E. lon. 39. lat. 33. the ruins of a magnificent city in Asiatic Turkey, in the pr. of Syria, supposed to have been the capital of Queen Zenobia, sit. 200 m. S. E. of Aleppo.

PAMIERS, E. lon. 1. 16. lat. 43. 20. a town of France, in the pr. of Languedoc, sit. on the river Laurigoe, 30 m. S. of Toulouse.

PAMPELUNA, W. lon. 1. 30. lat. 43. 15. a city of Spain, capital of the pr. of Navarre, sit. 30 m. S. of St. Sebastian's, and 200 m. N. E. of Madrid ; the see of a bish. and an university.

PAMPELUNA, W. lon. 72. lat. 7. a city of Terra Firma in S. America, sit. 200 m. S. of Maracaibo ; sub. to Spain.

PAMPHYLIA, the ancient name of a pr. of the Lesser Asia, sit. on the Mediterranean, between the provinces of Lycia and Cilicia, now a part of Carimania, and sub. to the Turks.

PANAMA, W. lon. 82. lat. 9. the capital city of the pr. of Darien, or Terra Firma proper, in S. America. It stands upon a capacious bay of the Pacific ocean, and is surrounded by a stone wall and other fortifications ; and contains about 6000 houses. Ships unload at the island of Perica, 3 m. from the city, the water being too shallow to admit of large vessels to come nearer. It is the see of a bish. and the seat of the governor of the province, and of the courts of justice ; and hither the treasures of gold and silver, and other rich merchandize of Peru, are brought and lodged in magazines, till they are transported to Europe : and here the merchandize of Europe, sent to America by the galleons, is lodged, till it is exported to the several cities of Peru.

Peru, to which it is assigned. Old Panama stood about 4 m. from the present city, which was taken and plundered by Sir Henry Morgan, and accidentally burnt down while he was in possession of it. It is to be presumed, the Spaniards have built this in a more advantageous situation, and fortified it better, to prevent the like attempts; but if Sir Henry Morgan could effect this with 500 men, what might not an army have done, in the beginning of the late war, before the Spaniards had put their towns in a posture of defence?

PANARIA, E. lon. 15. lat. 39. one of the Lipari islands, sit. a little N. E. of the island of Lipari, 30 m. N. of the main island of Sicily; sub. to the K. of the two Sicilies.

PANARO, a river of Italy, which rising in the Appenine hills, on the confines of Tuscany, runs N. into the Modenese, and afterwards divides Modena from Romania; and then turning E. runs by Ferrara through the Ferrarese, falling into the gulph of Venice at Valona; and is called the Po di Valona.

PANAY, E. lon. 119. lat. 11. capital of the isle of Panay, one of the Philippine islands, in Asia, sit. between the islands of Paragoa and Negro. The island is upwards of 400 m. in circumference, subject to Spain.

PANSWICK, W. lon. 2. 15. lat. 51. 40. a market town of Gloucestershire, sit. 6. m. S. of Gloucester.

PANUCO, W. lon. 103. lat. 23. a city of Mexico, in America, capital of the pr. of Panuco, sit. on the gulph of Mexico, at the mouth of a river of the same name, 200 miles N. of the city of Mexico; sub. to Spain.

PAPA, E. lon. 16. lat. 47. 40. a town of Lower Hungary, sit. 15 m. S. of Raab, subject to the Empress Queen.

PAPENHEIM, E. lon. 11. lat. 48. 55. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Franconia, capital of the co. of Papenheim, sit. on the river Altmul, 30 m. S. of Nuremberg; sub. to its own Count.

PAPHLAGONIA, an ancient pr. of the Lesser Asia, sit. on the Euxine sea, N. of Galatia, now part of the pr. of Amasia in Turkey.

PAPHOS, once an elegant city in the island of Cyprus, in Asia; now the little town of Baffo, at the W. end of the island, is all that remains of it; sub. to the Turks.

PAPOUL (St.) E. lon. 1. 45. lat. 43. 28. a town of France, in the pr. of Longuedoc, sit. 32 m. S. E. of Toulouse.

PAPOUS TERRA, or New Guinea, a large continent, a little S. of the equator, in the pacific ocean, sit. in 130 degrees of E. lon. E. of the Spice islands; but how far it extends further to the eastward or southward, is uncertain. It seems to be a barren unhospitable country, and but few inhabitants; at least the Dutch have represented it as such; and no nation has thought fit to make any settlements in it, or to send any colonies thither.

PARAGOYA, one of the Philippine islands, in Asia, sit. a little N. of Borneo, near 300 m. long; sub. to one of the Princes of Borneo.

PARAGUA, or LA PLATA, a pr. of S. America, is bounded by the country of the Amazons on the N. by Brasil on the E. by Patagonia on the S. and by Peru and Chili on the W. lying between 12 and 37 deg. of S. lat. and between 50 and 75 degrees of W. lon. being 1500 m. in length from N. to S. and almost as much in breadth. These countries produce rice and Indian corn, and have now vast herds of cattle; and the Spaniards, to which they are subject, have introduced European corn and fruits, as well as cattle. In that part of the country, W. of the great river Paragua, are vast plains, extending several hundred miles, with very little wood upon them, and scarce a hill to be seen; but on the E. of the river Paragua, which is divided from Brasil by a chain of mountains, there is a variety of hills and valleys, woods and champaign; and this being the property of the Jesuits, is very well cultivated by the natives, who are their profelytes and subjects. This country is called Paragua, from the river that runs through it from N. to S. and La Plata, from the river which rises in Peru, and running S. W. through it, joins its waters with the Paragua near Buenos Ayres; after which, the united stream is called La Plata, and falls into the Atlantic ocean, between the Spanish territories of La Plata and the Portuguese territories of Brasil. The Spaniards bring part of the treasures of Peru, from thence to Buenos Ayres, down the river La Plata; and at Buenos Ayres, put them on board of ships for Spain, with vast quantities of skins, and other merchandize of those countries.

PARAIBA, or PARIA, is the most northern pr. of Brasil, in S. America, sit. on the S. side of the mouth of the river Amazon; sub. to Portugal.

PARANA, a pr. of Paragua, in S. America, sit. between the river Paragua and Brasil; sub. to Spain.

PARDO, a palace of the K. of Spain's, with a fine park and gardens, about 6 m. N. W. from Madrid.

PARENZO, or PIRENZO, E. lon. 14. 10. lat. 45. 30. a port town of Istria, in the ter. of Venice, sit. on a bay of the gulph of Venice, 25 m. S. of Cabode Istria.

PARIA, a lake in Peru, in S. America, in the pr. of Los Charcas, sit. in 67 degrees of W. lon. and 22 degrees of S. lat. 100 m. N. W. of La Plata; sub. to Spain.

PARIA, or NEW ANDALUSIA, a country of the Terra Firma, in S. America, having the North sea, or Atlantic ocean on the N. the country of Guiana, from which it is separated by the river Oronoque, on the E. and by Venezuela on the W. The N. part of this country is usually called Caribiana; it is sub. to Spain.

PARIS, E. lon. 2. 25. lat. 48. 50. the metropolis of the K. of France, and of the principality or government of the Isle of France, 200 m. S. E. of London, 680 m. N. E. of Madrid, 550 m. W. of Vienna, 1300 N. W. of Constantinople, and 700 m. N. W. of Rome. Paris is usually divided in three parts, 1. the town which is the largest, sit. on the N. side of the river Seyne; 2d. the city, much the least, but the most ancient, consisting of 3 little islands in the middle of the Seyne; 3d. the univ. which lies on the S. side of the river. That part of the town which stands on the N. side of the river and called the town, lies on a perfect level and was formerly a bog; and that part called the city lies low; but that part called the university, on the S. side of the river, has several little hills in it. The whole town, according to the French writers, is of a circular form, six leagues in circumference, and the diameter three; consequently must stand upon more ground than London; but those who have viewed both are of another opinion; certain it is London is more populous. The largest calculators will not make the inhabitants of Paris amount to much more than 700,000 men; and there are, at least, 200,000 more in London. The houses of Paris are built of white hewn stone, 5 or 6 stories high: and as every nobleman almost has a large hotel or palace in it with courts and gardens, it must be admitted, that these excel every thing of that kind in London. As for the Louvre and the rest of the royal palaces in Paris, where their kings used to reside, these are old decayed buildings that do not answer a traveller's expectations at present. It is an archb. see, and an univ. in which, 'tis said, there were 100 colleges, tho' there are but 54 at present that bear that name; and of these there are but 10 where exercises are performed. The Sorbonne is one of the finest colleges in Europe, from which the whole univ. is frequently called the Sorbonne. It is now very much upon the decline, other colleges and academies being erected of late years by royal authority. The civil jurisdiction, and all the other privileges almost which the Sorbonne had had formerly, are taken from it. The Academy of Sciences is of much the same nature as that of the Royal Society of London. Besides which, there is an academy for refining and improving the French language; others for the improvement of painting, sculpture, and architecture; others for the exercise and improvement of all mechanic arts and manufactures, tapestry, mosaic work; wrought plate, works of iron, steel, copper, brass, embroidery, &c. The chief manufactures of this city are those of gold and silver stuffs, wrought silks, velvet, gold and silver lace, ribbons, tapestry, linen, and glass. There are, according to a late French writer, 22,000 houses in Paris, many of which are 7 stories high, and a family in almost every story, 52 parishes, 134 monasteries, of which 56 are inhabited by friars, and 78 by nuns; 979 streets; 14,000 coaches, and upwards of 700,000 souls.

PARK ABBY, near Louvain in the Austrian Netherlands, an excellent situation for a camp, and therefore frequently possessed by the armies in the late wars.

PARMA DUCHY, in Italy, bounded by the river Po, which separates it from the Cremonese, on the N. by the D. of Modena on the S. E. by the ter. of Genoa on the S. W. and by the Pavese and Bobbio on the W. being 60 m. long, and 30 broad. It is a fruitful soil, and abounds in cattle, and rich pastures, corn, wine, rice, oil, and excellent fruits: and here they meet with plenty of truffles, a root in much esteem with those that love good eating: and here are some mines of copper and silver. This D. was assigned to the house of Austria (after the death of the late D. of Parma without issue) by a treaty between the late Emperor, Charles VI. and France, anno 1736, and the house of Austria took possession of it accordingly; against which the Pope protested, claiming it as a fief of the holy see.

PARMA CITY, E. lon. 11. lat. 44. 45. capital of the D. of Parma, in Italy, 45 m. N. W. of Bologna, 60

m. N. E. of Genoa, and 65 S. E. of Milan. It is pleasantly sit. on the river Parma: the form circular, and about 3 m. in circumference, defended by a citadel, and other modern works, and esteemed a strong town. Here is a univ. and an academy of wits, as there is in most Italian cities; and it is the see of a bishop: The court of Parma in the reign of the late Dukes of the house of Farnese, was one of the most elegant in Europe. The Q. of Spain is a daughter of Parma, whose eldest son, Don Carlos the present K. of the Two Sicilies, was to have succeeded to this D. and that of Tuscany, by virtue of a treaty between the powers of Europe: but the Q. of Spain and her son were content to relinquish their interest in those Duchies, in consideration of Don Carlos's being confirmed in the dominion of Naples and Sicily by the house of Austria, anno 1736; but by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, the Duchies of Parma, Placentia, and Guastalla, were conferred on Philip D. of Parma, second son of the Dowager Q. of Spain, and brother to Don Carlos K. of the Two Sicilies, anno 1748.

PARNASSUS, a mountain of the ancient Greece, now European Turkey, sit. in the W. part of Achaia, now Livadia, N. of the gulph of Lepanto, whose high tops appear in two points at Delphos, the present Castro, and occasioned its being called Biceps Parnassus. Below the cleft rises a spring, supposed to be the ancient Fons Castalis, where the Pythian prophets, and the poets who pretended to inspiration, used to bathe and drink the waters.

PARNAU, or PERNOW, E. lon. 24. lat. 58. a city and port town of Livonia, sit. on a bay of Livonia in the Baltic sea, 80 m. N. of Riga.

PAROS, E. lon. 25. 30. lat. 36. 30. one of the smallest of the islands of the Cyclades, or Archipelago, in the midway almost between the Morea and the Lesser Asia, famous for its marble, but more famous for its excellent statuary, Phidias and Praxiteles, tiles, who seemed to give life to the statues they wrought; and some of them became the objects of divine worship. This island was dedicated to Bacchus, on account of the excellent wines it produced.

PARTENKIRK, E. lon. 11. lat. 47. 30. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Bavaria, sit. 40 m. S. W. of Munich.

PARTENAY, W. lon. 20. min. lat. 45. 45. a town of France, in the pr. of Orleanois, and ter. of Poictou, sit. 30 m. W. of Poictiers.

PARTHIA, a country of Asia, formerly so called, sit. almost in the middle of the modern Persia.

PAS, E. lon. 2. 30. lat. 50. 15. a town of the French Netherlands, in the pr. of Artois, sit. 12 m. S. W. of Arras.

PASLAY, W. lon. 4. 20. lat. 55. 45. a town of Scotland, in the co. of Renfrew, sit. 6 m. W. of Glasgow.

PASSAO CAPE, a promontory of Peru, in S. America, just under the equator, W. lon. 81.

PASSAGE, W. lon. 1. 53. lat. 43. 30. a port town of Spain, in the pr. of Biscay, and ter. of Guipuscoa, 60 m. E. of Bilboa, and a very little E. of St. Sebastian's, a station of the Spanish men of war, and where the French burnt several in the last war between France and Spain.

* PASSAGE, a town in the co. of Waterford, and pr. of Munster, in Ireland, seated on Waterford harbour, 5 m. E. of that city. Also another place so called sit. on Cork harbour, 5 m. S. E. of Cork, where great ships ride.

PASSAU, E. lon. 13. 30. lat. 48. 30. a city of Germany, in the cir. of Bavaria, cap. of the bish. of Passau, sit. at the confluence of the three rivers, Danube, Inn, and Ilts, 60 m. S. E. of Ratisbon, and 15 m. N. W. of Lints. It is naturally strong, surrounded on all sides by rocks or rivers; but it has been taken and retaken several times in the wars between the houses of Austria and Bavaria, or rather has surrendered without staying to be besieged; from whence we may conclude, that the fortifications are not very strong, or the bish. who is sovereign of it, chuses to submit rather than his people should suffer in their fortunes, and have their houses beat about their ears. The ter. belonging to it, lies chiefly on the N. side of the Danube, between the pal. of Bavaria, and the Upper Austria. Here a treaty was concluded between the Emperor and the Protestant Princes and states of the Empire, anno 1552, whereby the Lutherans were established in the free exercise of their religion.

PASTO, W. lon. 77. lat. 2. a city of Popayan, in S. America, 120 m. N. of Quitto; sub. to Spain.

PATAI, E. lon. 1. 50. lat. 48. 5. a town of France, in the pr. of Orleanois, sit. 14 m. N. of Orleans.

PATAGONIA, the most southern part of S. America, is sometimes extended from the mouth of Rio di la Plata, in 36 degrees of S. lat. to cape Horn, in 55. 30. and sometimes the Spaniards are pleased to comprehend all Patagonia in the government of Chili; but the properest limits of it on the N. are a line drawn from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, in 45 degrees of S. lat. for beyond this line neither the Spaniards, or any other European nations have any settlements, but it remains in the possession of the Patagonians, or southern Indians; a very unpolished people, of whose religion, government, or customs, we know little. The other boundaries of this country are the Atlantic Ocean on the E. the Southern Ocean on the S. and the Pacific Ocean on the W. Cape Horn being the utmost southern limits and ending in a point. The people of this country are of a tawny, or olive colour, of a middle stature, and usually painted with red earth; their faces discoloured with black streaks and white spots; their cloathing the skins of seals, otters, or other animals, sewed together, making a piece five foot square, which they wrap about them when they sit still, but throw off when they are in action, fishing, hunting, &c. on their heads the men have caps caps of skins, adorned with feathers, and on their feet have pieces of skins instead of shoes. The women have no covering on their heads but their hair, are clothed like the men, but they adorn themselves with rings and bracelets about their arms and necks; they feed on fish and flesh, but there are neither giants or canibals among them, as the first adventurers on this coast gave out. It is generally a barren country, at least it appears such, not being cultivated by the natives, yielding no corn, and very little fruit. The Spaniards built forts, and sent some colonies to the straits of Magellan, at the first discovery of them, but most of their people perished there, and no European nation has thought fit since to send any colonies thither.

P A

PATAN, E. lon. 89. lat. 27. 30. the capital of a pr. in the E. Indies, in Asia, sit. 200 m. N. of Huegly, in Bengal.

PATCHUCA, or PATIOQUE, W. lon. 103. lat. 21. a city of Mexico, in N. America, sit. 70 m. N. of Mexico, near which is a silver mine; sub. to Spain.

PATMOS, E. lon. 27. lat. 37. one of the least of the islands in the Archipelago, S. W. of Samos, most considerable for its commodious harbour. To this island St. John the Evang. was banished, and the monks pretend to shew a cave where the Holy Ghost dictated the Revelations to him. This island with the rest is sub. to the Turks.

PATNA, E. lon. 85. lat. 26. a city of the Hither India, in Asia, capital of the ter. of Patna, in the pr. of Bengal, sit. on the river Ganges, 4000 m. E. of Agra; sub. to the Mogul.

PEGU, E. lon. 97. lat. 17. 30. a city of the Further Peninsula of India, in Asia, capital of the K. of Pegu, and sit. on a river of the same name, 300 m. N. W. of Siam.

PEGU KINGDOM, is sit. on the E. side of the bay of Bengal, in the E. Indies, in Asia, bounded by the K. of Ava on the N. by the mountains, which separate it from Laos on the E. by the K. of Siam, and the bay of Bengal on the S. and by another part of the bay of Bengal on the W. This country, like others between the tropics, is flooded when the sun is vertical, but the mud and slime which the waters leave when they retire, render the low lands fruitful as the Nile does those of Egypt; as to the higher grounds, they are parched up soon after the rains are over; and if they sow wheat on them, as they sometimes do, they are forced to water their fields by little channels, which convey the water to them, from their cisterns and reservoirs. But they sow much more rice than wheat, which is more suitable to the flooded soil. They have not much of the European fruits, unless figs, oranges, lemons, citrons, and pomegranates; but they have bananos, goyvas, durions, mangoes, tamarinds, annanas, or pine-apples, coco-nuts, and other tropical fruits; they have also pepper and sugar-canes, and great variety of melons, cucumbers, roots, and other garden-stuff, which is their principal food. Their hills are covered with wood, and they have a great deal of good timber; but their bamboes, a kind of hollow cane, which grows to the bigness of near a foot diameter, is of the greatest use; this they bend and form while it is young, making it fit for whatever they design it, and particularly to hang their palanquins upon: these are couches on which they lie when they travel, carried upon mens shoulders. They have few horses or sheep, but plow with oxen and buffaloes, and carry burthens upon them as well as camels; nor does any place abound more in elephants than this and the adjacent countries: they compute the strength of their armies by the number and size of their elephants. The English, from Fort St. George, traffic pretty much with this country, and, besides furs and skins, import from thence rubies, sapphires, and other precious stones. The houses here are built frequently on pillars by the river side, and in the time of the rains they have no communication with one another but by boats in the flat country. Of what nature their government is, the Europeans can give but a slender account, only that they have a King, and they presume he is absolute, as most of the eastern Princes are; and it is said he is sometimes tributary to the King of Ava. There is one thing that seems peculiar to the people on the E. side of the bay of Bengal, they are so far from resenting a foreigner's being free with their women, that they will offer their daughters to them for temporary wives, while they remain in the country; and some say they will offer their wives to strangers, to mend the breed, not being much in love with their own copper colour.

W. of the Cang sea, a bay of the Pacific ocean. The city is about 20 m. in circumference, and contains 2,000,000 of people, which is more than double the number there is in London. The chief streets are 120 feet broad, and 3 m. long. In the shops before their houses their silks and china ware are exposed to sale, from one end to the other, and make a very beautiful appearance. The walls of this city are so high that they cover the town, and broad enough for several people to ride abreast; and are strengthened by square towers, at about a bow-shot distance. The gates are of marble, and have a large fortress built before each of them. The Emperor's palace, with the gardens, are in the middle of the city, being 2 m. long, and one broad, inclosed with a wall. The town stands on a level plain, no hills in it, only two artificial mounts in the Emperor's palace. They have no coaches, but are carried on horseback, or in chairs, from one part of the town to another. They have no chimneys in their houses, but use stoves or charcoal, in cold weather, nor have they any beds, but sleep on mattresses.

The chief town Philadelphia. It is a proprietary government. The heirs of Penn that notable quaker (who in the year 1680, obtained a grant of it from the Crown, and planted it) appointing the governor and council: and the house of representatives are chosen by the freemen of the pr. The produce of Pensilvania is grain, and cattle of all kinds, timber, pot-ashes, wax, skins, and furs; and they export to the sugar islands salted beef, pork, and fish, horses and pipe staves; taking in return sugar, rum, and melasses: from England they import cloathing and furniture for their houses, hardware, tools, and implements. The first planters were chiefly Quakers; but there are now churches and congregations of the established church, at Pensilvania and several other places, whither the society for propagation of the gospel send their missionaries. These peaceable people have never had a quarrel with the native Indians since they settled there; neither have they had any occasion for quarrels; for when they have a mind to extend their plantation westward, they purchase several hundred thousand acres of them for a very small sum. The few Indians that are there make no other use of the country than to hunt and kill the game: and the English planting and stocking the country with corn and cattle, is rather an advantage to them than a prejudice, being in no danger of famine now, as they frequently were before the arrival of the English, by not cultivating land enough for their subsistence.

PERSHORE, W. lon. 2. lat. 52. 10. a market town of Worcestershire, sit. 10 m. S. E. of Worcester.

PERSIA, a kingdom of Asia, is sit. between 45 and 67 degrees of E. lon. and between 25 and 45 degrees of N. lat. being 1200 m. long, and almost 1200 broad, and is bounded by Circassian Tartary, the Caspian sea, and the river Oxus, which separates it from Uibec Tartary, on the N. by E. India on the East by the Indian ocean, the gulphs of Ormus and Boffora, or Persia on the S. and the Turkish empire on the W. The limits on the side of India, have lately been extended further Eastward, by the late Sophi Shah Nadir; who added all the Indian provinces on the West side of the river Attoc, or Indus, to the Persian empire; which the Great Mogul confirmed to him, when he relinquished his conquests of the Indian provinces, which lie E. of the Indus, anno 1739. On the side of Turkey, the boundaries cannot be exactly fixed, for tho' the river Tigris forms part of [the western boundary, near its mouth, the Turks and Persians are still contending for the provinces which lie further N. upon that river. The air of Persia is excessive hot in the summer, lying near the tropic of Cancer; even the winds are so hot for two or three months every year, that there is no travelling or stirring abroad about noon; several have been killed by them. These winds come from the eastward over a vast tract of burning sands, heated like an oven; but then the wind shifts, and they are refreshed with cool breezes in the afternoon. There is very little water in Persia, scarce a river that will carry a boat; and a traveller does not meet with water sometimes for several days; but there is no place where they husband the water better. They collect all their little springs and rivulets, and turning them into one stream or aqueduct, direct them to their towns, and to the fields and gardens, that are cultivated, forty or fifty miles frequently. The country is much incumbered by mountains, and some of them exceeding high, and generally dry barren rocks without trees or herbage; but there are many fruitful valleys, in which their great towns stand; nor can any country be more fruitful than that part of Persia which lies upon the Caspian sea: and in other parts it is not so much a defect of the soil, as the paucity or slothfulness of the modern inhabitants, that renders the country barren; for there was not a more plentiful country in the world formerly, if we may credit ancient history. The chief produce is rice, wheat, and barley: their kitchen gardens are supplied with a great variety of roots and herbs, and they have no less than twenty several sorts of melons, which the common people make their constant food in the season for them, as well as cucumbers. They have also a variety of grapes, making wine of some, and others hang upon the vines good part of the winter; the air being so dry that it preserves all kinds of fruit a great while after they are ripe. Dates are a most delicious fruit here, which being laid on heaps, candy and preserve themselves without sugar; they have also pistachio-nuts, and trees that produce manna; nor do they want many of the fruits of Europe. Here also we meet with rhubarb, senna, and abundance of other medicinal drugs. They have a very fine breed of horses; but their camels and dromedaries are the most useful animals in this sandy country, for carrying burthens over the deserts; as some of them will carry near a thousand weight, and travel several days without water. They have also mules, oxen, buffaloes, and asses for their husbandry; and large flocks of sheep and goats; some of their sheep having six or seven horns a-piece. They are sometimes visited with locusts, which destroy all the fruits of the earth where they happen to light. There are a multitude of eagles, hawks, and other birds of prey, which they teach to fly at the game, and even at deer and wild beasts; and these with the assistance of dogs, will take the fiercest beasts; nothing except the wild boar can escape their clutches. The manufactures of Persia, are embroidery, especially that of gold and silver, either in cloth, silk, or leather; and that which we call Turkey leather, comes chiefly from hence, through Turkey: but silk is the chief manufacture of the country; such as taffaties, tabbies, sattins, and silk mixed with cotton, or camel and goat hair; brocades and gold tissue, and their gold velvet is admirable: and those called Turkey carpets carpets are really Persian. They make also camel-hair stuffs, camblets, silk and worsted druggets, and goat-hair stuffs.

Their greatest ministers do not think the business of a merchant beneath them; the King himself has his factors and agents in the neighbouring countries, who export silks, brocades, carpets, and other rich goods; but the Armenians and Banaians of India, who reside here, carry on the most distant foreign traffic; and may be looked upon as the greatest merchants in the world. They export raw as well as wrought silk, in great quantities to India, Turkey, Moscow, England, &c. By the permission of the Czarina, the English Russia company traded thro' Russia down the river Wolga, and over the Caspian sea to Persia, where they barter'd the British woollen manufactures for the Persian silks, between the years 1741, and 1746; but some of the company's officers being about to build ships on the Caspian sea for the use of the Persians, the Czarina prohibited their traffic to Persia thro' her dominions, and that trade is now fallen into the hands of the Armenians. Persia is an absolute monarchy, and the crown hereditary; but the reigning Prince takes the liberty sometimes to appoint his younger son to succeed: and whenever the King mounts the throne, he orders the eyes of all his relations to be put out, who may possibly be his rivals. The late King, Sha Nadir, was the first of his family that ever wielded a scepter. After a civil war of near thirty years continuance, and three or four successive usurpations, Sha Thomas, the almost only surviving heir of the last royal family, was so fortunate as to defeat all his enemies, and was looked upon to be well established in his father's throne; for which he was in a great measure indebted to the conduct and bravery of his General Kouli Kan, and in gratitude for his services, vested him with an unlimited power, both in the army and the civil administration; which the General making ill use of, the K. 'tis said, had determined to lay him aside, and some suggest that he only waited for an opportunity to cut off his head. At least, the general pretended that the King had a design against his life; and thereupon caused the Sophi to be seized and imprisoned, if not murdered; and soon after usurped his throne. After which he assembled a more numerous army than Persia had seen of late years, invaded India, and plundered that country of immense treasures; compelled the Great Mogul to yield him all the provinces W. of the river Attoc; after which he made a conquest of the Bucharas and Usbec Tartary, and enlarged the Persian frontiers on the side of Turkey; but in the midst of his successes he was assassinated by his nearest relation, and a multitude of usurpers have succeeded him.

As to the religion of the Persians, they were generally Mahometans of the sect of Haly; but Sha Nadir being a native of Chorassan in the North of Persia, where the sect of Omar prevails (being the same sect that the Turks and the subjects of the Mogul are of) he compelled all the Persians to declare themselves of the sect of Omar, which many of the Persians, and especially their priests, opposing, Sha Nadir, the late Sophi, ordered the Mussi and several more of the priests to be hanged; after which none of the Persians dared to murmur at the alteration. As to the forces of the Persians, they were not very numerous till the last reign; but Sha Nadir having such large conquests in view, increased them to upwards of 100,000 men; whom he maintained out of the plunder of his new conquests, and eased his Persian subjects of a great part of their usual taxes; which by means he gained their hearts: only those that opposed his usurpation were oppressed; and the estates of these being confiscated, added to his treasury, and enabled him to be favourable and generous to his friends.

PERU, formerly a powerful empire, now a province of Spain in South America, is sit. between 60 and 81 deg. of W. lon. and between the Equator and 25 degrees of S. lat. being near 2000 m. in length, from N. to S. and from 200 to 500 broad; bounded by Popayan on the N. by the mountains of Andes or Cordillera's, which separate it from the country of the Amazons and Paraguay on the E. by Chili and La Plata on the S. and by the Pacific ocean on the W. the capital city now is Lima, formerly Cusco. The land next the sea is high: the sierra's or mountains, beyond which, run parallel to the former, are still higher, and the Andes beyond these, are the highest mountains in the world. The land near the sea, is for the most part a barren desert, except some valleys, into which they turn the streams from the hills: the hills beyond, also, are generally barren; but between the hills are very extensive fruitful valleys, yielding almost all manner of grain and fruits; and the weather temperate. The mountains of the Andes are cold, being covered with snow the greatest part of the year. The sea which borders on Peru, is called the South-Sea, but more properly the Pacific ocean, from the constant serene weather on this coast, from 4 degrees S. lat. to 25. Nor is there ever any rain on this coast, or the sea near it, unless within 4 or 5 degrees of the line, where they have always rain when the sun is vertical, as in other parts of the globe near the line; on the sierra's or hills, distant from the sea side, the rains fall when the sun is vertical also, and on the cordelero's or high mountains farthest from the sea, it rains or snows two thirds of the year. Their vintage is in the fair season, and their vines thrive best in those valleys near the sea, where there is little or no rain, and which are watered by rivulets that fall from the hills, and are collected by the husbandman, and turned into his fields and gardens. Near the equator there grow cedars, cotton trees, cocoes, sugarcanes, palms, and a great deal of good timber; but very few forest trees in other parts of Peru. The most valuable tree they have, is that which furnishes them with kinquina, or Peruvian bark; and this grows chiefly in the province of Quitto, on the mountains near the city of Quitto, about 5 degrees S. of the equator, and is of the size of a cherry-tree, bearing a long reddish flower, from whence arises a pod with a kernel like an almond; but the fruit does not seem to have the like virtues as the bark: they have trees also, which afford this kind of bark, in Potosi, in 21 degrees S. lat. Maiz, or Indian corn, was their principal food, and of this also they made drink; but the Spaniards have introduced wheat and barley, which thrive very well here; and their vineyards, which they have planted, yield plenty of grapes, where they can be watered, but the country is so hot and dry that the soil will produce no grapes where it is not watered: they have ripe grapes when they please, where they have an opportunity of watering them, by turning rivulets into their grounds; and they make excellent wines, which cannot be done in any other country between the tropics. The Spaniards have planted almost all the fruits which grow in Old Spain; and these thrive very well here, as well as rice, and the produce of the kitchen-garden. A great many excellent balms, gums and drugs, also are found here, and particularly that called the balsam of Peru. But what the Spaniards value

lue this country for most, is the prodigious treasures of gold and silver they have drawn from thence for 200 years past; from the mountain of Potosi alone, which lies in 22 degrees of S. lat. there was drawn two thousand millions of pieces of eight, the first forty years they were wrought; there are also rich mines of quicksilver in Peru, and some precious stones; particularly emeralds and turquoises. As to animals, there were not in Peru, or any part of America, any horses, cows, elephants, camels, asses, mules, sheep, or hogs; and but one poor species of cur-dogs, before the Spaniards arrived; but they have since carried over all manner of European animals almost, which are exceedingly multiplied; but they had a breed of animals, which the natives called pacos and guanacas, and the Spaniards Peruvian sheep, because they had some resemblance of European sheep, but larger, and used to carry burdens, having no other beasts of burden; their flesh also is very good meat. They had another beast called vicuñas, which the Spaniards named goats, because they were something like our goats, but they have no horns, and are swifter than deer; they had also red and fallow deer, and some few lions, bears, and tygers, but neither so large or so fierce as those of Europe; and there were great numbers of monkeys, but they had neither cats or rats, tho' the last have multiplied so much since the Spaniards came over, that they sometimes destroy their crops of grain in Peru, as they do in the island of St. Helena; nor were there any tame fowls or poultry here, till they were imported. They had all manner of wild fowl almost, and a great variety of birds, particularly parrots, and a fowl called a couder, so large that they measured 15 or 16 feet with their wings extended; these would kill and devour cattle, and sometimes children of 10 or 11 years of age; but there are few of these fowls. The Peruvians were idolaters, and worshipped the sun chiefly; but the Spaniards have compelled them to turn Christians, and profess another kind of idolatry, on pain of the inquisition; many thousands of them were murdered by the Spaniards, after their arrival, on pretence of their infidelity, and refusing to submit to the Pope or the King of Spain, but, in reality, to become masters of their treasure, and usurp the dominion of the country, where to this day the Spaniards oppress and tyrannize, not only over those that are descended from the Indians, but the Crioli, who are descended from the Spaniards themselves.

PETERSBURG, E. lon. 31. lat. 60. the capital city of Russia, sit. on both sides the river Nieva, in the provinces of Carelia and Ingria, between the gulph of Finland and the lake Ladoga. There are several small islands also in the mouth of the river Nieva, built upon, and make part of the city; so that it is of a very large extent, and appears like several distinct towns.

Bown, rather than a single city. There were no less than 60,000 houses built within 3 or 4 years after the foundation was laid; which was in the year 1703. It stands very low, and is exposed to inundations; by which part of the fortifications were washed away before they were well finished. The breadth of the river at Petersburg is about half a mile, and as it is very deep and rapid, the building a bridge over it was held impracticable; whereupon it was proposed to the late Czar, Peter the Great, to make a bridge of pontons, or boats, but he would not consent to it, he said, because his intention was to breed up as many watermen as he could, and these he prohibited the use of oars, that they might learn to manage sails; but these boatmen being ignorant peasants, many people were overset and drowned, in passing from one part of the town to the other at first. The nobility and people of distinction were obliged to build grand houses here, but the generality were timber houses, till they began to burn bricks at Petersburg; and now the town appears with a much better face than it did at first. The sands at the mouth of the river, prevent ships coming up to it, and therefore they are obliged to take in their loading 4 or 5 miles lower. It may seem strange that Peter the Great should fix upon this place to build his capital city, it lying in a barren country, and so far to the N. that they scarce enjoy the light of the sun in winter; but it was in order to have a communication with the Baltic sea, and that his subjects might traffic with the rest of the nations of Europe; for as yet there was no sea that touched upon the territories of Russia, but that of Archangel, to which shipping was obliged to pass thro' the frozen ocean. It was with the greatest difficulty that the Czar compassed this grand design, his people shewing the utmost aversion to removing to this cold, barren country, as he commanded them, from all parts of his dominions, and such rubs were laid in his way by his nobility and officers, that it was thought impossible he should effect his design. There were neither sufficient tools or provisions provided for the workmen, who suffered all manner of hardships, insomuch that 'tis computed no less than 100,000 people perished in laying the foundation and building this metropolis. However all difficulties were at length overcome, and it is now one of the largest and most populous cities in the world. The Czar established here an academy marine, to which he obliged every considerable family in his empire to send one of their sons or relations to be instructed in navigation; here also they learned the dead languages, were taught to ride and fence, and other exercises. He set up woollen and linen manufactures, had paper-mills, powder-mills, laboratories for gunnery and fire-works, places for preparing salt-petre and brimstone; he erected yards for making cables and tackling for his navy, and a foundery, where they are perpetually casting great guns, mortars, and small arms; the country furnishing him with vast quantities of iron-ore. A printing-house also was set up, to encourage his subjects to enquire into the state of the world; and he sent many of them to foreign countries, to learn mechanic arts, giving great encouragement to foreigners to come to Petersburg and instruct his people in every science; plays, operas, and music-meetings were also introduced, in a country where none of these arts or diversions were seen till the reign of Peter the Great.

In Spain and Africa, beyond Hercules pillars, or the straits of Gibraltar; and they founded the Carthaginian state.

PHILADELPHIA, E. lon. 29. lat. 38. an ancient town of the Lesser Asia, sit. 40 m. E. of Smyrna, now in ruins.

PHILADELPHIA, W. lon. 74. lat. 40. 50. the capital city of the pr. of Pensilvania, in N. America, one of the British colonies, sit. 70 m. W. of New-York, upon the rivers Delawar and Schoolkill; being a most beautiful plan of a town. It is an oblong of two miles extending from the river Delawar to the river Schoolkill, with a front to each river, and each front a mile in length; every house having a large court or garden before it, and in the centre of the town is a square of 10 acres. The high street, which runs the whole length of the town, is 100 feet broad, parallel to which run 8 streets, which are crossed by 20 more at right-angles, and several are let into the town from the rivers. There is a fine Quay, to which ships of 4 or 500 tons may come up, and there are about 14 or 1500 houses already built, but there wants a great many more to finish the plan. The greatest part of the inhabitants are quakers, tho' there are many also of the church of England, who have two churches here. See PENSILVANIA.

PIEDMONT, a principality in Italy, so called from its lying at the foot of the Alps, is bounded by Savoy, from which it is separated by the Alps on the N. by the duchies of Milan and Montferrat on the E. by the ter. of Genoa, and the county of Nice, on the S. and by France on the W. from which it is separated by the river Var and the Alps, being about 100 m. long and 70 broad. There is not a more desirable climate, or a more pleasant and fruitful province in Italy than Piedmont, abounding in corn, rice, wine, fruits, cattle, silk, hemp, flax: the English alone have taken off the value of 200,000 l. of their raw silk annually, for several years. No country of its dimensions yields the sovereign so great a revenue as this; but their crops are sometimes destroyed by storms of hail, called the plague of Piedmont. And there is still a greater misfortune attends them, and that is, their lying on the frontiers of such ambitious and restless neighbours as the French, who have often attempted the conquest of it, and ravaged the country in the late wars. In the reign of Q. Anne, the French took every town in the country, and were upon the point of making themselves masters of Turin, when it was relieved by the late Duke of Savoy and Prince Eugene, after the battle of Turin, anno 1706, and the French were obliged to abandon Piedmont again. This country is sub. to the K. of Sardinia, Con of the late D. of Savoy, who is absolute in his dominions, consisting of the island of Sardinia, Piedmont, Montferrat, and Savoy, the counties of Nice, Tende, and Boglio or Buel, and the pr. of Oneglia, the Alexandrin, Vigevano, and Lomelin. POICTIERS, E. lon. 15 min. lat. 46. 40. the capital city of Poictou in France, being one of the largest cities in the Kingdom, sit. on an eminence, near the little river Clain, 70 m. N. E. of Rochelle. Near this city Edward the Black Prince, son of Edward III. King of England, obtained a decisive victory over the French, and took John, King of France, and his son Philip, prisoners, and brought them over to England.

POICTOU, a ter. of France, in the pr. of Orleanois, sit. S. of the river Loire, being bounded by the provinces of Anjou and Britany on the N. by Touraine and Berry on the E. by Sainthoign, Angoumois, and Aunis, on the S. and by the ocean on the W. being 150 m. long, and 70 broad; a fruitful country, very little incu-ber'd with mountains or woods. It was part of the ancient Kingdom of Aquitain. Henry of Anjou, afterwards Henry II. K. of England, marrying the heiress of this Duchy, and of Guienne and Gascony, these provinces were all annexed to the crown of England, and enjoyed by that Prince and his successors till the unfortunate reign of Henry VI.

POIRINO, or POVERINO, E. lon. 7. 36. lat. 44. 45. a town of Italy, in the pr. of Piedmont, sit. 15 m. S. E. of Turin.

POLA, E. lon. 14. 35. lat. 45. a port town of Istria, in the ter. of Venice, sit. at the S. point of the peninsula of Istria, 90 m. S. E. of Venice.

POLACHIA, a pr. sit. in the middle of Poland, upon the river Bug, having the pr. of Polesia on the E. and S. and Masovia, or Warsovia, on the W.

POLAND KINGDOM, is sit. between 16 and 34 degrees of E. lon. and between 46 and 57 degrees of N. lat. being bounded by the Baltic sea, Livonia, and Russia, on the N. by Russia and Budziac Tartary on the E. by Bessarabia, Moldavia, Transilvania, and Hungary, on the S. (separated from Transilvania and Hungary by the Carpathian mountains) and bounded by Pomerania, Brandenburg, and Silesia, on the W. being almost square, and 700 m. over either way. It is a flat level country, well watered by lakes and rivers, an exceeding fruitful soil, abounding in wheat and rye, with which the Dutch load some hundreds of ships every year, to distribute to such countries as happen to have a scarcity of corn. They have also rich meadows and pastures, which feed vast flocks and herds of cattle, with which they supply Germany; and they have an excellent breed of horses. There are mines of silver, lead, iron, and copper also, in several parts of Poland; but they make more advantage of their salt mines than of any of the rest: the country also produces flax, hemp, and furs, and they have have manufactures of linen and leather, which they export, as well as malts and yards, and naval stores, taking in return cloth, silks, tapestry, wrought plate, wines, spices, herrings and other salted fish, tin, and fruits; but the balance of trade is very much against them, and they have very few ships or port towns besides Dantzic. Their constitution is a mixed monarchy, in which the people seem to have the greatest share of the government, which makes it frequently called a Republic. The King is elected by the whole body of the gentry, who put what conditions on their Prince they see fit, before they crown him, which he takes an oath to observe, and this is called the Pacta conventa; nor can the King raise forces without the concurrence of the gentry, who are in reality petty sovereigns in their own estates; and the Crown General, as he is called, will obey no commands but those of the diet, or assembly of the states; and every Palatine, or officer, will take the liberty to return home out of the field when he sees fit, let the consequence be what it will. The King is at no expence in keeping armies on foot, or maintaining the officers of state, these are all maintained by the Republic, and accountable to it, tho' nominated by the King, with this limitation however, that he can prefer none but gentlemen, and those natives of the province where they are to act, and not related to his Majesty; nor can any one be deprived of his office, but by the unanimous consent of the diet. The King's revenues are 140,000 l. per annum, which, with his paternal estate, and what he makes by disposing of places, is an ample revenue, as all the charges of the administration are borne by the Republic, as well as the expences of the Queen consort's court. The senate consists of the Bishops, Palatines, Castellans, and ten great officers of the crown, who are consulted by the King in all acts of state. The grand diet of Poland consists of the King, the senate, and deputies or representatives of the gentry of every palatinate or county, who ought, by their constitution, to assemble once in three years, and their session continue six weeks, and no longer; and in this diet the legislative power is lodged. Every province also has its particular or provincial diet, which makes laws for the respective provinces; so that Poland is rather a great many united and confederated states than one Kingdom. There are also some free states and independent cities and provinces, who are governed by their respective Princes and magistrates; as Ducal Prussia by the King of Prussia, Courland by its own Duke, and Dantzic by their magistrates. The religion of the country is the Roman Catholic, except in the N. where the subjects of the King of Prussia and those of Dantzic, and several other cities, are Protestants. The forces of the Poles are all horse, and are rather a militia, consisting of the gentry and their dependants, than regular troops; for they serve no longer than they see fit, and if the Republic have occasion for foot, they hire them of other Princes; and since the Electors of Saxony have sat on the throne of Poland, they have furnished the Poles with more foot than they desired, inasmuch that they frequently assembled the crown army to drive them out of the country in the last reign.

POLERON, E. lon. 128. S. lat. 4. one of the Banda or Nutmeg islands, in the Indian ocean, 120 m. S. E. of Amboina, and 60 m. S. of the island of Ceram. This was one of those Spice islands which put themselves under the protection of the English, and voluntarily acknowledged James I. King of England, their sovereign; for which the natives of this, and the rest of the islands, were murdered or driven from thence by the Dutch, together with the English; and the Dutch usurped the dominion of the Spice Islands in the year 1615, taking and plundering the English ships, which came thither (tho' the two nations were then at peace) and have kept the possession of the Spice islands ever since.

POLESIA, a pr. of Poland, bounded by Polachia and Lithuania on the N. and by Volhinia on the S.

POLESIN DE ROVIGO, a pr. of Italy, in the ter. of Venice, sit. N. of the Po, and W. of the gulph of Venice.

POPA MADRE, W. lon. 76. lat. 10. 15. a town of Terra Firma, in South America, sit. on a high mountain, 50 m. E. of Cartagena, where there is a convent and chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, with her image richly adorned; to which the Spaniards of America go in pilgrimage from all parts, ascribing a great many miracles to this image of her, especially in delivering them from storms and enemies at sea.

POPYAN, a pr. of South America, bounded by Terra Firma on the N. by new Granada on the E. by Peru on the S. and by the Pacific ocean on the W. sit. between 75 and 80 degrees of W. lon. and between the equator and 5 degrees of N. lat. being 400 m. long, and about 300 m. broad. A chain of barren mountains runs thro' the country from N. to S. and near the sea, it is a flat marshy soil, almost always flooded by the continual rains; but there being a great deal of gold dust found in the sands of their numerous rivulets, in the dry season, the Spaniards, who are sovereigns of the country, have built several towns in it, the chief whereof is Popayan.

POPYAN, W. lon. 76. lat. 3. capital of the pr. of Popayan, sit. 220 m. N. E. of Quito; a bishop's see, and seat of the governor and the courts of justice.

POPE HIS TERRITORIES, in Italy, are bounded by the Venetian ter. on the N. by the gulph of Venice on the N. E. by Naples on the S. E. by the Tuscan sea on the S. W. and by the D. of Tuscany on the N. W. almost encompassing that D. on the land side, being about 240 m. long, and from 20 to 120 in breadth. The soil of the Pope's territories is generally rich, producing corn, wine, oil, silk, and excellent fruits, and would produce much more, if these countries were as populous and as well cultivated, as they were in the time of the Romans; however they so much exceed Tuscany at present, that a certain writer says, The Pope has the flesh, and the Great Duke the bones; meaning, I presume, that the lands of which the holy see has the property and dominion, are naturally fruitful, whereas Tuscany, which they surround, is great part of it taken up with the barren rocks and mountains of the Appenine. The most healthful and temperate part of the Pope's territories is Bologna, which lies N. of the Appenine hills. The Ferrarese, adjoining to it, is a perfect bog, and exceeding unhealthful; nor is the Campania of Rome much better the latter end of the summer, occasioned by the many lakes and stagnated waters, which in the time of the Romans were drained off, but now render the country so unhealthful, that it is dangerous sleeping in it; and whereas the Old Romans used to retire hither to their villa's in summer, every gentleman chuses now to reside in Rome in the hot season, to avoid the unwholesome air of the Campania. Though the Pope has a very extensive coast, both on the gulph of Venice and on the Tuscan sea, his subjects have scarce any considerable sea ports, or any merchant ships, or foreign traffic, notwithstanding the late Popes, to invite foreigners to trade with their people, have made Civitta Vechia a free port, one reason whereof may be, that their governors and wealthy inhabitants are ecclesiastics, who do not apply themselves to the advancement of trade and manufactures; but being masters of more refined arts, draw great part of the wealth of the Christian world into the treasury of the church, and live in a manner on the spoils of bigotted nations, without taking the ordinary vulgar methods of amassing wealth. The Pope is an absolute monarch in his Italian territories, for tho' he frequently holds a consistory of Cardinals who are his council in ecclesiastical affairs, they are not suffered to intermeddle in his civil government. The Pope's Prime Minister is the Cardinal Patron, usually one of his nephews, to whom he gives an opportunity of raising a vast estate; such nephews have been the founders of some of the greatest families in Italy. The Campania of Rome is under the immediate government of the Pope, the other provinces are governed by Legates, or Vicelegates, but the forces in every province and city have a commander besides, appointed by the Pope; and the Podestas, or Judges, and other inferior officers, are elected by the respective inhabitants. The Pope ingrosses all the corn in the country, the farmers being obliged to sell it to his agents, at the price he sets upon it, who sell it to the people at an advanced price, so reasonable however, that all people agree bread and corn is not dear at Rome. As to the Pope's ecclesiastical dominion, it is extended thro' the world, wherever the Roman Catholic religion has gained admittance; and whatever obligations subjects may be under to the civil powers where they live, they are often ready to cancel them all, when their duty to the Pope comes in competition with that due to their temporal Lords; and have often been spirited up to depose their sovereigns: and tho' many temporal Princes and their lay-subjects of that communion, have of late years disputed the Pope's supremacy, yet the monks and regular clergy in every country, still remain entirely devoted to the see of Rome, and are ready to oppose the civil power, whenever the Pope's authority is called in question: and these amounting, as 'tis computed, to 2,000,000 souls, are more formidable than any other militia, since they are in every prince's court, and great family in the Christian world, on which they have a considerable influence, and are subsisted at the charge of those very people to whom they preach the doctrine of the Pope's supremacy and infallibility. It is computed that the constant stated revenues of the monks and jesuits thus dependant on the Pope, amount to more than 20,000,000 sterling per annum, besides the casual profits arising by offerings, and the bounty of the people, who are taught that their salvation depends very much upon their generosity to the clergy, and the indulgences they purchase of the Pope.

F f 3. merchant

POPERINGEN, E. lon. 2. 40. lat. 50. 54. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in the pr. of Flanders, sit. 5 m. W. of Ypres.

POPO. See MADRE DE POPA in Terra Firma in South America.

P O

PORT, OR THE PORTE, the city of Constantinople, frequently called so, by way of eminence, being one of the finest harbours in Europe, and the metropolis of the Turkish Empire.

PORTALEGRE, W. lon. 8 lat. 39. 20. a city of Portugal, in the pr. of Alentejo, sit. 80 m. E. of Lisbon.

PORT DESIRE, W. lon. 70. S. lat. 47. a harbour on the E. coast of South America, sit. 150 m. N. E. of port St. Julian, where ships sometimes touch in their voyage to the South sea.

PORTEN BESSIN, W. lon. 50 min. lat. 49. 20. a port town of France, in the pr. of Normandy, sit. on the English channel, 18 m. N. W. of Caen.

PORTENTRU, E. lon. 7. lat. 47. 30. a city of Switzerland, in the bish. of Basil, sit. on the confines of Alsatia, 13 miles S. E. of Monttheliard.

PORTLAND, W. lon. 2. 35. lat. 50. 30. a peninsula in the co. of Dorset, sit. on the English channel, 10 m. S. of Dorchester. Here the best free-stone is dug, of which St. Paul's in London, and most of the grand fabrics in England are built.

PORT L'ORIENT, W. lon. 3. 15. lat. 47. 42. a fortress and port town of France, sit. in the pr. of Britany, at the mouth of the river Blavet, opposite to PORT LOUIS, being the station of the French East India ships, from whence it lately obtained the name of the EASTERN PORT, or PORT L'ORIENT, and is 78 m. N. W. of Nants, and 25 m. N. W. of Vennes, or Vannes.

PORT LOUIS, W. lon. 3. 6. lat. 47. 42. a port town of France, in the pr. of Britany, sit. on the bay of Biscay, at the mouth of the river Blavet, and sometimes called Blavet, 70 miles N. W. of Nants. It has a good harbour, and is a station for part of the royal navy, and for the ships of the French E. India company. Also a French fortress, sit. on the S. W. coast of Hispaniola taken and demolished by Ad. Knowles, anno 1747, but re-edified since.

PORT MAHON. See MAON and MINORCA.

PORTO, OR OPORTO, W. lon. 9. lat. 41. 10. a city and port town of Portugal, in the pr. of Entre-Minho-Douro, sit. near the mouth of the river Douro and the Atlantic ocean, 30 m. S. of Braga.

PORTO-BELLO, W. lon. 82. lat. 10. a port town of America, sit. in the pr. of Terra Firma Proper, or Darien, on the narrowest part of the isthmus, which joins North and South America, 70 miles N. of Panama, and 300 m. W. of Cartagena. It is a large, secure, and commodious harbour, with a narrow entrance, defended by forts and batteries; and at the bottom of the harbour stands the town, of a semicircular form as the land is on which it is built, defended also by several forts, which were all taken by Admiral Vernon, with six ships only, in the year 1742, but he quitted it again, after he had demolished the works, either on account of the unhealthfulness of the place, or because he had scarce any land-forces on board; or, as some suggest, because his orders were defective. Here Admiral Hoffer was lost by the unhealthfulness of the climate, and most of the ships buried their crews twice over, and the ships were so damaged by the worms, that they were not fit for service afterwards. The greatest part of the inhabitants are Malattoes, Indians, or Negroes. No Spaniard of substance chuses to reside in so unhealthful a place, tho' during the time of the fair it used to be so crowded with rich merchants, that above 1000 crowns were given for a poor lodging, and a 1000 crowns for a shop, during the short time the galleons remained there, and provisions were proportionably dear.

PORTA CAVALLO, OR PORTO CABELLO, W. lon. 67. 30. lat. 10. 30. a port town of Terra Firma, in America, on the Caraccos coast, sit. on a bay of the North sea, 120 m. S. of the Dutch island of Bonaire; sub-to Spain. Here the English met with a repulse, and lost a great many men when they attacked the town by sea and land, anno 1743.

* PORTADOWN, a market town in the co. of Antrim, and pr. of Ulster, in Ireland, seated on the river Bann, 13 m. N. E. of Armagh, noted for its linen trade. Here great numbers of English Protestants were drowned in the wars of 1641, by the Irish.

* PORTAFERRY, a sea port town in the co. of Down, and pr. of Ulster in Ireland, formerly a place of good trade, but of late gone to decay; sit. on the bay of Strangford, 6 m. E. of Downpatrick.

* PORTARLINGTON, a town in the Queen's co. and pr. of Leinster, in Ireland, governed by a sovereign, recorder, and portreeve, who return 2 members to parliament. It hath a weekly market on wednesdays, sit. 32 m. W. of Dublin, W. lon. 7. 19. lat. 53. 7.

PORTO FARINO, E. lon. 9. lat. 36. 30. a port town of Tunis, in Africa, sit. 30 m. N. of Tunis, a little W. of the ruins of Carthage; sub. to the Dey of Tunis.

PORTO FERRAJO, E. lon. 11. 30. lat. 42. 35. a port town on the N. side of the isle of Elba; in the Tuscan sea, 40 m. N. W. of Orbitello; sub. to the D. of Tuscany.

PORTO GALLETO, W. lon. 3. 6. lat. 43. 25. a port town of Spain, in the pr. of Biscay, sit. 8 m. N. of Bilbao.

PORTO HERCOLE, E. lon. 12. lat. 42. 20. a port town of Italy, in the pr. of Tuscany, sit. on the coast of the state Del Presidii, on a bay of the Tuscan sea, 60 m. S. W. of Sienna; sub. to Sicily.

PORTO LONGONE, E. lon. 11. 33. lat. 42. 34. a port town of the isle of Elba, in the Tuscan sea, at the E. end of the island; sub. to Sicily.

PORTO RICO, an island in the Atlantic, or American ocean, sit. between 64 and 68 deg. of W. lon. and in 18 deg. of N. lat. being 120 m.

long, and 60 broad. The face of the island consists of a pleasing variety of hills and valleys, woods and champaign, and is well watered with springs and rivers. They have their periodical rains and storms as in other countries within the tropics, and sometimes hurricanes, between Midsummer and Michaelmas. This island was conquered by the Earl of Cumberland, at his own expence, and that of other private adventurers, in the reign of Q. Elizabeth, but he was obliged to abandon it again, having lost most of his men by sickness in the latter end of the summer, when this, and all places in these latitudes, are very unhealthful. The chief produce of this island for exportation, is sugar, rum, and ginger; and they have all manner of tropical fruits and grain, and the Spaniards have introduced a great many sorts of European fruits and grain, as well as cattle.

PORTO RICO, or ST. JOHN'S CITY, W. lon. 65. lat. 18. capital of Porto Rico, sit. on a small island within the harbour, on the N. side of the chief island, and joined to it by a causeway. The town is about a mile and a half in circumference, built after the Spanish model, and fortified, as well as the entrance of the harbour, by forts and batteries of guns, which render the town almost inaccessible by sea; nor is the situation less pleasant than strong, it standing on an eminence, and commanding the ocean on one side, and the main island on the other.

PORTO SANTO, W. lon. 16. lat. 33. the least of the Madeira islands, in the Atlantic ocean, sit. 300 m. W. of the empire of Morocco, in Africa; sub. to Portugal. It is not above 18 m. in circumference, but produces the same sort of wine as the larger island does. See MADEIRA.

lat. 44. 5. a port town of Italy, in the ter. of Genoa, sit. near the bay of Spezia, 45 m. S. E. of Genoa.

PORT ROYAL, W. lon. 77. lat. 17. 30. a port town. sit. in the S. E. part of the island of Jamaica, in America, at the extremity of a long point of land, running W. about 12 m. from the body of the island, having the ocean on the S. and a fine bay on the N. which forms one of the most commodious harbours imaginable, 3 leagues broad, and deep enough for a ship of 700 tons to lie close to the shoar, well defended by forts, and platforms of guns. It formerly contained 1500 houses, and was so populous, and so much frequented by merchants and planters, that houses were as dear here, as in the best streets of London. But this fine port was miserably destroyed three times within 30 years, viz. in the year 1692 by an earthquake, in 1702 by fire, and in 1722 by an inundation of the sea; whereupon the place was abandoned, and most of the inhabitants that survived, removed to Kingston, on the opposite side of the harbour, but the conveniency of the situation has drawn a great many people thither again; and it is better fortified against an enemy, as well as against inundations, than ever it was, tho' it suffered pretty much by a hurricane, in the year 1744.

PORT ROYAL, W. lon. 80. lat. 31. 45. an island on the coast of South Carolina, in America, which, with the neighbouring continent, forms one of the most secure and commodious harbours in the British plantations. The island is about 15 m. long, and has a town on the N. E. shore, called Beaufort town; but neither the town or the island were so strongly fortified lately, as a harbour of that importance deserves. It lies near 100 m. S. of Charles-town.

PORT ROYAL, in Acadie. See ANNA POLIS.

PORT ST. MARY'S, W. lon. 6. 30. lat. 36. 32. a port town of Spain, in the pr. of Andalusia, sit. on the bay of Cadiz, 10 m. N. E. of that city. Here the English made a descent, anno 1702, in order to besiege Cadiz. They committed great irregularities, and were compelled to re-embark their troops, without effecting any thing.

PORTSMOUTH, W. lon. 1. 6. lat. 50. 48. a borough and port town of Hampshire, sit. on a fine bay of the English channel, opposite to the isle of Wight, 20 m. S. of Winchester; and 70 m. S. W. of London; one of the most secure and capacious harbours in England, strongly fortified and defended by a numerous artillery, both on the sea and land side. Here great part of the royal navy of England are built and laid up; and here are some of the finest docks, yards, and magazines of naval stores in Europe. The general rendezvous for the royal navy is usually at Spithead, on the E. end of the isle of Wight, opposite to Portsmouth. This town sends 2 memb. to parl.

PORTUGAL, the most westerly K. of Europe, sit. between 7 and 10 deg. of W. lon. and between 37 and 42 deg. of N. lat. bounded by the K. of Spain on the N. and E. and by the Atlantic ocean on the W. and S. being about 300 m. long, and 100 broad. This country is not so hot as Spain, especially that part which lies on the coast, being cooled by the sea-breezes; but it is not so fruitful as Spain, being encumbered with some of the barrenest mountains on that continent: however towards the bottom of them, they are planted with vines, which produce a great deal of good wine. The soil also produces plenty of olives, as well as oranges and lemons; but neither their oil or four oranges are so good as those of Spain. Their sweet oranges, however, which they introduced from China, and for that reason are called China oranges, are the best in Europe. They have not corn enough for their subsistence; but are supplied with it frequently from England and Holland. As to their peasants and country people, they eat scarce any other but Indian corn; a very coarse food. The flesh of their cattle is generally lean and dry; but they have plenty of chefnuts, almonds, figs and raisins. They make also a great deal of salt, of the sea water, let into shallow pans; especially in the bay of St. Ubes, from whence they export a great deal, especially to America. The foreign trade of the Portuguese consists either in the exportation of the produce of their own soil, viz. red and white Port wines, oranges, lemons, and other fruits: or in the exportation of the merchandize they receive from their plantations and settlements in Asia, Africa, and America; of which, those from Brasil, in America, are much the most considerable; for, besides vast quantities of sugar, tobacco, rum, cotton, indigo, hides, train oil, dying woods, and drugs, they import vast treasures of gold, silver, and diamonds from Brasil, having lately discovered some very valuable mines of these precious minerals there; insomuch, that the value of diamonds is sunk considerably. But, notwithstanding Portugal is now one of the richest kingdoms in the world, it is, however, the weakest. They have neither fleets or armies sufficient to defend their sea coasts or frontiers; and, were it not that the rest of the powers of Europe know it to be their interest to defend them against Spain, they would soon be swallowed up by that potent neighbour. This is a much greater security than the double marriages contracted between the two crowns, in the year 1729. Portugal is an absolute monarchy, and the crown hereditary. There are assemblies of the states and cortes here, indeed, as well as in Spain; but they only serve to confirm the decrees of the Prince. The public annual revenues of the kingdom amount to near one million sterling, clear of all pensions and salaries; but the K. receives a much greater revenue from the produce of the mines of Brasil, which it is scarce possible to make a just estimate of. There is no country to which the English trade to greater advantage; for, tho' we import the greatest part of their wine and fruit, they take our woollen manufacture in return, with which they do not only clothe the Portuguese of Europe, but the numerous colonies they have in Asia, Africa, and America; and many nations that formerly went naked, which the Portuguese have taught to clothe themselves, and conform to European customs. And, 'tis certain, we have imported a great deal of gold from Portugal, tho' the exportation of it from thence is prohibited, under very severe penalties, by their government.

* PORTUMNA, a noted Pass on the river Shannon in the co. of Gallway in Ireland; 20 m. S. E. of Gallway, defended by a garrison of one troop of horse, and two companies of foot quartered here.

POSEGA, E. lon. 18. 42. lat. 45. 35. capital of Sclavonia, sit. on the river Orana, 120 m. W. of Belgrade, and 135 S. of Buda, sub. to the house of Austria.

POSEN, or BOLZANO, E. lon. 11. 20. lat. 46. 30. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Austria and B. of Trent, sit. on the river Adige, 25 m. N. of Trent.

POSNA, E. lon. 17. lat. 52. 30. a city of Great Poland, sit. on the river Warta, near the confines of Brandenburg, 150 m. W. of Warsaw. The see of a bish. and cap. of the pal. of Posenania.

POSTDAM, or POTSDAM, E. lon. 13. 38. lat. 52. 25. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Upper Saxony, and mar. of Brandenburg, sit. on the river Havel, 10 m. S. W. of Berlin, sub. to the K. of Prussia, who has a palace here.

POTENZA, E. lon. 16. 40. lat. 40. 40. a city of Italy, in the K. of Naples, in the Basilicate, sit. 80 m. S. E. of Naples. The see a bish.

of the mountain of Potosi, in which is the richest silver mine that ever was discovered, from whence the Spaniards have drawn many hundred ship loads of treasure. It is situated in one of the barrenest countries of America, destitute of corn, grass, trees, and all manner of herbage. The hill is now little more than a shell, the Spaniards having dug through and through it: when they could get no more by digging downwards, they began at the bottom of the hill, and dug through it horizontally.

POTTON, W. lon. 15 min. lat. 52. 6. a market town of Bedfordshire, sit. 10 m. E. of Bedford.

POULTON, W. lon. 3. lat. 53. 50. a market town of Lancashire, sit. 15 m. S. W. of Lancaster.

POURSELUC, E. lon. 100. lat. 28. a city of the K. of Siam, in the East Indies, in Asia, sit. 300 m. N. of Siam.

* POWERSCOURT, a place in the co. of Wicklow, and pr. of Leinster in Ireland, which gives title of Viscount to the noble family of Wingfield, sit. 10 m. S. of Dublin.

PRABAT, E. lon. 101. lat. 16. a city of Siam, in the Further India, in Asia, sit. 100 m. N. of Siam.

PRAGILAS, or PREGLAS, E. lon. 7. lat. 44. 45. a town of Italy, in the pr. of Piedmont, sit. 7 m. W. of Turin, sub. to the K. of Sardinia.

PRAGUE, E. lon. 14. 20. lat. 50. the capital of Bohemia, sit. on the river Mulda, 140 m. N. W. of Vienna, 100 m. N. E. of Ratisbon, and 70 m. S. of Dresden. It is the largest city in Europe, and the most populous, next to London, Paris, and Constantinople; encompassed with a wall, bastions and other works, which render it as strong as a place of that extent can be; but it is commanded by several hills. It stands pleasantly, surrounded by fine fields and gardens, and is adorned with a great many elegant houses, churches, and convents. There are scarce any cities that have more nobility and wealthy people residing in them, and these are extremely polite and civil to strangers, at least, thus it was a few years ago, before the city was plundered by the French and Prussians; but it will be a great while, probably, before they recover themselves, and are able to live in that splendor they did formerly.

PRATOLINO, E. lon. 12. 6. lat. 43. 50. a city of Italy, in the D. of Tuscany, sit. 8 m. N. of Florence, where the Great Duke has a palace and gardens, with some of the finest water-works in Italy.

PRECOP, E. lon. 37. 40. lat. 46. 40. an old decayed city of European Turkey, sit. at the entrance of the isthmus which unites Little Tartary to the peninsula of Crim Tartary; of so little strength that it made scarce any resistance against the Russian forces which invaded Crim Tartary, and plundered it, two years successively, in the late wars.

PREMISLAW, E. lon. 22. lat. 49. a city of Poland, in the pr. of Red Russia, sit. 110 m. S. E. of Cracow.

PRESBURG, E. lon. 17. 30. lat. 48. 20. the capital city of Hungary, sit. on the N. side of the Danube, 50 m. E. of Vienna, and 80 m. N. W. of Buda. It is a large well built city, and stands in a pleasant fruitful country; but is not of any great strength: even the castle, which stands on a neighbouring hill, is fortified after the old way, with round towers, instead of bastions: but here are kept the crown, and other regalia, of Hungary.

PRESCOT, W. lon. 2. 45. lat. 53. 25. a market town of Lancashire, sit. 36 m. S. of Lancaster.

PRESENSANO, E. lon. 15. lat. 41. 12. a town of Italy, in the K. of Naples, and pr. of Lavoro, sit. 28 m. N. of Naples.

PRESIDII, E. lon. 12. lat. 47. 30. This is a small ter. in Italy, on the coast of Tuscany, called, the State del Presidii, or the Garrisons; consisting of several towns, garrison'd by the K. of Sicily, who is sovereign of them; of which the chief are Orbitello, Porto Hercole, and Telamon.

PRESSOVIA, or PROSSOWICE, a town, town of Little Poland, sit. on the Vistula, 20 m. E. of Cracow, E. lon. 20. lat. 50.

PRESTEIN, W. lon. 3. lat. 52. 22. a market town of Radnorshire, in Wales, sit. 20 m. N. W. of Hereford.

PRESTER JOHN, the K. of Abyssinia, or Ethiopia, so called.

PRESTON, W. lon. 2. 32. lat. 53. 45. a borough town in Lancashire, sit. on the river Ribble, 20 m. S. of Lancaster; sends 2 memb. to parl. Here the malecontents, after a smart engagement, thought fit to surrender themselves prisoners, anno 1715.

PRESTON PANS, in Scotland. about 7 m. E. of Edinburgh, where the rebels defeated the King's forces commanded by General Cope, 21st Sep. 1745.

PREVESA, E. lon. 21. 15. lat. 38. 45. a port town of Albania, or Epirus, sit. on the bay of Larta, at the entrance of the gulph of Venice, 25 m. N. of the island of Cephalonia.

PRIAMAN, E. lon. 98. S. lat. 1. a port town of the island of Sumatra, one of the Sunda islands, in Asia, a Dutch factory, 120 m. W. of Jamby.

PRINCES ISLAND, E. lon. 9. lat. 2. a little island on the W. coast of Africa, 250 m. S. W. of Loango.

PRINCE GEORGE, and PRINCE CHARLES, two counties of Virginia, in N. America, sit. N. of James river.

PRINCESS ANN, a co. of Virginia, in America, S. of the mouth of James river.

PRINCIPAT, a pr. of the K. of Naples, in Italy, sit. on the sea-coast, between the provinces of Lavoro and Calabria, and divided into the Hither and Further Principate.

PRISTINA, E. lon. 20. lat. 43. 15. a town of European Turkey, in the pr. of Servia, sit. on the river Drino, 70 m. N. E. of Ragusa.

PROCITA, E. lon. 14. 45. lat. 41. a small island, on the W. coast of Naples, sit. between the island of Ilicia and the continent.

PROM, E. lon. 94. lat. 19. a city of the K. of Ava, in the Further India, in Asia, sit. on the river Menan, 200 m. N. W. of Pegu.

PROPONTIS, or sea of Marmora, divides Europe from Asia, having the Bosphorus, or strait of Constantinople, on the N. E. by which it has a communication with the Euxine sea; and the Hellespont, or strait of the Dardanelles, on the S. W. by which it has a communication with the Archipelago, or Egean sea. The Propontis is 120 m. long, and in some places upwards of 40 m. broad; but grows narrower at the ends, near either strait. It obtained the name of Marmora, from a little island in it, which consists of a rock of marble.

PROVENCE, a pr. or government of France, sit. between 5 and 7 degrees of E. lon. and between 43 and 44 degrees, 35 min. N. lat. being 100 m. long, and near as many broad; bounded by the pr. of Dauphine on the N. by Piedmont and the Mediterranean sea on the E. by the same sea on the S. and by the river Rhone, which separates it from Languedoc, on the W. It is mountainous on the N. and E. being separated from Piedmont in Italy by the Alps; but the rest of it, which lies upon the sea and the river Rhone, is a fine level country, producing plenty of wine, oil, and fruit. The manufactures of this pr. are chiefly silks, gold and silver lace, and linen; and they have a prodigious foreign trade to Italy, Turkey, and Spain, carrying the produce of one country to another, and exporting the produce and manufactures of most of the other provinces of France from Marfeilles; but this trade met with great interruption while the British fleet lay upon their coasts in the late war.

PROVIDENCE PLANTATION, W. lon. 70. 30. lat. 41. 30. a colony of New England, which, with Rhode island, constitute a charter government, independent of the Massachusetts, or any other colony of New England; the chief town Newport. This is a small, but flourishing colony, and inhabited chiefly by Quakers; intermixed gained, however, with many of the established church; and a missionary is maintained here, to read divine service, and preach to them, by the society for propagation of the gospel.

PROVIDENCE, W. lon. 78. lat. 23. one of the least of the Bahama islands, in the American ocean; but the best planted and fortified by the English; the crown having purchased it of the proprietors to make it a station for cruizers; being sit on the E. side of the gulph of Florida, 200 m. E. of the continent of Florida. There are other islands near this, planted by the English, but not fortified; the planters being obliged to retire to Providence, on the approach of an enemy.

PROVIDENCE, W. lon. 82. 30. lat. 12. 45. a small island, of difficult access, in the American sea, sit 150 m. E. of Nicaragua and the Mosquito country, which the English Buccaneers formerly fortified and defended against the Spanish guarda costas, but afterwards abandoned it. This island might be of great service to the English, if they send colonies to the Mosquito country, as has been proposed.

PROVINS, E. lon. 3. 20. lat. 48. 35. a city of France, in the pr. of Champaign, sit 45 m. S. E. of Paris; from the neighbourhood whereof come the Provins roses.

PRUCH, or BRUGG, E. lon. 16. 45. lat. 48. 15. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Austria, sit. on the river Leyta, 22 m. S. E. of Vienna.

PRUCK, or BRÜCH, a town of Germany, in the D. of Stiria, and cir. of Austria, sit. on the river Muer, 69 m. S. W. of Vienna.

PRUSA, or BURSA, the cap. of the pr. of Bithynia, in Asiatic Turkey. See BURSA.

PRUSSIA, a pr. of Poland, is sit. between 17 and 22 degrees of E. lon. and between 53 and 56 degrees of N. lat. being bounded by the Baltic sea on the N. by Samogitia and Lithuania on the E. by Great Poland and Waravia on the S. by Brandenburg and Pomerania on the W. being about 200 m. long, and 100 broad, and divided into Regal and Ducal Prussia; the Regal Prussia, which lies on the W. being still sub. to the crown of Poland; and Ducal Prussia, which is the eastern part of it, sub. to the K. of Prussia, whose ancestors began to style themselves Kings about the year 1700, and have been since recognized Kings by most of the powers of Europe. The chief town of Ducal Prussia is Königsburg, sit. on the Brichhoff, a bay of the Baltic sea. This country has been sub. to the marquis of Brandenburg upwards of 200 years, and here they are absolute sovereigns; the Poles having acknowledged their independency on that crown in the year 1663, upon condition, however, that upon failure of issue of the marquis and elector of Brandenburg, Ducal Prussia should revert to the crown of Poland, and be deemed a fief of that crown. Ducal Prussia is one of the coldest and barrenest countiees in Poland, but is well situated for a foreign trade, having several good ports upon the Baltic sea. The K. of Prussia's German dominions consisting of Brandenburg, Pomerania, Magdeburgh, Halberstat, and Silesia, if he can keep the last, are much more considerable; but they are separated from his Polish dominions by Regal Prussia. See BRANDENBURG.

PRUTH, a river which rises in the pr. of Red Russia, in Poland, runs S. E. thro' Moldavia, and discharges itself into the river Danube. It was on the banks of this river that the Czár, Peter the Great, was attacked, and his army almost ruined by the Turks, anno 1711, and he was compelled to yield up Asoph, and all his forts he had built upon the Black sea, to the Turks.

PTOLEMAIS, E. lon. 36. lat. 32. 30. a port town of Phenicia, now a pr. of Asiatic Turkey, sit. on the coast of the Levant, or Mediterranean sea, 20 m. S. of Tyre.

PUEBLA, W. lon. 6. 45. lat. 38. 30. a town of Spain, in the pr. of Estramadura, sit. on the river Guadiana, 15 m. W. of Merida.

PUEBLA NOVA, W. lon. 84. lat. 8. 45. a port town of Mexico, in America, in the pr. of Veragua, sit. on a bay of the Pacific ocean, 400 m. W. of Panama.

PUENTE DEL REYNA, W. lon. 1. 40. lat. 43. 5. a town of Spain, in the pr. of Navarre, sit. 13 m. S. W. of Pampeluna.

PUGGERDA, E. lon. 1. 31. lat. 42. 30. a city of Spain in the pr. of Catalonia, sit. on the river Segre, 80 m. N. of Barcelona.

PULTOWAY, or POBELTWA, E. lon. 35. lat. 50. a city of Russia, in the pr. of the Ukrain, sit. 160 m. S. E. of Kiof, and 100 m. S. W. of Belgorod: here Charles XII. K. of Sweden was defeated, and almost his whole army killed or taken prisoners: he himself, with some few Swedes escaping over the Boristhenes to Bender in Bessarabia, a pr. of European Turkey, anno 1709.

PUNA ISLE, W. lon. 80. S. lat. 3. 15. an island of S. America, sit. in the Pacific ocean, at the entrance of the bay of Guaiquil, 120 m. N. of Payta, in Peru, sub. to Spain.

PURBECK ISLE, the south east division of the co. of Dorset, sit. on the English channel.

PURRYSBURGH, W. lon. 81. lat. 31. 45. a town of Georgia, in N. America, sit. on the river Savanna, 30 m. W. of the mouth of it, 20 m. W. of the town of Savanna, and 120 m. S. W. of Charles-town, built and inhabited by a colony of Swiss, carried over thither by Monf. Purry, at the charge of the English trustees of Georgia; sub. to England.

PURY, E. lon. 3. 50. lat. 45. a city of France, in the pr. of Languedoc, and ter. of the Cevennes, sit. 70 m. S. W. of Lyons.

PUZZOLI, the ancient PUTEOLI, E. lon. 14. 40. lat. 41. 15. a city of Italy, in the K. of Naples, sit. 9 m. W. of that city, once a town that made a considerable figure, but is now in ruins, however, it is still a bishop's see, as almost every town in Naples is.

PYRAMIDS OF EGYPT, sit. on the W. side of the river Nile, almost opposite to Grand Cairo, in Africa, the grandest, as well as the most ancient, stone fabrics that remain entire on the face of the earth; the base of the largest pyramid covers more than ten acres of ground, and is, according to some, near 700 foot high, tho' others make it 600, and some a little more than 500 foot high; scarce any two people that have seen it agree in the dimensions; nor is it certain with what design they were built, by whom, or at what time.

PYRENEAN MOUNTAINS divide France from Spain, and are not inferior to the Alps in height; they extend from the Mediterranean to the ocean, upwards of 200 m. in length, and the greatest breadth is about 120; they are well planted with trees, having abundance of good timber on them: there are but five passages over them, all of them extremely difficult, but there are several fine valleys in the middle of them.

PYRMONT, E. lon. 9. lat. 52. cap. of the co. of Pyrmont, in Germany, sit. in the cir. of Westphalia, on the confines of the D. of Brunswic, 40 m. S. W. of Hanover, from whence we receive the best mineral waters in Germany.

QU

QUEBEC, W. lon. 74. lat. 47. 35. the cap. of the French colonies in N. America, sit. on the W. side of the river of St. Laurence, 300 m. N. W. of Boston. This city is fortified, and defended by a castle: Quebec was taken by some private English adventurers in 1629, but was given up by treaty in 1632. [The English have made two or three unsuccessful attempts to reduce it since, and had probably effected it the last time, but they entered on this expedition too late in the year, and wanted good pilots to carry them up the river of St. Laurence, which occasioned the loss of some transports, and several hundred soldiers, in the latter end of the reign of Q. Anne. The viceroy of Canada, who resides at Quebec, styles himself Governor, and Captain General of New France, and Louisiana, which, according to the French, comprehends all Canada and Florida, of which the British colonies are a part, and no doubt they will attempt to drive our people into the sea, in the language of a French writer, if we suffer them to continue their encroachments on our frontiers, and do not possess ourselves of the lakes which lie between Canada and Florida.]

A free imperial city, or sovereign state, large, populous, well-built, pleasantly situated, surrounded with a double wall and other fortifications, but too large to be defended without an army, and therefore constantly submits to the power that is master of the field. Here the Diet, or Assembly of the States of the Empire, usually met till the last reign, when they were prevented by the civil wars. The place where the Diet meets is a large upper room, hung with tapestry, the imperial throne and seats covered with gold and silver tissue and velvet, suitable to the dignity of the members, who are most of them Princes of the empire, or their representatives. This city is governed by its own magistrates, and is not sub. to the D. of Bavaria, whose territories surround those of this city. The Lutheran persuasion is established here, only the Popish bishop (at present the brother of the Elector of Cologne) and uncle of the D. of Bavaria, has the liberty of saying mass in the cathedral once a week. The city is plentifully supplied with provisions, their territories furnishing them with corn, cattle, and excellent wine, and they have a brisk trade in time of peace, lying upon the finest navigable river in Europe, which runs thro' the heart of Germany. The concourse of people is exceeding great here, when the Diet is sitting, which used to be the greatest part of the year before the late troubles in the empire.

E. of Florence, being encompassed by 2 small rivers. Its ancient situation resembled that of Venice, being built on several islands, and it was then esteemed one of the best harbours the Romans had; but the sea is now retired above 3 m. from it, and that which was formerly a lake, is now a fine fruitful field. This city was the residence of many Gothic Kings, and afterwards the capital of the eastern Emperors dominions in Italy, where their Exarchs, or Viceroy, resided. Pepin, King of France, who subdued this country, gave Ravenna, with most of the territories which belonged to the eastern Emperors in Italy, to the Pope, who still remains in possession of them. The soil about this city, which has been made by the sea, is so agreeable to vines, that they grow to an incredible size; planks of 12 feet in length, and 5 in breadth, 'tis said, have been cut out of the timber of their vines. This city is still the see of an archb. but is not considerable at present, either for its buildings, traffic, or strength.

It produces plenty of good wine and fruit, and every thing else that can render life agreeable, except corn, which they are obliged to fetch from the neighbouring continent.

RHODES CITY, E. lon. 28. lat. 36. 26. cap. of the island of Rhodes, sit. on the N. E. coast of the island, having a secure and commodious harbour. The town is about 3 m. in circumference, elegantly built by the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, who were in possession of it 200 years. It is defended by three walls and 29 many moats, with other works, which render it one of the strongest fortresses in the Grand Signior's dominions, and hither he usually sends prisoners of state, such as the Chans of Tartary, and Hospodars of Walachia and Moldavia, when he suspects their fidelity. The inhabitants consist of Turks, Jews, and Christians, but the Christians are not suffered to remain within the walls, in the night-time. At the mouth of the harbour of Rhodes, which is 50 fathoms wide, stood the colossus of brass, esteemed one of the wonders of the world, one foot being placed on one side of the harbour, and the other foot on the other side, so that ships passed between its legs. The face of the colossus represented the sun, to whom this image was dedicated.

ated. The height of it was 70 cubits (about 35 yards) and it held in one hand a light-house for the direction of mariners. The Rhodians were once the most considerable maritime power in the Mediterranean, and instituted laws for the regulation of navigation and commerce, called the Rhodian laws, by which maritime causes were decided in all the provinces of the Roman Empire. The Knights of St. John of Jerusalem being obliged to retire from Palestine, invaded this island, and took it from the Turks, about the year 1308, and defended it against all the power of that Empire, till the year 1522, when being obliged to abandon it to a superior force, the Emperor afterwards conferr'd the island of Malta on the Knights, of which they remain in possession, though the Turks have made great efforts to dispossess them of it.

RHONE, one of the largest rivers in France, rises in the mountain la Pourche, one of the Alps in Switzerland, and running W. thro' the country called the Valais, divides it into two parts, then passing thro' the lake of Geneva, visits that city, from whence it runs S. W. to Lyons in France, where, joining the river Soane, it continues its course due S. passing by Orange, Avignon, and Arles, falls into the Mediterranean, to the westward of Marseilles. There are several cataracts in the upper part of the river, so that it is not navigable till 4 or 5 leagues below Geneva, and it runs afterwards with that impetuous force, that it is very difficult getting vessels up the stream.

ROCHELLE, W. lon. 1. 5. lat. 46. 7. a city and port town of France, in the pr. of Orleanois, and ter. of Aunis, sit. on the bay of Biscay, opposite to the isle of Ree, 70 m. S. W. of Poitiers. This was the last city the French Protestants held out against their King; they solicited the assistance of the King of England to defend defend them, and the Duke of Bucks was thereupon sent with a great fleet and army to Rochelle; but when he arrived there, the Rochellers unaccountably refused to admit him into the town; and he returned without effecting any thing more than attacking a little fort in the Isle of Ree, which he could not take; several other attempts were made afterwards to relieve the Rochellers in vain. They at length surrendered, upon articles, to the French King, Lewis XIII. on the 8th of October, 1628.

ROCHESTER, E. lon. 34 min. lat. 51. 23. a city of Kent, sit. on the river Medway, 30 m. E. of London, and 22 W. of Canterbury. The bridge over the Medway makes a much grander appearance than London bridge, there being no houses upon it, and an iron palisade running along the walls, the whole length of it. The tide seems to run with a much greater force thro' this bridge, than thro' London bridge.

ROMANIA, a pr. of the Pope's ter. in Italy, including the Bolognese, and Ferrarese, is bounded by the ter. of Venice on the N. by the gulph of Venice on the E. by the D. of Tuscany, and the pr. of Urbino on the S. and by Modena and Mantua on the W. being 80 m. in length, and almost as much in breadth, and is sub-divided into 1. Romania Proper, 2. The Bolognese, and 3. The Ferrarese; a temperate climate, and an exceeding pleasant fruitful country, but the Ferrarese is unhealthful.

ROMANIA, a pr. of the Pope's ter. in Italy, including the Bolognese, and Ferrarese, is bounded by the ter. of Venice on the N. by the gulph of Venice on the E. by the D. of Tuscany, and the pr. of Urbino on the S. and by Modena and Mantua on the W. being 80 m. in length, and almost as much in breadth, and is sub-divided into 1. Romania Proper, 2. The Bolognese, and 3. The Ferrarese; a temperate climate, and an exceeding pleasant fruitful country, but the Ferrarese is unhealthful.

ROMANIA, the ancient Thrace, a pr. of European Turkey, is bounded by mount Argemum, or Rhodope, anciently called Haemus, which separates it from Bulgaria, on the N. by the Euxine sea and the Bosphorus or strait of Constantinople; on the E. by the Propontis, or sea of Marmora, and the Archipelago on the S. and by another branch of mount Rhodope, which separates it from Macedon, on the W. being near 300 m. long, and 150 broad. It is a fruitful country, abounding in good arable and pasture ground, but produces scarce any wine, and the mountains which divide it from Bulgaria and Macedon are exceeding cold and barren; but then they are of such difficult access, that no country is better defended naturally than this, being encompassed by the sea on the S. E. as it is by these mountains on the N. W. so that should the Turks be driven out of Servia and Bulgaria by the Christians, it would be difficult to penetrate further into the Turkish empire.

ROMANS, E. lon. 5. 6. lat. 45. 8. a town of France, in the pr. of Dauphine, sit. on the river Isere, 15 m. S. W. of Grenoble.

ROME, the capital of the Pope's territories, and of Italy, is sit. in 13 deg. E. lon. and 41 deg. 45 min. N. lat. 140 m. N. W. of Naples, and 140 S. of Florence, standing on the river Tiber, about 16 miles N. E. of the Tuscan sea, the walls about 12 miles in circumference, as they were in the time of the Romans, but not a third part of the ground within the walls is now built upon; the rest is taken up with vineyards and gardens: the inhabitants are computed to amount to 120,000 souls. There are five bridges over the river, 20 gates, and 300 antique towers, still remaining; the castle of St. Angelo is a modern fortification, but of no great strength, and serves rather to keep the inhabitants in awe, than to defend them against foreign enemies. Modern Rome stands 14 or 15 feet higher than the old city, being built on the ruins of the former, and is much more upon a level than the old city was, great part of the hills being washed down into the valleys, in so much that the Tarpeian rock, which was once a terrible precipice, from whence malefactors were thrown, is not now more than 20 feet high. The city is generally magnificently built, the streets spacious, and adorned with 300 fine churches, and a vast number of palaces and convents, and the triumphal arches, pillars, obelisks, statues, and fountains, are no small addition to its beauty; but then there are other streets as meanly built as in any town whatever. The greatest curiosities in Rome, are the ancient theatres and amphitheatres, Pagan temples, triumphal arches, baths, aqueducts, fountains, catacombs, obelisks, cirques, sepulchres, bridges, churches, palaces, statues, paintings, piazzas, colleges, and hospitals. The people of this city are said to be more obliging than in any town in Europe, and that a universal civility reigns here. They are not at all possessed with a spirit of bigotry or persecution against strangers of any country or religion whatever. This city is extremely well supplied with water, by their noble aqueducts and fountains, and there is great plenty of all manner of provisions, as corn, flesh, fish, fowl, and fruits; and the greatest variety of wines that are to be met with any where; and in the midst of all this variety, the people are extremely sober, never sitting down purely to drink, and very seldom drinking wine without water.

ROMNEY, E. lon. 1. lat. 51. a borough town in Kent, one of the cinque ports, formerly a good port, but the sea is retired from it; sit. 20 m. S. of Canterbury, and 12 m. S. W. of Dover; sends 2 memb. to parl.

RUSSE, a river of Russia, is composed of the united streams of the Wilia and Berezhina, runs from E. to W. and falls into a bay of the Baltic sea, near Memel.

RUSSIA, or MOSCOW, comprehends great part of the continent of Europe and Asia, extending from 24 to 146 deg. of eastern lon. and between 45 and 72 deg. of N. lat. bounded by the Frozen ocean on the N. by the Pacific ocean and China on the E. by Chinese Tartary, the Mogul's, Usbeck, and Circassian Tartars, on the S. and by Poland, the Baltic sea, Swedish Finland and Lapland, and Norwegian Lapland on the W. extending 3000 m. and upwards, in length, from E. to W. and 1500 m. in breadth, from N. to S. but two thirds of it are not cultivated, and scarce inhabited; and the extreme North is not habitable, and produces scarce any vegetable; but the middle and southern provinces are, many of them, as fruitful as any in Europe or Asia, producing all manner of corn and fruits which do not require a very warm sun; silk and wine, and the tropical fruits, they are pretty much strangers to. The Russians do not yet trade much on their own bottoms; their naval stores, linen, leather, furs, iron, and other produce of their country, are exported in foreign shipping, shipping, and the same shipping carry them the produce of the southern countries of Europe. The government, however, have, of late years, built a great many ships of war, and they are equal, if not superior at sea, either to the Swedes or Danes. Their land forces, which were in very little esteem before the year 1700, are so improved in military discipline, since their wars with Sweden, that they are now superior to any of their neighbours, except the Turks, and they would be a match for them, if the country was improved, and the revenues of the crown answerable to those of the Grand Signior; but here they fall miserably short. I question whether the ordinary revenues of Russia amount to 3,000,000 sterling per annum, and tho' the government is arbitrary, and might impose what it sees fit, if it should advance them much higher, it might ruin many of its subjects. As the sovereign is not here bound by any written laws, the punishments inflicted on criminals are very speedy, and sometimes barbarous; nor has the prisoner always the privilege of a fair trial; when they want witnesses, racks and tortures are made use of to extort confessions; and the lowest punishment, the knout, is very terrible, where men of figure are liable to be whipt with an instrument that takes the flesh off their bones, or cudgelled till they are not able to stand. The Russians are Christians, most of them, of the Greek church, and differ both from Papists and Protestants in many instances; they are more rigorous in their fasts than either, these being enjoined them near two thirds of the year.

This is a most secure and commodious harbour, and lies almost opposite to Boulogne, in France, but the mouth of it is choaked up with sand; and tho' they have had acts of parliament to clear it, or make another entrance, they make but slow progress in the work, not having a sufficient fund. It is pity they are not better assisted by the government, this harbour lying more convenient than any we have upon the coast, for the security of our merchant ships, and a station for our cruizers, whenever we are at war with France, E. lon. 50 min. lat. 51.

SARACENS, the inhabitants of Arabia, Sara signifying a desert, in their language, as the greatest part of Arabia is: And this being the country of Mahomet, his disciples were called Saracens, who made a conquest of a great part of Asia, Africa, and Europe, within 40 years after his death, and were sovereigns of Spain several hundred years.

SARAGOSSA, W. lon. 1. 15. lat.

41. 32. a city of Spain, cap. of the pr. of Arragon, sit. at the confluence of the rivers Ebro, Gallego, and Guerva, about 180 m. N. E. of Madrid, and 150 m. W. of Barcelona, a large, well-built city, surrounded by an old wall, and other antique fortifications. The greatest curiosity here is an image of the blessed Virgin on a pillar of jasper, which, according to tradition, is the same she left here when she appeared to St. James the apostle of the Spaniards, to support him in the conversion of the natives: She has a little Christ in her arms, and her robes and crown are covered with precious stones; angels of silver are placed round her, holding flambeaux in their hands; besides which are fifty silver lamps, to illuminate the chapel where the image stands, all day-light being shut out: And hither multitudes of pilgrims annually come to perform their devotions to our Lady of the Pillar, as she is called from the pillar the image stands on. Saragossa submitted to K. Charles III. the late Emperor of Germany, anno 1706, but was obliged to surrender to Philip the late King of Spain, after the battle of Almanza, anno 1707. King Charles obtaining a victory over K. Philip near Saragossa, anno 1710, entered this city in triumph the same evening. But a body of the English forces being surprised soon after at Brihuega, and made prisoners, King Charles was again obliged to leave the unhappy citizens of Saragossa to the mercy of their enemies, and retire into Catalonia: Whereupon Philip took a full revenge on those who had appeared in the interest of his rival K. Charles.

SARDINIA, an island of the Mediterranean, sit. between 8 and 10 degrees of E. lon. and between 39 and 41 degrees of N. lat. bounded by the strait which divides it from Corsica on the N. by the Tuscan sea which flows between this island and Italy on the E. and by other parts of the Mediterranean sea on the S. and W. and is about 140 m. long, and 60 broad: a warm country, but not esteemed very healthful. There is a pleasing variety of hills and valleys in this island, and the soil is generally fruitful, producing corn, wine, and oil in abundance, where it is manured; but the natives are a slothful generation, and cultivate little of it; nor do they seem better disposed for trade than husbandry, tho' they are very well situated for foreign traffic: It was under the dominion of Spain till the year 1708, when Sir John Leake, the English Admiral, reduced it to the obedience of the late Emperor Charles VI. It was afterwards allotted to the D. of Savoy, anno 1719, with the title of King of Sardinia; under whose dominion it still remains: But the D. was obliged to make a cession to the house of Austria of the island of Sicily, to which throne he had been advanced by the parties to the treaty of Utrecht, anno 1713.

SCOTLAND, exclusive of the islands, is sit. between 1 and 6 degrees of W. lon. and between 54. 30. and 59. 30. N. lat. bounded by the Northern, or Caledonian ocean, on the N. by the German ocean on the E. by England and Solway frith on the S. and by the Irish sea and the Atlantic ocean on the W. being 300 m. in length, from N. to S. and from 50 to 150 in breadth, from E. to W.

being indented, and almost cut through in many places, by bays of the sea, and consequently abounding in excellent harbours. The country is great part of it mountainous and barren towards the N. but there are several rich valleys in the S. abounding in corn and cattle; but both their horses and neat cattle are small; many of the latter they drive to the S. of England, and sell them lean. And tho' their soil be not the most fruitful, yet are they in some respects better situated than England, particularly as to the herring-fishery, which might be carried on to greater advantage by them than by the Dutch, the herrings keeping chiefly upon their coast, where they might take them with less expence than the Dutch do, and might cure and export them to Germany and the countries bordering on the Baltic, sooner than the Dutch could: but then this requires a stock, for which a provision seemed to have been made by the equivalent money paid them at the union; but this was squandered away, or converted into a bubble, which has discouraged enterprising people from being concerned in the fishery. They have also a linen manufacture, which, if encouraged by England, might be another fund of wealth; but there seems to be an unlucky maxim prevail, viz. that it is the interest of England to keep Scotland and Ireland low; whereas, if they abounded in wealth, they would bear a share in the expences of the government, and contribute to enrich England, by the constant resort of their great men to the metropolis, where they would lay out great part of the fortunes they should acquire by either of the abovementioned improvements.

SHROPSHIRE, a county of England, bounded by Cheshire on the N. Staffordshire on the E. Herefordshire on the S. and Montgomeryshire on the W.

SIAM, a kingdom comprehending the greatest part of the Further Peninsula of India in Asia, (viz.) 1. Siam Proper, 2. Cambodia, 3. Laos, and 4. Malacca; extends from the first to the 25th degree of N. lat. and lies between 96 and 104 degrees of E. lon. being bounded by the kingdoms of Ava and Tipra on the N. by Tonquin and Cochinchina, and the bay of Siam on the E. by the Indian ocean and the straits of Malacca on the S. and by the bay of Bengal on the W. being upwards of 2000 m. in length from N. to S. and from 100 to 200 m. broad.

This, like other flat countries, which lie between the equator and the tropic of Cancer, is annually overflow'd by violent rains when the sun is in the northern signs, for which reason their houses are built on pillars, and they have no communication with each other but by boats for some months; rice is the principal grain the country yields, their watery situation being very proper for it, and this is the principal food of the inhabitants, besides which they eat the tropical fruits, roots, and herbs, but not much flesh or fish; the flesh of their hogs is much the best, and esteemed the wholesomest in all hot countries; this peninsula of Siam abounds in elephants more than any other part of the world, and these are the greatest strength of their armies, but are of little use against European forces, who soon terrify and disorder these animals with their great guns and fire-works. The king of Siam is not only sovereign but proprietor of all the lands in the country, and receives a rent from every man that cultivates the ground; he is also the chief merchant, and suffers no man to traffic with foreigners till his agents have had the refusal of the goods imported, which is such a discouragement to trade, that the people apply themselves very little to it. His revenues are but 600,000 crowns per annum, but then all his officers and servants maintain themselves out of the lands assigned them; as well as his soldiers; and his subjects are obliged to serve him in what capacity he pleases six months every year gratis. The religion of the country is paganism; they have a multitude of convents, and nunneries, and are very severe in their fasts and penances, and great numbers of them take vows of celibacy and poverty, as our catholic friars and nuns do: all of them believe the doctrine of transmigration and a pre-existent state, and that the soul is only refin'd matter.

SIBA, a province of the Hither India in Asia, bounded by Naugraet on the N. Tibet on the E. Jamba on the S. and Lahor on the W. sub. to the Mogul.

SIBERIA, or ASIATIC RUSSIA, formerly denominated Great Tartary, is sit. between 60 and 130 degrees of E. lon. and between 47 and 72 deg. of N. lat. being bounded by the Frozen ocean on the N. by the Pacific ocean, China, and Chinesian Tartary on the E. by the Moguls and Ussbec Tartars on the S. and by the rivers Oby and Irtysh, which separate Asiatic from European Russia on the W. being upwards of 2000 m. in length, from E. to W. and 1500 m. in breadth from N. to S. the N. of it a cold, barren, uninhabited country, covered with snow 8 or 9 months in the year, the southern provinces, a more fruitful soil, but most of the natives live a vagrant life like the ancient Scythians and Tartars, depending chiefly on what they take by hunting and fishing, or the produce of their flocks and herds: there are very few towns, and very little of the land cultivated except near Tobolsk the the capital, to which part of it the Swedish prisoners were banished, and to which the Russians send most of their prisoners and some large colonies, but still there wants hands to manure the ground; great part of Siberia remains a desert. They have scarce any trade or manufactures, the principal traffic of the Muscovites of Siberia is by sledges over the lakes and frozen country to China in the winter, and they have been endeavouring to find a way into the sea of Japan and China by their rivers which fall into the frozen ocean, but have not succeeded yet as I can learn; but they relate they have met with some rich mines of silver and copper in the mountains of Siberia, which they have begun to work. I include the Calmuc Tartars within the limits of Siberia, as they acknowledge themselves subject to the empire of Russia.

SIBIT, E. lon. 45. lat. 15. a town of Arabia Felix, sit. 370 m. S. of Mecca, and 115 m. N. of Moco.

SICHEM, or ZICHEM, E. lon. 4. 50. lat. 51. 6. a town of the Austrian Netherlands, in the pr. of Brabant, sit. on the river Demer, 18 m. E. of Mechlin or Malines.

SICILY, the largest of the Italian islands, anciently called Trinacria from its triangular figure, is sit. between 12 and 16 degrees of E. lon. and between 37 and 39 degrees of N. lat. being about 170 m. long and 100 broad, it lies in a warm but pleasant healthful climate, being constantly refreshed by cool breezes from the sea, or the mountains. It is separated from Calabria in Italy only by the strait or pharo of Messina, which is not 7 m. over in the narrowest part, but from Messina on the coast of Sicily to Reggio on the continent, which is the usual passage, it may be 12 or 15 miles over. The country is divided into mountains and valleys, in which there are abundance of springs and rivulets, that make both hills and valleys exceeding fruitful, and which occasioned its being called the granary of Rome. The produce of the island is corn, wine, oil, silk, and excellent fruits, of which they export great quantities, but in foreign bottoms hitherto; their present monarch, of French extraction, applies himself with great diligence to increase their shipping and foreign commerce, and has opened a trade with Turkey, which they never had before, being, like the Spaniards, perpetual enemies to the Turkish empire. Mount Ætna in this island is a volcano, which, by its fiery eruptions and earthquakes, has overturn'd several of their cities, particularly those of Syracuse and Catania, on the eastern coast of the island. This mountain is so high that it is surrounded with a circle of snow towards the top, great part of the year, but advancing a little farther, we come to the grand volcano, from whence there issue flames and smoak. This is a basin or cavity, about 6 m. in circumference, the sides whereof are encrusted with sulphur, from whence there sometimes issues a pure flame, and the noise of this burning pit is inconceivably dreadful. This hill is much larger than mount Vesuvius in Naples, viz. about 70 m. in circumference at the bottom, and the eruptions from it have been more frequent and more terrible than those of Vesuvius. The K. of Naples, as well as this island, was anciently called Sicily, whereupon Don Carlos has revived the former name, and stiled himself King of the two Sicilies.

SIENNA, E. lon. 12. 30. lat. 43. 20. a city of Italy, in the D. of Tuscany, cap. of the Sianese, sit. 36 m. S. of Florence, on an eminence, in a pleasant fruitful country, being about 4 m. in circumference, encompassed with a ruinous antique wall, and defended by a citadel; the town is thinly peopled, but elegantly built, and the cathedral esteemed one of the finest pieces of gothic architecture in Italy. Sienna is the see of an archb. and a univ. and here is an academy of wits, as in other great cities of Italy. The magistracy of this city consists of a governor and senate, sub. however to great Duke of Tuscany, who has been sovereign of it ever since the year 1555, till when they were a powerful republic, and often contended with the Florentines for empire. Sienna is now subject to the Emperor of Germany.

SPA, or SPAW, E. lon. 5. 50. lat. 50. 32. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Westphalia and bish. of Liege, sit. 17 m. S. E. of Liege, in a bottom surrounded with hills, celebrated for its mineral waters ever since the times of the Romans; and there are still great quantities sent abroad to all parts of Europe. These waters weigh 2 grains in 3 ounces more than those of Tunbridge, and yet weigh less than common water by several grains.

SPAIN, (in which Portugal may be comprehended) is bounded by the bay of Biscay on the N. by the Pyrenean mountains, which separate it from France on the N. E. by the Mediterranean sea on the S. E. and by the Atlantic ocean on the W. lying between 10 degrees W. and 3 degrees E. lon. and between 36 and 44 degrees of N. lat. being about 700 m. in length from E. to W. and 500 in breadth from N. to S. It is very much incumbered with mountains, of which the Pyrenees, that divide France from Spain, are the chief. The rest may be looked upon as branches of the Pyrenees under different names, which run through the country from E. to W. but they are generally well planted with trees, and between them are a great many fruitful valleys; and there is this conveniency in a variety of mountains and valleys, that the mountains are always cool, when the valleys are excessive hot: the air is esteemed healthful in both, the weather being usually settled, and the heavens serene, unless in the spring and autumn; nor is the sun often obscured by clouds: the winter is so moderate in the valleys, that they have very little occasion for fires nine months of the year: but then in the months of June, July and August, the heats are very troublesome in the valleys and sandy plains; and there is a great scarcity of water, most of their springs and rivulets being dried up. The soil of Spain produces excellent wheat and barley, and they have rich pasture grounds. Their wool is the best in Europe, and used by other nations in their finest cloths. They abound in wine, oil, and silk, and no country produces better oranges, lemons, raisins, citrons, prunes, figs, capers, chefnuts, almonds, and pomegranates. The soil also produces flax, cotton, sugar, and saffron; and they have rich mines of quick-silver, copper, lead, allom, sulphur, and the iron and steel of Biscay is esteemed the best in Europe; and formerly the Spanish mines yielded the Romans more silver than any country under their dominion, though now these mines are lost or exhausted, or the Spaniards have such plenty of silver in their American plantations, that the Spanish mines are not worth the working: they import more silver from them than all the world besides. But with all these advantages Spain is poor, and very thinly peopled; for which several reasons are assigned: as 1. The celibacy of the clergy, and the locking up so many of both sexes in monasteries. 2. The expelling so many hundred thousand Moors and Jews, as they did about 200 years ago. 3. The wars they carried on with most of the powers of Europe, as well as Africa and America, for 200 years. 4. The draining their country every year of so many men to supply their American plantations, where none but native Spaniards are admitted to the chief offices and commands. And, 5. Their poverty may in a great measure be ascribed to their pride and indolence; none of them scarce submitting to laborious employments, since the wealth of America flow'd in upon them; but their neighbours the French attend them in the quality of servants, and even manage their husbandry and manufactures in several provinces. The Spaniards also export great part of the produce of their country unwrought, purchasing the silk, woollen, and linen manufactures of other nations, to supply their plantations; or rather, they act as factors for the French, Italians, English, and Dutch;

in the disposal of their manufactures, and at the return of the galleons pay the proprietors with the treasure they import from the West Indies.

The K. of Spain's dominions are the largest that are possess'd by any one monarch; so extensive, that, as one of his predecessors boasted, the sun never sets upon them all. Besides his territories in Europe, he possesses the best part of America; a fine, rich country, the provinces whereof lie contiguous, and extend 6000 miles and upwards in length from N. to S. He is sovereign also of those rich and numerous islands S. E. of the coast of China in Asia, called the Philippines, from whence he imports all the rich merchandize of the East; and in Africa he is master of Ceuta, Oran, and several other places of consequence on that coast. The K. of Spain is an absolute Prince; for tho' every province almost was governed by its peculiar laws about 300 years ago, which could not be repealed or suspended but by the consent of the states nor could the King raise taxes without their concurrence; they have now lost these privileges; or rather, their great men bartered them away, and sold themselves and their posterity to the crown, and now the cortes or states, which consist of the nobility, clergy, and representatives of the commons, only meet to confirm and record the decrees of the court, which will compel their concurrence if they should refuse it. The crown descends to the eldest son of the King, and, if there be no sons, to the females according to their seniority; and the reigning Prince seems to have a power of devising it to what branch of the royal family he pleases, if he has no issue; at least the title of the late King Philip, Duke of Anjou, depended on the will of his predecessor, and he enjoyed it accordingly, notwithstanding the royal family of France had relinquished their claim to that crown by solemn treaties. The K. of Spain is never crowned, like other sovereigns, but the Cortes or States assemble, and recognize his title, at his accession; which is all the ceremony used on his advancement to the throne. Spain is naturally well defended, being surrounded by the sea and the Pyrenean mountains; however, the King has of late kept up a standing army of 40,000 men, when he was in full peace, and probably has three times that number in arms when he is at war. This Prince also has very much improved his navy, being able to fit out a considerable fleet of men of war, tho' he has so much occasion for them in distant parts of the world, that we have scarce ever seen more than 30 men of war in one fleet; but thus much we have seen to our cost, that they fight much better than we expected, and are not the contemptible enemy they were some few years ago. The royal revenue also has been much improved since they have had a French Prince upon the throne; for so much was disposed of formerly to unnecessary officers, that 'tis said not more than five millions per annum sterling came into the King's treasury: but how much the public revenues are advanced, is not easy to calculate. As to the religion of the country, the Spaniards are the most bigotted Papists in Europe; and the Inquisition no where exercises its authority with greater tyranny.

STOCKHOLM, E. lon. 18. lat. 59. 30. the capital city of Sweden, sit. on several small islands, in the Meller lake, 300 m. N. E. of Copenhagen, 900 m. N. E. of London, and 400 m. W. of Petersburg. It is neither walled nor fortified, being sufficiently secured by nature, by little rocks and islands which surround it, tho' it has a spacious harbour, sufficient for the largest fleets, when they have entered: it is very difficult for ships to get out, as well as to get in, for it is locked up with ice four months in the year, and at other times it requires several different winds to get clear of the islands; neither are there any tides here to help them, for which reasons the grand fleet of Sweden is stationed at Carelskroon, where they can get out much easier to meet an enemy. That part of Stockholm, which is properly the city, stands upon a little island that is not more than a mile and an half in circumference, but the suburbs on the adjacent islands are much larger. It is computed there are about 30,000 inhabitants. The town is elegantly built, and a place of good trade: their exports consist chiefly in copper, iron, and naval stores, for which the English pay ready money for the most part, and sometimes beforehand, to enable the Swedes to perform their contracts with them.

STRASBURG, E. lon. 7. 35. lat. 48. 38. a city of Germany, in the cir. of the Upper Rhine, capital of the lan. of Alsace, sit. near the W. bank of the river Rhine, 55 m. W. of Stuttgart, and 60 m. E. of Nancy, in Lorraine, a free imperial city, or sovereign state, till it was treacherously surprized by the French, anno 1682. It had then a great and flourishing trade, and the Lutheran religion was established there; but they have ever since been obliged to submit to French tyranny and bigotry. Their new masters have improved nothing but the fortifications, which are made as fine as possible; and as long as the French are possessed of this capital (which in a manner commands Alsace, and gives the French an easy passage into Suabia) the Germans will never be at rest long. It is a very large city, and elegantly built, and the cathedral esteemed one of the greatest ornaments of Germany; the tower whereof is said to be near 500 feet high.

STRATFORD, W. lon. 1. 40. lat. 52. 16. a market town of Warwickshire, sit. on the river Avon, 6 m. S. of Warwick.

SUDER KOPING, E. lon. 16. lat. 58. 30. a town of Sweden, in the pr. of E. Gothland, sit. 90 m. S. W. of Stockholm.

SUEZ, E. lon. 34. 30. lat. 30. a port town of Egypt, sit. at the bottom of the gulph called the Red sea, 70 m. E. of Grand Cairo. The town consists of about 200 houses, and is crowded with people when the Turkish galleys and other vessels arrive there; but at other times is almost deserted, having no fresh water near it. The harbour is too shallow to admit ships of any great burthen. This town is supposed to be the ancient Arfinoe.

SUFFOLK, an English co. bounded by Norfolk on the N. by the German sea on the E. by Essex, from which it is separated by the river Maningtree, on the S. and by Cambridgeshire on the W. being 62 m. long and 28 broad.

* SUIR, a large river of Ireland, rises out of the same mountains as the rivers Nore and Barrow, and after a course of 70 m. meets them again in the haven of Waterford, where they fall into the sea together.

SULLY, E. lon. 2. 27. lat. 47. 45. a town of France, in the pr. of Orleans, sit. on the river Loyre, 20 m. S. of Orleans.

SULMONA, or SOLMONA, E. lon. 15. lat. 42. 6. a town of Italy, in the K. of Naples, and pr. of the Hither Abruzzo, sit. 65 m. N. of Naples. The see of a bish.

SULTSBACH, E. lon. 12. lat. 49. 30. a city of Germany, in the pal. of Bavaria, sit. 32 m. N. of Ratisbon; sub. to the D. of Neuburg, the present Elector Palatine.

SUMATRA, an island of the Indian ocean, sit. between 93 and 104 degrees of E. lon. and between 5. 30. N. lat. and 5. 30. S. lat. extending from the N. W. to the S. E. 900 m. long, and from 100 to 150 broad, separated from the continent of the Further India by the straits of Malacca on the N. E. and from the island of Java by the straits of Sunda on the S. E. This island, lying under the equator, and the low grounds near the sea coast being flooded one half of the year, is very unhealthful. The natives build most of their houses upon pillars to secure them against the annual inundations. The English have several forts and factories on the W. coast of Sumatra, of which the chief was Bencoolen: this standing among the salt-marshes they buried abundance of men every year, but having built another fort upon an eminence 4 or 5 m. up in the country, they find it as healthful there as in most other climates. To this last fort they have given the name of Marlbro. The chief merchandize imported from Sumatra is pepper, canes, and gold-dust; rice is almost the only grain that grows in the country; besides which the soil produces sugar, plantains, pine-apples, coco-nuts, and other tropical fruits; and they have plenty of limes, citrons, oranges, melons, and pomegranates. The K. of Achin, sit. at the N. W. end of the island, is the only considerable K. in it, and this seems to be a mix'd monarchy, where the consent of the nobility and great men is necessary to the making of laws; and the rest of the little governments in the island much resemble that of Achin. All the coasts of the island of Sumatra are possessed by Mahometan Princes, but the mountains which run through the island from N. to S. are inhabited by Pagans.

SUMEREIN, E. lon. 17. 37. lat. 48. 7. a town of Lower Hungary, in the island of Schut, sit. 15 m. S. of Presburg; sub. to the house of Austria.

* SUMMER-HILL, a post town in the co. of Meath, and pr. of Leinster, in Ireland, sit. 18 m. N. W. of Dublin.

SUNDA ISLANDS, are so called from their being sit. near the straits of Sunda, in the Indian ocean, in Asia. The chief of these are Borneo, Java, and Sumatra, which are described under their respective names. It is sufficient to take notice here that the Dutch by being masters of the straits of Sunda and Malacca, and having a fleet fleet of men of war lying at Batavia and upon these straits, command the navigation of the Indian seas, and can put a stop to all European nations trading to China, or to any country beyond those straits, when they please.

SURAT, E. lon. 72. 20. lat. 21. 30. a city and port town of the Hither India, in Asia, in the pr. of Guzurat, or Cambaya, sit. on the river Tapte, 10 m. E. of the Indian sea, 160 m. N. of Bombay, and as many S. of Cambaya city, being defended only by a slight wall, and some antique forts, and is about 3 m. in circumference, but very populous and vastly rich. The English, French, and Dutch, have their factors here, and trade very largely; but the Moors, Armenians, Banians, Arabs, and Jews, are much greater merchants. The English President lives in the state of a Prince; has his coaches, palanquins, and led-horses richly equipp'd, and when he goes abroad has his guards, and a numerous retinue, the Europeans finding it necessary for their officers and servants to make a grand appearance among the eastern people. The president is usually Governor of Bombay, and of all the English settlements upon the W. coast of India, and has almost as much respect paid to him as the Governor of Surat. The Mogul gives his trading subjects all imaginable encouragement, as well as foreign merchants who resort to his ports, tho' he be an absolute Prince; but the Dutch are best used, and pay the least customs, for if his officers demand more than they think fit to pay, they have a fleet of men war in India, with which they block up his ports, and compel the government to submit to their terms.

SURINAM, W. lon. 56. N. lat. 6. 30. capital of the Dutch colonies and settlements in Guiana, in South America. They have a very extensive territory, and numerous plantations about this city, which produce tobacco and sugar, part of which they took from the English, in the reign of K. Charles II. and by a subsequent peace these were confirmed to them, in consideration of the relinquishing their pretensions to New York, and other places in the northern colonies, which the English had taken from them; and the Dutch have now no other settlements in America, but those of Surinam and some little islands on the coast of Terra Firma, and among the Caribbees.

SURREY, an English co. bounded by the river Thames, which separates it from Middlesex, on the N. by Kent on the E. by Suffex on the S. and by Berkshire and Hampshire on the W. being 34 m. long and 21 broad.

SWEDEN, a kingdom of Europe, part of the ancient Scandinavia, is bounded by Norwegian Lapland on the N. by Russia and Russian Lapland on the E. by the Baltic sea, which separates it from Germany and Livonia, on the S. and by the seas called the Sound and the Scaggerack and the Dofrine mountains, which separate it from Denmark and Norway, on the W. lying between 10 and 30 degrees of E. lon. and between 56 and 69 degrees of N. lat. so that it must be 800 m. in length, and upwards, from N. to S. and 500 m. in breadth, from E. to W. The provinces of Kexholm, Carelia, Ingria, and Livonia, which formerly were possessed by Sweden, are now ceded to Russia, part of their German territories also, have been ceded to other powers, particularly Bremen, Verden, and the eastern Pomerania; Sweden retains nothing in Germany at present, but that part of Pomerania which lies N. W. of the river Pene, the island of Rugen, and the town of Wismar. It is for the most part a wretched cold country, incumbered with barren rocks and mountains, and great part of the year covered with snow; few navigable rivers, but torrents in abundance, running precipitately from their rocks and mountains, and after a short course falling into the Baltic sea, which is frozen up four or five months in the year. The country also is full of great lakes and marshes: Lapland and the northern parts produce scarce any vegetables. The riches of Sweden are chiefly in the bowels of the earth, having mines of silver, copper, and iron, which exceed any in Europe; and they have some fruitful valleys between their mountains, but these do not produce corn enough for the subsistence of the inhabitants; their being driven out of that plentiful country of Livonia therefore was an irreparable loss to Sweden. They stipulated indeed with the Russians that they should be at liberty to import corn from Livonia, but the Russians frequently excuse themselves for not complying with this article, under der pretence of a scarcity. The manufactures of Sweden are chiefly those of copper and iron, and they have been endeavouring to establish linen and woollen manufactures of late years. The exports from Sweden, besides their hard-ware, are pitch, tar, masts, deals, and wooden-ware; they import silks, stuffs, wine, brandy, sugar, spices, tobacco, paper, linen, and haberdashery ware, which balance their exportations, and sometimes exceed them. Their trade to England is the most gainful, the English taking off the produce and manufactures of Sweden, and giving them near two thirds of silver in return. By the laws of Sweden foreigners are prohibited to import any goods but what are the produce of their respective countries. The forces of Sweden consist of a well disciplined militia, every considerable farmer is obliged to maintain one soldier in time of peace, and the officers of horse and foot have lands assigned them for their maintenance; the soldiery are subject to the civil magistrate while they remain in their quarters, but when they are in actual service they are subject to military discipline. The militia of Sweden, before the loss of Livonia and their German territories, amounted to 60,000 men, Charles XII. during his wars augmented them to 120,000, but he beggar'd his country by it. The naval forces of Sweden, have always been reckon'd inferior to those of the Danes, but the Swedes usually were an over-match for the Danes by land. The public revenues which arise by the crown-lands, customs, the silver and copper mines, tithes, poll-money, and other duties, are computed to amount to 1,000,000 l. sterling per annum. Charles XII. and some of his predecessors, were absolute monarchs, and claimed the crown as their hereditary right; but upon his death the states of Sweden elected his youngest sister, and put such limitations on the crown, that their sovereign enjoys little more than the name of a King. The states obliged that Princess to declare that she held the crown of the states, and renounced for herself and her posterity, all arbitrary power; that she should profess the Lutheran religion, and no other should be tolerated; that the states should not submit to any taxes or laws that were not made by their own consent: and that she should not make peace or war but by the like consent: and the administration of the government was lodged in 24 senators, of whom the sovereign was no more than President. She was disabled from meddling with the public treasure, without their consent, or to dispose of any office, civil or military. And this they insisted was the original constitution of their government; which the late King also was obliged to declare, and renounce Calvinism, in which he was educated, when the late Queen procured him to be elected King; and the same articles the Duke of Holstein-Eutin, his present Majesty, was obliged to subscribe, when they declared him successor to the crown.

SWERIN, E. lon. 11. 30. lat. 54. a town of Germany, in the cir. of Lower Saxony, capital of the D. of Mecklenburg, sit. on the lake Swerin, to which it gives its name, 22 m. S. of the Baltic sea, 15 m. S. of Wismar, and 65 m. E. of Hamburg; sub. to the D. of Mecklenburg.

SWERNICK, E. lon. 20. lat. 44. 30. a town of European Turkey, sit. on the river Drino, on the confines of Servia and Bosnia, 80 m. W. of Belgrade.

SWINDON, W. lon. 1. 50. lat. 51. 32. a market town of Wiltshire, sit. 25 m. N. of Salisbury.

SWITZ, or SWISSE, E. lon. 8. 30. lat. 47. capital of one of the cantons of Switzerland, to which it gives its name, sit. on the E. side of the lake Lucern, 16 m. S. E. of the city of Lucern. The canton or ter. belonging to this town is 20 m. long, and 18 broad. There are no walled towns in it. The inhabitants are generally Protestants, and are under the protection of the canton of Bern.

SWITZERLAND, or SWISSERLAND, stiled Helvetia by the Romans, is surrounded by the territories of France, Germany, and Italy, being bounded by the Suntgow, the Black Forest, and other parts of Suabia, on the N. by the lake of Constance, Tyrol, and Trent on the E. by the Duchies of Savoy, Milan, and other provinces of Italy, on the S. and by the French provinces of Burgundy and Franche-Compte on the W. being about 260 m. long, and upwards of 100 broad, there being some parts of Italy and France comprehended in it, which were not included in the ancient Helvetia. Switzerland lying between 45 and 48 degrees of N. lat. might be expected to be a warm country, but as it is situate on the Alps, the highest mountains of Europe, and great part of the year covered with snow, the air is much sharper here than in countries that lie more northerly. And as Switzerland is separated from other countries by high mountains, so every canton, or province, almost, is divided from its neighbour by a ridge of hills, which are not barren, but in summer afford good pasture to the sheep, and on some of them we meet with plow'd fields: two thirds of the canton of Bern (much the largest and most considerable province) is a plain fruitful country, abounding in corn. The largest rivers in Europe have their source in these mountains, particularly the Rhine, the Rhone, the Danube, the Rufs, and the Inn; and there are a great many extensive lakes, as those of Constance and Geneva, which are either of them 60 m. long, and besides the lakes in the valleys there is one on the top of every mountain almost; here are also abundance of fine woods, particularly of pine and fir-trees. The soil produces some corn and wine, but not in great quantities, and the fruits of the earth are frequently destroyed by storms, or killed by cold rains, and sometimes they lose their harvest entirely. In plentiful years therefore, they lay up their corn in magazines, to prevent the poor people's perishing, when such calamities happen. What they abound in most, is cattle; they drive a great trade with them in the neighbouring countries, and their lakes furnish them with plenty of fish. They have some crape and linen manufactures, but scarce any of silk, wool, or hair; most of their cloathing is imported from abroad therefore, as well as their corn and wine, of which they have not enough to supply their necessities. The balance of trade therefore being much against them, the Switzers endeavour to retrench all superfluities, prohibit the wearing of gold, silver, silk, thread-lace, or jewels, and whatever else is more chargeable than useful in dress. Switzerland is usually divided into 3 classes, 1. Switzerland Proper, or the thirteen cantons. 2. The subjects of Switzerland, or the conquer'd countries. And, 3. The allies of Switzerland, such as the Grisons, the republic of Geneva, &c. The general Diet represents the Helvetic body, or the 13 cantons, and is held at Baden on the feast of St. John Baptist annually, but seldom lasts longer than one month. Here the affairs of their common subjects are debated and regulated, but all other matters are treated of at particular Diets of their respective religions, that of the Protestants being held at Aaraw, and that of the Roman Catholics at Lucern. And indeed the 13 cantons do not make one commonwealth, but are so many independant states united together by strict alliances for their mutual defence. For every canton, or province, has its particular Diet, or Assembly, which makes laws for the government of the canton, and is not contradicted by the resolutions of the General Diet in any thing, but what relates to their common bailliages, or to their mutual defence. The government in some cantons is aristocratical, and in others democratical. The 7 aristocratical cantons are those of Zurich, Bern, Lucern, Basil, Friburg, Soleure, and Schaffhausen; the 6 democratical cantons are those of Uri,

S W

Uri, Switz, Underwald, Zug, Glaris, and Appenzel. The Protestant cantons are those of Zurich, Bern, Basil, and Schaffhausen, two thirds of the canton of Glaris, and more than half of Appenzel; the rest are Roman Catholics. The Protestants are much the strongest, and their territories more extensive and fruitful, but then the Popish cantons are supported by the Popish powers, which surround them. The legislative power in the canton of Bern is lodged in the great council, consisting of 299 persons, and the executive power in a senate of 27, elected out of the great council. The government in the other aristocratical cantons is much the same as that of Bern, but in the democratical cantons every town and every parish is a distinct state, and the supreme legislative power is lodged in the diffusive body of the people; every male of 16 years of age, and every servant, as well as his master, has an equal share in the government, and gives his assent to every law. There are no standing forces kept up in Switzerland, but there is no where a better regulated militia. Every male from 16 to 60 is inrolled; and one third of them regimented; and out of the other two thirds, these are recruited from time to time; and tho' neither horse or foot receive pay while they remain at home, yet as soon as they take the field their pay is settled; and for the readier assembling their militia, there are signals in the most conspicuous places made by fire in the night-time, and a smook in the day, upon which the whole body of their militia run to arms, and march to the appointed rendezvous. And what renders them much better disciplined than the militia of other nations, is the custom of the young fellows to serve 3 or 4 years in their troops abroad, after which their officers are obliged to permit them to return home, so that great part of their militia have actually been in foreign service, and may therefore well be deemed as good as regular troops. In the late war between the Protestant and Popish cantons, the canton of Bern had 40,000 men in the field, and the canton of Zurich 20,000, but the rest of the cantons are not near so powerful as these.

SWOLL, or ZWOLL, E. lon. 6. lat. 52. 37. a town of the United Netherlands, in the pr. of Overijssel, sit. 17 m. N. of Deventer.

SYRACUSE, E. lon. 15. 5. lat. 37. 25. a city and port town of Sicily, in the pr. of Val de Noto, sit. on a fine bay of the Mediterranean, on the E. coast of the island, 65 m. S. of Messina. Once the capital of a flourishing state, and of the whole island, but has been so often destroyed by enemies and earthquakes, that there are but few remains of its ancient grandeur. It has however still so commodious a harbour that people resort to it again, and have rebuilt some part of the town, and it is still the see of a bishop.

SYRIA, a part of Asiatic Turkey, is bounded by Natolia and Turcomania on the N. by Diarbec, or Mesopotornia, on the E. by Arabia and Palestine on the S. and by the Levant sea on the W. The Turks divide Syria into 3 beglerbeglies, or viceroyalties, viz. Those of 1. Aleppo. 2. Tripoli. And 3. Damascus, or Scham, the seats of the respective viceroys. That of Aleppo takes in the North part of Syria, Tripoli the middle, and Damascus the South of Syria. This country produces corn, wine, oil, oranges, lemons, pomegranates, pease, beans, and all kinds of pulse and garden-stuff, and has a good trade in silks, camblets, and Turkey leather, and they export vast quantities of salt, with which the surface of the earth, as well as their lakes, is covered in some places.

TARTARY, which is the same country as the ancient Scythia, comprehended all the North of Europe and Asia, of which the Russians possess much the greatest part at present, and have given it the name of Siberia, which extends from the rivers Oby and Irtysh, that divide Asia from Europe, to the Pacific ocean.

Chinese Tartary, which lies N. of China, and is bounded by Siberia on the North and West, is now the largest country that goes by the name of Tartary, possessed by one sovereign, and for that reason is sometimes called Great Tartary. The Tartars which lie south of Siberia and Muscovy, are the Tartars of Astracan, Circassia, and Dagistan, situate N. W. of the Caspian sea. The Kalmucks, which lie between Siberia and the Caspian sea. The Usbec Tartars and Moguls, which lie North of Persia and India, and those of Tibet, which lie N. W. of China. Of these the Tartars of Astracan are subject to Muscovy; those of Circassia and Dagistan sometimes put themselves under the protection of the Russians, and sometimes acknowledge the Turks or Persians their sovereigns. The Kalmuck Tartars at present acknowledge themselves subjects of Russia. The Usbec Tartars were lately independent, but were subdued by Kouli Khan, the late sovereign of Persia, who took possession of their capital city Bochara. The Moguls seem to be still independent, as well as those of Tibet, which occasions this country to be called Independent Tartary sometimes, and the Tartars of Tibet are so powerful that they are frequently at war with the Chinese.

The Northern Tartary is a cold barren country, almost always covered with snow, wherein are very few houses or inhabitants. The southern Tartars, for the most part, enjoy a temperate climate and a fruitful soil; but as few of them have fixed habitations, or apply themselves to cultivate the soil, but are continually moving from place to place, to find pasture for their numerous flocks and herds, that fine country produces little.

TAURIS, or TABRIS, E. lon. 46. 30. lat. 38. 20. a city of Persia, in Asia, in the pr. of Adirbeitzan, the ancient Ecbatana, cap. of Media. It is sit. in a fine plain, surrounded with mountains, from whence there falls a rivulet, which runs thro' the city; lying 300 m. S. E. of Erzerum, and 400 m. N. of Isfahan. The old city was 15 m. in circumference, and had walls 70 cubits high. The present town is about 5 m. in circuit, very populous, and a place of great trade: It standing near the frontiers of Turkey, has been often taken and retaken; the Turks surprized it during the late civil wars in Persia, and exercised their usual barbarities on the inhabitants, killing an incredible number of them; but Kouli Khan reduced it under the obedience of the Persians again, and pursued the Turks into their own territories.

TAURUS and ANTITAURUS, are mountains which run through the Lesser Asia from W. to E. into Persia.

TENEDOS, E. lon. 27. lat. 39. 30. one of the smallest islands of the Archipelago, sit. near the coast of the Lesser Asia, a little W. of the ruins of Troy. This is conjectured to be the island behind which the Grecian fleet retired, when they pretended to raise the siege of Troy and afterwards surprized that city.

TENERIF, W. lon. 17. lat. 28. one of the largest of the Canary islands, sit. in the Atlantic ocean, 350 m. W. of Morocco, in Africa, about 120 m. in circumference. It is a fruitful island, abounding in corn, wine, and oil, tho' pretty much encumbered with mountains, of which the most remarkable is that called the Pico of Tenerif, being one of the highest mountains in the world, of the form of a sugar loaf, the white top whereof may be seen at sea upwards of one hundred miles. This mountain is a vulcano, and occasions frequent earthquakes. In the year 1704, several vulcanos burst out in this island, and did not only produce an earthquake, but whole towns were swallowed up, or overturned, with many thousand people in them, by torrents of burning sulphur and metallic oar that issued from those vulcanos, and some of the richest land in the island was converted into a barren desert. Were it not for the dread of such calamities, these islands would well deserve the name of Fortunate, which was once given them; for they produce every thing that is desirable in life; but their principal exports consist of those rich wines, which, from the country they come from, are denominated Canary.

TERRA DEL FOGO, is an island of South America, bounded by the straits of Magellan on the N. by the Atlantic ocean on the E. and by the South sea on the S. and W. It is of a triangular figure, the base whereof is the strait of Magellan; the length of the island being 300 m. from E. to W. and about as much from N. to S. the point or summit of the pyramid lying in 80 degrees W. lon. and 57 degrees 30 min. S. lat. This is the most southern cape or promontory of South America, about which all ships sail at present into the Pacific ocean, instead of going thro' the straits of Magellan, as the first discoverer did, who gave his name to that strait. Terra del Fogo is a mountainous, woody country, the tops of the mountains almost always covered with snow. There are some good harbours on the coast, where ships may lie secure from storms, which these seas are very much subject to; but I perceive our mariners chuse to keep at a distance from the land, in their passage round Cape Horn, that they may have sea-room, rather than come near it. There are some few inhabitants on the island, as there are upon the continent on the North-side of the straits: They are represented as a brave hardy race, naturally of dark olive complexions, but paint both their faces and bodies, and have no other cloathing but a mantle they make of the skins of animals, and a cap of feathers, and live in little huts they make with the boughs of trees, eating what they take in hunting or fishing. Their arms are bows and arrows, pointed with sharp flints or bones, and their nets made of the sinews of animals, or the fibres of the bark of some trees. Their country seems to have little in it to invite foreigners to settle amongst them; at least the Europeans have thought fit, hitherto, to leave them to their natural natural liberty, as well as the natives of the opposite continent of Patagonia.

TERRA-FIRMA, in South America, taken in its largest extent, comprehends, 1. Terra-firma Proper. 2. Carthagera. 3. St. Martha. 4. Rio de la Hacha. 5. Venezuela. 6. Comana. 7. New Andalusia. 8. New Granada; and 9. Popayan. All which are subject to Spain, and were at first called by the name of Castilla del Oro, or Golden Castile, on account of some gold mines they expected to find in this country, which is bounded by the North sea, and part of the Atlantic ocean, on the North, by the river Oronoko on the E. by Peru and the country of the Amazons on the S. and by the Pacific ocean and the province of Veragua in North America, on the West. Some include Guiana, or Caribiana, in Terra-firma, but I chuse to omit these, because they are possessed by the French and Dutch, and the native Indians, and the Spaniards have now scarce any settlements E. of the river Oronoko.

These countries which I have included in Terra-firma, lie between 62 and 83 deg. of western longitude, and between the equator and 12 deg. of N. lat. being upwards of twelve hundred miles in length from E. to W. and 800 miles in breadth from N. to S.

TERRA FIRMA PROPER, which is more known by the name of Darien, is bounded by the North sea on the N. by the gulph or river of Darien, which separates it from Carthagera on the E. by Popayan and the Pacific ocean on the S. and by the same ocean and the province of Veragua in North America, on the W. lying between 8 and 10 deg. of N. lat. and between 78 and 83 deg. of W. lon. in the form of a crescent about that spacious bay of Panama, and is 300 m. in length, and 60 in breadth, from the North to the South sea; this being the isthmus which joins North and South America; the chief towns whereof are Panama on the South sea, and Porto-Bello on the North sea.

This country consists of exceeding high hills, and long deep valleys, and is so difficult to pass, that travellers are usually six or seven days in going cross it from one sea, to the other, though the isthmus be but 60 miles over; and the torrents which fall from the mountains, are a great obstruction to the passage in the rainy season, which continues every year from April to November, and sometimes to December; so that they have scarce three months fair weather in the whole year.

TERRING, W. lon. 25 min. lat. 50. 50. a market town of Suffex, sit. on the English channel, 20 m. E. of Chichester.

oo, in Africa, sit. about 60 m. S. E. of Tangier, 8 m. from the bay of Tetuan, just within the straits of Gibraltar. It contains about 30,000 inhabitants, of which 5000 are Jews, who have all the trade of the place in their hands, being brokers between the Christians and Moors. The town is surrounded by a wall, and has a great castle for its defence, of no great strength. The palaces of the Moorish governor, who is subject to the Emperor of Morocco, are much admired for their beauty and magnificence.

TEWKSBURY, W. lon. 2. 15. lat. 52. a borough town of Gloucestershire, sit. on the river Severn, 10 m. N. of Gloucester; sends 2 memb. to parl.

THAMES, a great navigable river of England, composed chiefly of the rivers Isis and Thame, of which the Isis is much the largest, and runs the longest course, rising on the confines of Gloucestershire, a little S. W. of Cirencester, and at Lechlade becomes navigable, from whence it continues its course N. E. to Oxford, where it receives the Charwell: from Oxford it runs S. E. to Abington, and so to Dorchester, where it receives the Thame, and continues its course S. E. by Wallingford to Reading; after which it visits Marlow and Windsor, and from thence runs E. by Brentford and Richmond to London, and continues the same course to the sea, receiving the river Medway near the mouth of it. The Thame is but a small river, which rising near Tring in Hertfordshire, crosses the county of Bucks, and falls into the Isis at Dorchester, before which it is a small unnavigable stream.

THOULON, or TOULON, E. lon. 6. lat. 43. 5. a port town of Provence, in France, sit. on a bay of the Mediterranean sea, 400 m. S. E. of Paris, 25 m. S. E. of Marseilles, and 80 m. S. W. of Nice. It has the most secure and capacious harbour of any port in France; here the largest ships of the royal navy are built and stationed, and here vast magazines of all manner of naval stores and timber for shipping are deposited. Here also are the finest docks and yards for the fitting out and furnishing ships of war in the world, in the opinion of the French.

In Thoulon, also, are schools for the marine guards, where they are taught navigation, and a foundery for cannon and mortars, with all manner of utensils for cannoneers and bombardiers. They had in the harbour of Thoulon, at one time, sixteen first rates, eight second-rates, twenty-four third-rates, and six fourth-rates, viz. when the Confederates laid siege to Thoulon in 1707; all which the English had very probably taken, if the Germans had not detached 15,000 men to Naples, which were intended to constitute part of the army to form that siege.

THOULOSE, or TOULOSE, E. lon. 1. 5. lat. 43. 40. a city of France, cap. of the pr. of Languedoc, sit. on the river Garonne, 90 m. W. of the Mediterranean, 60 N. of the Pyrenees, and 300 S. of Paris. It is one of the largest cities in the kingdom, but neither rich nor populous, there not being more than 19,000 families in it. It is the see of an archb. and an univ. a city of great antiquity, the Romans mentioning it as one of the most flourishing cities of the Gauls. It was afterwards capital of a Roman province; then of the kingdom of the Visigoths; and afterwards of the kingdom of Aquitaine; and here are still the ruins of a Roman amphitheatre.

TIVOT, or CHIVOT MOUNTAINS, are high hills which lie on the borders of England and Scotland; on which there have been many sharp encounters between the two nations. The valley called Tiviotdale, gives name to one of the counties of Scotland on the borders.

TIVOLI, or TIBUR, E. lon. 13. 35. lat. 42. a town of Italy, in the Pope's ter. and Campania of Rome, sit. on the river Teverone, 20 m. E. of Rome, on the side of a hill covered with olive-trees, for five or six miles, and adorned with beautiful villa's or palaces of the nobility, from whence there is a delightful prospect of the Campania as far as Rome. This was the retreat of many of the most eminent of the ancient Romans, in the hot season. The river Tiverone here forms a cascade, falling from a high rock, in a cave whereof is said to be the grotto of Leucothea, the Tiburtine Sybil, from whence she delivered her oracles. The palace of the family of Este, Dukes of Modena, which stands here, is much admired for its architecture, sculpture, paintings, gardens, and water-works. Tivoli is now a little town, but the see of a bish. and sub. to the D. of Modena, proprietor of the beautiful palace above mentioned.

TOBOLSKI, E. lon. 63. lat. 57. 30. the capital of Siberia, or Asiatic Russia, sit. at the confluence of the rivers Tobol and Irtis, whose united stream divides Europe from Asia, 800 m. E. of Moscow, and 1000 m. E. of Petersburg. The city stands upon a hill, and is surrounded by a wall and other modern works. To this place, or near it, the Russians usually banish their state prisoners. Hither the Princes Menzikoff, Dolgorucki, and the Duke of Courland, were sent, as well as the Swedish prisoners taken at the battle of Pultoway.

TOCAT, E. lon. 37. lat. 41. 30. a city of Asiatic Turkey, cap. of the pr. of Amasia, anciently part of the kingdom of Pontus, sit. at the foot of a very very high mountain, 100 m. S. of Sinope and the black sea, and 250 m. S. W. of Trepisond. It is a populous place, inhabited by Turks, Armenians, Greeks and Jews, the country forty miles round it, inhabited chiefly by Armenian Christians, most of them handy-crafts, working in copper and other hard-ware, which they send as far as Constantinople and Egypt. Turkey-leather is another of their manufactures. This is one of the greatest thorough-fares of the caravans from Turkey to Persia and Arabia.

TOLEDO, W. lon. 4. 12. lat. 39. 45. the cap. city of New Castile, and of all Spain, the seat of the ancient Gothic and Moorish Kings, sit. on a steep rock, at the foot whereof runs the river Tagus, encompassing it on three sides, and the rest is defended by an old wall and towers, formerly reckoned a place of strength, but not at present, being commanded by several hills, and in the late wars was obliged to submit to that side which was master of the field. The cathedral is the richest and most magnificent in Spain, and the archbishop's revenue computed at three hundred and fifty thousand crowns per annum, which the present King obliged the Pope to confer on one of the infants, his son, when he was an infant in a literal sense. The archbishop is Primate of Spain, and Great Chancellor of Castile, and is proprietor of seventeen towns, besides a great number of villages. The lands settled for the repair of this cathedral, are of the value of one hundred thousand crowns per annum.

TONNERRE, E. lon. 4. lat. 47. 45. a town of France, in the pr. of Champagne, sit. on the confines of Burgundy, 30 m. S. of Troyes.

TONQUIN, a kingdom of the further India, in Asia, bounded by the pr. of Yunam, in China, on the N. by the pr. of Canton, and the bay of Tonquin on the E. by Cochin China on the S. and by the kingdom of Laos on the W. lying between 101 and 108 deg. of E. lon. and between 17 and 26 deg. of N. lat. being about 500 m. long, and 400 broad, in the broadest part, but not half so much in some places; the capital city Keccio, or Cachao. It is a pleasant healthful country, in the dry season, but their rains begin in May, and continue till November, when the flat country is overflowed; and there are terrible storms, called Tuffoons, about the autumnal Equinox, when no ships can live in their seas near the coast. Tonquin produces a great deal of silk, and their chief manufactures are those of silk, gawse, and japan'd or lacker'd wares, which are equal almost to those made in Japan. They have very little shipping; all their imports and exports, almost, are made in foreign bottoms. They are esteemed much fairer dealers than their neighbours of China. There is a very good fishery on the coast, which employs a great many hands; many of them live with their families on the water. The soil produces scarce any other grain than rice, but they have plenty of oranges, limes, cocoa-nuts, pine-apples, plantains, mangoes, and other tropical fruits, with a variety of melons, pulse, and garden-stuff; they have not many horses, oxen, or sheep, but no country has more elephants, which are the strength of their armies; and their great men ride out upon them, having galleries or rooms built on their backs, which will hold a family with all their equipage.

Tonquin is an absolute monarchy; but the person who has the title of K. has no share in the government. The prime minister is master of all the treasure and forces of the kingdom, and to him all men make their court. The King has been succeeded in title by one of his sons, and the prime minister has been succeeded in his office by one of his sons, for upwards of 100 years. The King is a kind of prisoner of state in his own palace, tho' at certain seasons the prime minister suffers him to receive the mock homage of his subjects, and he himself seems to pay him the profoundest reverence before the people, and declares he takes upon him the administration of the government only to ease his prince of the trouble of it; and that he may enjoy his pleasures undisturbed; but at the same time the King has not one servant or officer of his own chusing; these are all put in by the minister, and suffer none to approach him but the minister's creatures. The usurper also has usually an army of 60 or 70,000 men on foot to support his usurpation; so that it is in vain for the subjects to attempt to rescue their sovereign out of his hands.

Their religion is paganism, and resembles that of the Chinese, in their devotion for Confucius and their ancestors. They have a great variety of images, of which the chief are the horse and the elephant, and as often perform their devotions in the courts before their own houses, as in their temples. They have abundance of superstition, consulting their pretended conjurers and fortune-tellers on every occasion, and laying a great stress upon lucky and unlucky days and omens.

TORNE LAPMARK, or LAPLAND, a province of Sweden, is bounded by Norwegian Lapland on the N. and W. by Kimi-Lapmark, on the E. and by the Bothnic gulph and Lula-Lapmark on the S.

TORNE CITY, E. lon. 22. 45. lat. 65. 45. capital of the pr. of Torne-Lapmark, is sit. at the mouth of the river Torne, at the bottom of the Bothnic gulph, upon a little island made by the river, 400 m. N. of Stockholm.

TORNE RIVER rises on the confines of Norwegian Lapland, and runs from the N. W. to the S. E. thro' the pr. of Torne, falling into the bottom of the Bothnic gulph at the town of Torne. It is a very large rapid river, and there are a great many cataracts in it. There are several copper and iron mines in the province, with mills and forges on the river, but the banks of the river are chiefly inhabited by fishermen for a hundred miles to the northward of the town, who traffic with their southern neighbours, exchanging salted and dried fish, furs and skins, for cloathing and provisions; for the soil of Lapland produces scarce any corn or vegetables; the people, instead of bread, grinding the white inward bark of the fir-tree, which they mix into a paste, bake and eat with the flesh of their rein deer, or fish dried upon the rocks: and even these miserable people were invaded by the Russians in the years 1719 and 1720, who destroyed most of their iron and copper works.

TORTUGA, W. lon. 73. lat. 20. an island of the American ocean, sit. near the North coast of the island of Hispaniola, 80 m. N. of Petitguaves. Here it was the French buccaneers and banditti first fortified themselves, and infested the neighbouring seas, making prizes of all they met with, and being countenanced and supported by the government of France, at length took possession of the N. W. part of the island of Hispaniola, where the French have now several considerable settlements, and look upon themselves as sovereigns of the best part of that large island. Tortuga is about 80 m. in circumference, and has in it a very secure harbour of difficult access. It obtained the name of Tortuga from the plenty of tortoises found here.

TORTUGA, W. lon. 64. lat. 11. 30. an island in the American ocean near the coast of Terra-Firma, sit. 40 m. W. of the island of Margareta, about 30 m. in circumference, a barren island, and only valuable for the great quantities of salt made here, from whence it has obtained the name of Salt-Tortuga: it abounds in tortoises as the other island of Tortuga does.

W. of Mons; a large elegant town, consisting of 17 parishes, and has in it a good linen manufacture. It was taken from the French by Henry VIII. K. of England, anno 1513, who built the old citadel, but restored it to the French for a valuable consideration, anno 1518. It was taken from them by the Spaniards anno 1521, who possessed it until the year 1667, when it was surprized by the French: The confederates, commanded by the Duke of Marlborough, invested Tournay, June 27, 1709. On the 7th of July, the trenches were opened, and on the 31st the garrison retired into the citadel, which capitulated the last of August. The town and citadel being strongly fortified, and the ground undermined almost all round, the allies were obliged to proceed with great caution; and lost, however, a great many thousand men before it, as well by blowing up the mines, as by the defence the garrison made. It is the see of a bishop, suffragan to the archbishop of Cambray, and one of the towns of the Dutch barrier, taken by the French after the battle of Fontenoy, May 1745, but restor'd to the Austrians by the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle 1748.

TRENT CITY, E. lon. 11. lat. 46.

5. capital of the bishopric of Trent sit. 70 m. S. of Inspruck, in a pleasant valley, on the banks of the river Adige, but encompassed with high mountains, which make it excessive hot in summer, and cold in the winter. It is a small city, built of a kind of red and white marble, dug out of the rock on which it stands, and surrounded by a single wall. The bishop is suffragan to the Venetian patriarch of Aquileia, but a prince of the empire.

Here the council of Trent was held, which continued with some intermissions, from the year 1545 to the year 1563, where the doctrines of the Pope's infallibility, transubstantiation, &c. were confirmed.

TRENT, one of the largest rivers of England, rises in the moorlands of Staffordshire, and runs S. E. by Newcastle under Line, dividing that county into two equal parts almost, and entering Derbyshire, turns about to the N. E. passing by Burton, and afterwards Nottingham and Newark, and having run the whole length of Nottinghamshire, continues its course almost due N. by Gainsborough, on the confines of Lincolnshire, and having joined the river Ouse, and several other rivers, changes its name for that of Humber, falling into the German sea below Hull.

TRIERS, or TREVES, E. lon. 6. 10. lat. 49. 55. a city of Germany, in the cir. of the Lower Rhine, cap. of the Electorate of Triers, sit. on the river Moselle, 60 m. S. of Cologne, and as many W. of Mentz. The city is neither large nor populous, and having been the seat of war of late years, the trade of the place is not in a flourishing condition. It is one of the most ancient cities in Germany, several of the Roman Emperors having resided here. It is not of any great strength, as appears by their submitting to any power that is master of the field, without waiting to be besieged.

TRIERS, Electorate, is a province of Germany, in the cir. of the Lower Rhine, bounded by the Electorate of Cologne and the D. of Juliers on the N. by Mentz and Weteravia on the E. by Lorrain and the Palatinate on the S. and by the Netherlands on the W. being 80 m. long, and from 20 to 50 broad. Great part of the country is mountainous and barren, but near the rivers Rhine and Moselle the country is very pleasant and fruitful, abounding in corn and wine, and crowded with people. The archbishop, their sovereign, has no other suffragans than the bishops of Metz, Toul, and Verdun, which are under the dominion of the French. He is, however, the second Elector of the empire.

TRIESTE, E. lon. 14. lat. 46. 5. a port town of Istria, sit. on the gulph of Venice, 60 m. N. E. of the city of Venice, subject to the house of Austria. The late Emperor Charles VI. was at a great expence to enlarge the port, and make it a station for his men of war; proposing also to carry on a trade from hence with the countries lying on the Mediterranean; which the Venetians were greatly alarmed at; but on his losing Naples and Sicily, this project was dropt. Trieste is sometimes reckoned to belong to Germany, lying on the confines of Carniola, in the circle of Austria.

* TRIM, the shire town of the co. of E. Meath, and pr. of Leinster, in Ireland, noted for several parliaments having been formerly held therein; and for a large antient castle now in ruins. It hath a barrack for one troop of horse, also a charter working school for 40 children. It is governed by a Sovereign, Recorder and town clerk, who return 2 members to parliament; sit. 20 m. N. TRING, W. lon. 40 min. lat. 51. 45. a market town of Hertfordshire, sit. 24 m. W. of Hertford.

TRINIDAD, or TRINITY ISLAND, is sit. in the Atlantic or American ocean, between 60 and 62 deg. of W. lon. and between 9 and 11 of N. lat. separated from the pr. of New Andalusia in Terra Firma, by a narrow strait, called Boca de Drago, about three miles over, lying 80 m. N. W. of the river Oronoko, and is about 90 miles long and 60 broad; an unhealthful air, but fruitful soil, producing sugar, cotton, Indian corn, and fruits, and the best tobacco. It was taken by Sir Walter Raleigh, anno 1595, but quitted again, and the French took it in the year 1676; and, besides their plunder, extorted 80,000 pieces of eight from the Spaniards, to save their houses; but the French also quitted the island, and the Spaniards remain sovereigns of it at this time.

TRIPOLI Kingdom, including Barca, is bounded by the Mediterranean sea on the N. by Egypt on the E. by Nubia and Biledulgerid on the S. and by the K. of Tunis on the W. extending along the shore of the Mediterranean from the N. W. to the S. E. in length about 1000 m. but is scarce 200 m. broad in any place. The country near the city of Tripoli being tolerably fruitful; but all the rest to the eastward, as far as Egypt, is a sandy desert, and usually called the desert of Barca.

TRIPOLI CITY, E. lon. 14. 30. lat. 33. 30. cap. of the kingdom of Tripoli, sit. on the Mediterranean sea, 300 miles S. E. of Tunis, surrounded by a wall and fortifications; but its greatest strength is in its inhabitants, who are a parcel of desperate fellows, banditti that have fled from Turkey, pirates and renegadoes, who live chiefly by the plunder of honest merchantmen that navigate the neighbouring seas; though the produce of their country would furnish them abundantly with materials to traffic with, if they applied themselves to husbandry and manufactures; for it produces corn, wine, silk and wool, where it is cultivated; and they breed a great many camels and fine horses; and the Europeans do trade with them for corn, oil, wool, soap, dates, ostrich feathers and skins; but they make more by the slaves they take at sea than by any of the other articles, setting high ransoms upon them, or forcing them to serve at sea or land, in all manner of drudgeries.

T R

The Dey or sovereign of Tripoli, is not so absolute as the Deys of Algiers and Tunis are; for a Turkist Bassa resides here, who receives his authority from the Grand Signior, and has a power of controuling the Dey, and levying a tribute on his subjects. The Dey is elected, however, by the soldiery of the place, and not appointed or deposed by the Grand Signior, and the soldiers take the liberty of removing their sovereign, and electing another, when they see fit.

TRIPOLI, E. lon. 36. 15. lat. 34. 30. a port town of Syria, sit. on the Levant sea, 100 m. S. of Scanderoon; the chief town of that part of Syria, anciently called Phœnicia, the people whereof excelled so much in navigation and other arts in the earliest ages, and settled colonies in the remotest parts of Europe and Africa. It is now the chief town of this division of Syria, and the seat of the Turkish Beglerbeg or Viceroy, and stands near the foot of mount Libanus, from whence there falls a rivulet, which waters their fields and gardens, that are well replenished with mulberry trees, as well as other fruits, and they have a considerable silk manufacture in the town.

TUNIS, E. lon. 10. lat. 36. 20. cap. of the K. of Tunis, on the Barbary coast, in Africa, is situate in a fine plain, near a spacious lake, 30 m. S. of Carthage ruins, 300 m. E. of Algiers, and 120 m. S. W. of Trapano in Sicily; a populous city, about three miles in circumference.

TUNIS, Kingdom, is situate on the coast of Barbary, in Africa, being bounded by the Mediterranean sea on the N. by the same sea and Tripoli on the E. by Mount Atlas on the S. and by the river Guadalbarbar, which separates it from the K. of Algiers, on the W. extending 200 m. in length from E. to W. along the shore of the Mediterranean: the breadth very unequal.

The Dey of Tunis is an absolute Prince, elected by the Turkish soldiers, and as liable to be deposed and murdered by them as the Dey of Algiers: they seldom reign long; want of success, or a supposed mismanagement in the administration, is looked upon as a sufficient reason to remove them, and there can never want traitors among that abandoned race of men, composed of robbers and the refuse of Turkey, to conspire the destruction of the reigning Prince, and usurp his throne; for the soldiers who are vested with this power of election, are either criminals who have been obliged to fly from Turkey, renegadoes or pirates, who resort hither in hopes of spoil; and who, notwithstanding their base original, look upon themselves as noblemen, using the Moors and other inhabitants of Africa little better than slaves: they seldom apply themselves either to husbandry or traffic, looking on piracy and robbery as noble employments, or at least an easier way of making their fortunes; however, the Europeans have some trade with Tunis, importing from thence corn, oil, wool, fruit, soap, dates, skins, and ostrich feathers. The Jews are generally the brokers, who are very numerous here, as they are in most towns on the coast of Barbary.

TURCOMANIA, the ancient Armenia, is now a province of Asiatic Turkey, bounded by Persia on the E. by Diarbeck and Curdestan (that is, the ancient Mesopotamia and Assyria) on the S. and by Natolia on the W. and N. The capital city Erzerum.

TURENNE, E. lon. 1. 20. lat. 45. 7. a town of France, in the pr. of Guienne and ter. of Limosin, sit. 40 m. S. of Limoges.

TURIN, E. lon. 7. 16. lat. 44. 50. a city of Italy, capital of Piedmont, and of the King of Sardinia's dominions, sit. at the confluence of the rivers Po and Doria, 100 m. S. W. of Milan, 150 S. E. of Lyons, and 100 m. N. W. of Genoa. The town is of a square figure, three miles in circumference, and much admired for its spacious squares and streets, lofty and magnificent buildings, and a beautiful royal palace; and the fortifications about it are as fine as the nature of the ground will admit. This city endured a most furious siege of ten weeks, in the year 1706, when it was very seasonably relieved by the army of the allies, commanded by the late Duke of Savoy and Prince Eugene, who attacked the enemy before Turin, and gained a complete victory. The Duke of Orleans, and Marshal Marfin, who commanded the French, were both wounded, the Marshal mortally, and the allies took 150 pieces of cannon, 50 mortars, and 7000 prisoners, with all the enemy's ammunition and baggage, and the Duke of Savoy entered his capital the same evening (3 June) which he found almost in ruins.

TURKEY is a very extensive empire, comprehending some of the richest countries in Europe, Asia and Africa. In Europe they are possessed of Romania, Bulgaria, Servia, Bosnia, Ragusa, Ragusa, Wallachia, Moldavia, Bessarabia, Budziac and Oczakow Tartary, Crim and Little Tartary, with Albania, Epirus, Macedonia, Thessaly, and all the ancient Greece, with its numerous islands in the archipelago.

In Asia they possess Chaldea, now Eyraca Arabic; Mesopotamia, now Diarbeck; part of Assyria, now Curdestan; Armenia, now Turcomania; part of Georgia, Mingrelia and Circassia; part of Arabia, Syria, Palestine, Natolia, or Asia Minor.

In Africa they possess Egypt.

Thus happily situated in the center of our continent, and the most fruitful countries, they could not fail of acquiring the trade as well as the empire of the whole world, if these glorious advantages were not lost by the indolence and inactivity of the Turks, and the destructive maxims they are governed by. They seldom fail to distant countries, or visit nations of a different faith, but the merchandize of the rest of the world is carried to them in foreign bottoms, and in the same manner the produce and manufactures of Turkey are exported. They reap little advantage by their commerce with Christendom, but what they get by the duties of import and export; and their home-trade is carried on chiefly by their Christian or Jewish subjects. The Turks are above applying themselves to any thing of this kind; traffic and mechanical employments are left to be managed by the despised Christians, who contribute much more, by their labour and industry, to the support of that empire, than the Turks themselves, which may be one reason that their government indulges them in the free exercise of their religion. And indeed there seems to be more Christians in the Turkish empire than Mahometans, especially in their European territories, who have this happiness also, that they are never pressed or forced into their armies, but left to follow their several occupations, while the Turkish gentlemen take the honour of defending their country, and making foreign conquests, entirely on themselves.

The goods imported from Turkey, are raw silks, carpets, goats hair, mohair-yarn, goats-wool, cotton-wool, and yarn, dimities, burdetts, chagrin skins, cordovants, blue, red and yellow; coffee, rhubarb, turpentine, opium, gum-senega, terra-lemnia, china-root, and abundance of other drugs, wine, oil, figs, raisins, dates, almonds, pistachio nuts, allum, vitriol, box-wood, bees-wax, saffron, &c.

The Grand Signior, or Emperor of the Turks, is absolute, and his throne hereditary, at least it is confined to one family; for tho' the Janizaries, who are his guards, frequently depose their sovereign when he happens to be unsuccessful, or his administration does not please them, they usually advance his nearest relation to the throne. And though the Grand Signior exercises an unlimited authority over the inhabitants of the seraglio, and his bassa's and officers, as well as over his Christian subjects, yet the Turkish gentlemen who have no places or dependance on the court, enjoy their liberties and properties as much as if they lived under a limited monarchy, if not more; for they pay no taxes to the government; and should the Grand Signior attempt to tax them, or change their customs, he would run the hazard of being deposed.

His bassa's, governors, and officers of state, and even the Janizaries and other inhabitants of the seraglio, are all the children of Christian parents, taken in war, or purchased, and who have probably been baptized, tho' educated by the Turks in the Mahometan religion; so that in reality, the Turkish empire is governed (under the Grand Signior) by the children of Christians.

The Turks have always very numerous armies on foot; but their chief dependance is on their Janizaries, who have been bred in the seraglio, and exercised in military discipline from their infancy, of whom there are 25,000 in actual pay. There may be in the empire 100,000 that bear the name of Janizaries, but these are not enrolled with the others; the Serdar in every province, who has the command of the Janizaries in it, frequently abuses his office, and will take any man into that body, who desires to purchase the privilege of committing outrages with impunity, and screen himself from justice; for a Janizary is accountable to none but his own officers, whatever violence he commits.

The Spahi's, or best Turkish horsemen, are bred up in martial exercises, as the Janizaries are, and are a very formidable body; besides which there are great bodies of forces in every province, which constitute their numerous armies. But their multitudes are frequently the occasion of their defeat, charging in too much confusion; tho' the Bassa Bonneval, 'tis said, has prevailed on some of their troops to submit to French discipline, of which they made great advantage in their last German war, recovering a great extent of country which they had lost South of the Danube.

Their naval forces are not so considerable as might be expected in such extensive dominions, situate on several seas, and abounding in commodious harbours; but their neglecting navigation and foreign commerce, is the true reason they can never find sailors to man a great fleet, if they should build one.

The Grand Signior's revenues arise by customs and other duties on merchandize; by a capitation tax on the Christians in his dominions; by the sums paid by the tributary Princes, and the presents made by all his officers and ministers on their advancement, and in their administration. But nothing brings in more than the confiscation of the estates of all his bassa's, governors, officers, and great men, when they die or displease him; when they have plundered provinces, and amassed vast heaps of treasure, the Grand Signior is heir to it all, and only allows the family a moderate maintenance out of it, if their ancestor has deserved never so well; the sons or relations are very seldom advanced, or continued in any post under the government.

TUSCANY, Duchy, is situate in Italy, encompassed by the Pope's ter. on the N. E. and S. and bounded by the Tuscan sea on the S. W. and by the ter. of Lucca and Modena on the N. W. being 100 m. long, and almost as many broad. The most barren parts of the Appenines almost surround this country, or rather are a part of it, where the air is exceeding cold, and there are very few towns or inhabitants; but then they have several very rich extensive valleys, where the air is more agreeable, and the fruits of the earth ripen sooner, and come to a greater perfection than they do on the North side of the Appenines. There is a valley particularly that runs quite cross the country, viz. from Arezzo to the Tuscan sea, which abounds in corn, wine, oil, oranges, citrons, figs, and other excellent fruits; and no country is better planted with mulberry-trees, that yield food for their silk worms, and enable the natives to make the richest silks.

The Great Duke of Tuscany is an absolute Prince, and his revenues computed to amount to 500,000 l. per annum, arising by the tenths of the yearly value of every house; the tenth of all estates that are sold; the ground rents of the houses in Leghorn, and other cities; 8 per cent. out of the portions of all women when they marry; five shillings a-head on cattle when they are sold; and almost a general excise on all provisions.

As to his forces, he has only his guards and some armed galleys at sea, besides besides the ordinary militia; and in case of a war, he usually hires mercenaries, and chiefly Swiss.

There are some places in Tuscany under the dominion of other sovereigns, as the city of Lucca and the territories about it, the State del Presidii, or the Garrisons, on the sea coast, which is possessed by the Spaniards; the principality of Piombino, the domain of the house of Cibo, and the Mar. de Fos de Nuovo. Tuscany was allotted to the D. of Lorrain, the present Emperor, when he was obliged to resign Lorrain to France.

N. of Carthagena, in a fine plain on the river Guadalaviar, and contains about 12,000 houses, elegantly built, in a most agreeable situation, watered with numerous fountains, besides the river, and encompassed with fruitful fields, vineyards and gardens; the inhabitants easy and agreeable in their conversation, and seem to have banished that stiffness and gravity which the rest of Spain is so remarkable for. Trade and manufactures also flourish here, and there are a great many rich merchants in the city; their principal manufacture is that of silk, and they export a great deal of wine, oil, and fruit. The whole country for twenty miles round looks like a garden, and they are scarce sensible of winter. The towns and villages stand thick, and we see crowds of women and children spinning silk before their houses, which is the more remarkable, as most of the natives of Spain have abandoned themselves to a lazy unactive life.

The city of Valencia surrendered

VENEZUELA, a pr. of Terra Firma, in S. America, including the ter. of Caracos, is bounded by the N. sea, or American ocean, on the N. by New Andalusia on the E. by Granada on the S. and by Rio de la Hacha on the W. being 400 m. long, and 300 broad. In this pr. (along the sea coast especially) are very high mountains and deep valleys, pointing on the shore from S. to N. The tops of these mountains are barren, but the lower part of them, and the valleys, are a very rich soil, producing plenty of corn, rich pasture, and fruit, sugar, and tobacco, and their plantations of cacao or chocolate-nuts are esteemed the best in America; there are also gold sands in this pr. which has induced great numbers of Spaniards and Indians to settle here. There are as many rich populous towns in this pr. as in any part of Spanish America.

VENEZUELA BAY, is a spacious gulph on the coast of Terra Firma, in S. America, which has a communication with the lake of Marecaibo by a narrow strait.

VENICE, a republic of Italy, is, bounded by the Grisons, Trent, and Tyrol, on the N. by Carniola and the gulph of Venice on the E. by Romanina and the D. of Mantua on the S. and and by the D. of Milan on the W. being 180 m. long, and 100 broad.

It is a level country, and fruitful soil, producing corn, wine, rich pasture, and abundance of silk, and plenty of cattle of all kinds; the flesh of their hogs is in most esteem; the Paduan sheep afford very fine wool.

VENICE CITY, E. lon. 13, lat. 45. 40. cap. of the Dogado or Duchy of Venice, and of all the Venetian dominions, is sit. 220 m. N. of Rome, 150 E. of Milan, and 250 E. of Turin, standing in the Lagunes, 5 miles from the continent: these Lagunes are supposed to have been marshy grounds which the sea has encroached upon, leaving a great number of little islands or spots of earth above the water, on which the fishermen of Padua built their huts; but when the Goths invaded Italy in the fifth century, several considerable families of Padua and Aquileia retired hither, to secure themselves from an enemy they could not resist, and laid the foundation of this great city upon 72 of these little islands, 'tis said, at first; but Venice stands upon a much greater number at this day, and is so happily situated that no army can approach it by land; nor no hostile fleet by sea; the avenues to these islands being so exceeding difficult, that they have not thought it necessary to enclose the city with a wall; nor has any power attempted to besiege it since it was founded, which is now 1200 years and upwards. Nothing can appear more beautiful than this town does, as we approach it either from the continent or the sea, we behold this fine city, with its numerous palaces and lofty towers rising out of the waters, as it were washed by the flood on every side, nothing intervening to obstruct the sight. The circumference of the city is about 6 miles, and the inhabitants computed to be near two hundred thousand; the canals so numerous, that you may go to any part of the town by water; and there are 450 bridges over them; the principal bridge called the Rialto, lying over the grand canal, composed of one arch (which makes one third of a circle) ninety foot wide. None of the bridges but this have any rails.

There are not kays on the sides of all the canals where people can walk; but sometimes the canal fills the whole street from one side to the other.

The piazza of St. Mark, 'tis said, is not to be parallel'd for the magnificence of its buildings, and the houses upon the grand canal are most of them elegant palaces, with marble fronts, adorned with pillars of the several orders of architecture. Their rooms are usually hung with gilt leather or tapestry, and their bedsteads of iron, which secures them against the vermin so troublesome in London. But these advantages are attended with some great inconveniencies: they have no good cellars for their wine; all their water is bad, but what is brought from the continent, and their canals, in the heat of summer, create very offensive smells.

The sovereign power is lodged in the nobility. There are about fifteen hundred noblemen at present, who constitute their grand council, or assembly of the states, and are stiled Noble Venetians, whose honours descend to their posterity.

The Doge or Duke of Venice is clothed in royal robes, and has the honours of a sovereign Prince paid him, but has very little share in the government: as the legislative power is lodged in the great council, there are several other councils to whom the administration of the government is committed; and there is one council or state-inquisition, which has a power of imprisoning and putting to death the greatest nobleman, even the Doge himself, if they apprehend him to be dangerous to the state, and that without bringing him to an open trial, or giving him an opportunity of making his defence. And tho' the noblemen of the city of Venice are vested with very great powers and privileges, the ancient nobility.

mobility on the continent have scarce any ; nor are they at all respected at Venice ; for the titles they bear of marquisses, counts, &c. these the Venetians endeavour to depress, and even to extirpate, as the Dutch do those of Holland.

The annual revenues of the republic are computed to be 1,200,000 l. sterling, and their forces may amount to 24,000 by land. They can equip a fleet of 30 men of war, 100 galleys, and 10 galleasses, 'tis said ; but they seldom engage the Turks at sea without foreign assistance. A noble Venetian is always generalissimo at sea, but they make choice of some foreign general for the land service, who is attended by several senators, without whose concurrence he can transact nothing ; and they chuse to employ Swiss, Germans, and other foreign troops in their wars, rather than their own subjects ; but they desire to be at peace with all their neighbours, if possible ; not only because they apprehend themselves weaker, but war hurts their traffic, which is their chief support, though it was much greater formerly, when they brought the merchandize of Asia from Alexandria, and distributed it to all the countries in Europe. Still the manufactures and produce of their country furnishes them with merchandize to traffic with. They make wrought silks of various kinds, brocades, gold and silver stuffs, and damasks, as well as velvets. They export wine, oil, fruit, Venetian steel, copper, glass, essences, turpentine, &c. and the goods they purchase in Turkey are taken off by the Germans.

As to their religion, it is that of the Roman Catholic, but it can scarce be called Popery, the Pope has so little authority at Venice : their church has two patriarchs, the one of Aquileia, and the other of Venice ; and these are subject entirely to the temporal power. The republic of Venice is as arbitrary in ecclesiastical causes as the states of Holland. The Pope is looked upon as a temporal

Prince at Venice, and their patriarchs little more than cyphers. And tho' they have a kind of inquisition, that court can put none of their decrees in execution, without the leave of the state. The Venetians are neither governed by priests nor monks ; men of such professions indeed may enjoy the diversion of masquerading, during the carnival ; they may keep concubines, sing upon the stage, and take what liberties they please, so as they do not meddle with the government : And the nuns of Venice have not a much better reputation than their clergy. Their patriarch was about to restrain the liberties taken in those houses, and began with the nuns of St. Lawrence ; but they told him they were noble Venetians, who had made choice of that way of life as most convenient, and would not be subject to his regulations ; and the senate interposed, and required the patriarch to desist.

VERA CRUZ, W. lon. 100. lat. 18. 30. a port town of Mexico in America, in the pr. of Tlascala, sit. on the gulf of Mexico, 200 m. S. E. of Mexico city, having a very secure and commodious harbour, well defended by forts at the entrance. Here the flotilla annually arrives from Spain, to receive the gold and silver the sands and mines of Mexico produce; and at the same time is held a fair here for all manner of rich merchandize brought hither from China and the East Indies, by the way of the Pacific ocean, and of the merchandize of Europe, by the way of the Atlantic ocean. This town is not two miles in circumference, about which there is a wall of no great strength on the land side. The air is as unwholesome here as at Porto-bello, and it is inhabited chiefly by Mulattoes and Blacks. Very few Spaniards reside here, unless when the flotilla arrives, and then it is crowded with people from all parts of Spanish America, who are content to live in little huts or tents, while the fair lasts; but on the departure of the fleet, all men of any substance retire. The ordinary garrison the Spaniards keep here consists only of a troop of sixty horse, and two companies of foot. It was near this place, viz. Ulva, that Cortez landed when he invaded Mexico.

VEUVIUS MOUNT, E. lon. 15. lat. 41. sit. 6. m. E. of the city of Naples, in Italy. Within a mile and a half of the top, it is covered so thick with the ashes of the burnt earth, and grows so steep that it is very difficult ascending it. From this mount there have been several terrible eruptions in the present age. In April 1694, the mountain was on fire great part of the month, and threw out burning matter with that force, that some of it fell at thirty miles distance, and a vast quantity of melted minerals, mixed with other matter, ran down like a river for three miles, carrying every thing before it which lay in its way. In the year 1707, when they were rejoicing for the success of the Imperialists, they were interrupted by a dreadful eruption from mount Vesuvius, such quantities of cinders and ashes being thrown out, that it was dark at Naples at noon-day; and they are frequently alarmed with earthquakes when the fire issues from this mount.

VIDIN, or WIDIN, E. lon. 24. lat. 43. 50. a town of European Turkey, in the pr. of Servia, sit. on the river Danube, 120 m. S. E. of Belgrade.

VIENNA, E. lon. 16. 20. lat. 48. 20. the cap. city of the Circle of Austria, and of the German empire, is sit. on the river Danube, 130 m. S. E. of Prague, 200 m. E. of Munich, 600 S. E. of London, 550 E. of Paris, 300 m. N. W. of Belgrade, and 700 m. N. W. of Constantinople. The city within the walls is not more than three miles in circumference, but the suburbs are much larger than the city. It is so well fortified, that it has sustained several sieges; the last by the Turks, in 1683, lasted two months, and was a very terrible one; but it was relieved in a critical hour by John Sobiesky king of Poland, and the duke of Lorraine.

Vienna is built of stone, the houses five or six stories high, with flat roofs. The Imperial family have two large palaces here, in which there are several grand apartments; but the buildings are neither uniform nor elegant, nor the furniture so rich as might be expected in the palaces of the first prince in Europe; but the houses of the nobility and great officers of state are magnificent structures; the palace of the late Prince Eugene particularly, is the admiration of all that view it, as well for the grandeur of the building, and convenience of the apartments, as for the richness of the furniture.

The Prat in Vienna is frequented by people of quality, as the Mall is in London. It is a wood in an island, formed by the branches of the Danube, which renders it exceeding pleasant.

Vienna is an archbishopric, and the cathedral of St. Stephen a magnificent old building, but dark: The university is equal to any in Europe, in point of antiquity, the number of students, or their accommodations and privileges. The Austrian library is in great esteem, containing four-score thousand volumes.

There is no place where people eat and drink more plentifully, and are better served with wine, as well as eatables, than they are at Vienna. People of distinction will have 18 or 20 different sorts of wine at their tables, and a note is laid on every plate, enumerating the several sorts of wine that may be called for; and it is a very difficult thing for a stranger to get off without being made sensible of the strength of them.

This city, tho' it be so far within land, has in some parts of it the air of a sea port; for here are magazines of naval stores, and ships of war built and fitted out, which serve upon the Danube against the Turks; and there have been many smart engagements between the fleets of the Turks and Germans upon that river, especially about Belgrade.

VIENNE, E. lon. 4. 44. lat. 45. 35. a town of France in the pr. of Dauphine, cap. of the ter. of Viennois, sit. on the Rhone, 18 m. S. of Lyons, and 40 m. N. W. of Grenoble; the see of an archbishop.

VIGO, W. lon. 9. 18. lat. 42. 15. a port town of Spain, in the pr. of Galicia, sit. on a fine bay of the Atlantic ocean, which forms a capacious harbour, 70 m. S. E. of Cape Finisterre, and 50 m. S. of Compostella. Here the confederate fleet, commanded by Sir George Rook, attacked tacked a squadron of French men of war, commanded by Monsieur Chatteau-Renard, with thirteen Spanish galleons under his convoy, whilst the Duke of Ormond, with a body of land-forces, drove the Spaniards from the castles which defended the harbour; and Admiral Hopson having broke thro' the boom laid cross the mouth of the harbour with infinite hazard, the English took four galleons and five large men of war, and the Dutch five galleons, and one large man of war; four other galleons, with fourteen men of war, were destroyed, with abundance of plate, and other rich effects; and a considerable quantity of plate was taken, but the greatest part of it had been carried on shore before the engagement, which happened on the 12th of Oct. 1702.

VIRGIN ISLANDS, very small islands of the Caribbees, sit. in the Atlantic or American ocean, a little to the eastward of Porto-Rico; sub. to Spain.]

VIRGINIA, one of the British American colonies, is sit. between 74 and 80 degrees of W. lon. and between 36 and 39 degrees of N. lat. being bounded by the river Patowmack, which separates it from Maryland, on the N. by the Atlantic ocean on the E. by Carolina on the S. and by the Apalachian mountains on the W. being about 240 m. long from N. to S. and not more than 120 m. broad from E. to W. if we comprehend only the lands which are planted, but may be extended as far westward as we think fit.

The country near the sea is flat low land, but begins to rise into hills within less than 100 miles, terminating at length in the Apalachian mountains, which are covered with snow great part of the year, and when the wind sits from the W. or N. W. it is excessive cold, though a little before, perhaps, when the wind sat from the opposite points, it was so warm that people could scarce bear their cloaths on. This sudden alteration of the weather occasions the air to be a little unhealthful, at least it is so to such as expose themselves too much to the weather, especially in the night-time.

The country is well replenished with timber, which grows to an unusual height and bulk, the trees standing at such a distance that a coach and six may drive thro' them; and among their fruits they have grapes which grow wild, and would make wine, if the planters were not altogether taken up with cultivating tobacco. Silk-grass also grows here spontaneously, and the soil is extremely proper for hemp and flax, and yet they have neither silk or linen manufactures, for the reason already assigned; for it is the excellence of the Virginian tobacco which distinguishes it from all other countries; and of this they have enough to supply great part of Europe, which they do at a very moderate price, the prime cost not being more than a penny a pound, tho' the duties imposed upon it make it dear enough before it arrives in England; and none of our colonies yield the crown of England so large a revenue as this. There are very few towns in Virginia: James-town and Williamsburg, which are the chief, have neither of them 100 houses. Every planter chuses to reside upon his estate or farm in the country, and most of them lie near some of their great rivers; so that ships can come almost up to their doors, and take in their tobacco.

The Virginians have a regular clergy of the church of England, and have provided houses, glebes, and tythes of tobacco in every parish, for the subsistence of their several ministers, which is a very plentiful maintenance: The society for the propagation of the gospel, therefore, don't send any missionaries to this colony; and besides a church in every parish, there is a chapel of ease built in those that are very extensive. As to the poor of this country, 'tis said they live in so happy a climate, and so fruitful a soil, that there is no body poor enough to beg for want of food; but as there are none reduced to beggary so there are few that are very rich, the merchants of England (as they complain) running away with the greatest part of their profits. When any one happens by age or sickness to be disabled from working, he is very well provided for; not as in England, just kept from starving, but he is placed in some planter's house that lives plentifully, and his board paid for at the public charge: And as to slaves and servants, of which there are many more than there are freemen, they are not worked so hard, nor so many hours in a day, as the husbandmen and day-labourers in England.

Such is the hospitality of the Virginians, that a traveller needs no recommendation to their houses; he will be entertained at any gentleman or planter's house where he calls, which makes inns upon the road altogether useless.

Fortifications they have none in Virginia, but depend altogether upon a well-regulated militia to defend them by land, and upon the cruizers sent from England for their defence at sea; neither do they at all apply themselves to building of ships, tho' they have plenty of good timber, as well as all manner of naval stores of their own growth, and a multitude of commodious harbours, or rather their whole country is but one grand harbour, after you have entered the bay of Chesapeake, between the two capes of Cape Charles and Cape Henry.

UNITED NETHERLANDS, consist of the provinces of Holland, Zeland, Friesland, Groningen, Overysfel, Gelderland, with Zutphen and Utrecht, and are bounded by the German sea on the N. and W. by the cir. of Westphalia, in Germany, on the E. and by Flanders, Brabant, and the D. of Cleves on the S. lying between 3 degrees 20 min. and 7 degrees 30 min. E. lon. and between 51, 35 min. and 52 degrees 40 min. N. lat. and are about 50 m. long, and as many broad, including the Zuyder sea, which takes up a considerable space within these limits.

This is a flat level country, lying on the mouths of several great rivers, and cut through with numerous canals, which form a multitude of little islands, liable to be overflowed by inundations of the sea, as well as by land floods, the seas and rivers appearing higher than the land in many places, and only kept out by dikes, prodigious banks of earth, which have been broken down in some parts, and towns laid under water, the tops of of steeples and towns where they stood being visible at low water. But as part of the country has been lost by inundations, a great deal more has been gained by draining and damming out the sea.

The air of this watry country is very bad, and the lives of the natives not so long as those who dwell in drier and more elevated situations.

As to the soil of the provinces which lie next the sea, particularly on the West coast of Holland, there lies a ridge of sand hills, of 80 m. extent, which break the fury of the ocean, but produce scarce any herbage; but beyond these sands are rich pastures and arable lands, or a spongy boggy soil, out of which they dig the turf, which is almost their only firing. Their meadow and pasture is most of it under water in winter, which, on the return of summer, is either dried up, or thrown out with wind-mills, and the water leaves a fat ouse or slime behind it, which makes the soil exceeding fruitful, on which they fat the lean cattle they purchase in the North, and make prodigious quantities of butter and cheese; but the country does not produce corn enough for their subsistence; notwithstanding which, they have as great plenty of it as any nation in Europe; as they have indeed of the produce of every country; for in these provinces are magazines of every thing the earth produces that is valuable, purchased when cheap, and often sold when they are dear, to the very countries from whence they fetched them: and great part of the merchandize they import, is manufactured in the country, and exported again to great advantage. They have very considerable manufactures of silk, velvet, linen, and woollen; and they build more ships than any nation of Europe, having always prodigious magazines of ship timber and naval stores, inasmuch that 'tis said they can build and fit out a man of war every day of the year.

One great source of their wealth is their fishery; that of whales they have almost monopolized, and that of herrings is more valuable to them than to all the world besides; and their cod-fishery is equal to that of any other nation.

The fine spices they have monopolized, having drove the Spaniards, Portuguese, English, and every other nation, from the islands where they grow, and setting what price they please upon them; with these they purchase the produce of every other country almost, and very seldom have occasion to send their specie away.

The United Provinces are a confederacy of several independent states; every province, and every city almost is a separate state, and not bound by the determination of the States General, till their consent is had. As the States General cannot make war, peace or alliances, or levy taxes, without the consent of every province; neither can the states of any province determine any thing of this kind, without the consent of every city and petty republic in it.

The States of Holland consist of the deputies or representatives of the nobility, and of 18 cities, making in all 19 voices, of which the nobility have only one.

In the city of Amsterdam, the sovereign power is lodged in 36 senators, who continue members of the senate for life; and when one dies, the surviving senators elect another in his room; the people have nothing to do in the choice; and the senate elects the deputies to be sent to the States of Holland, and appoints the Burgo-masters and Eschevins, who may be resembled to the mayor and aldermen. The pensioner may be resembled to the recorder, who is always a person well versed in the civil law and customs of the country; and tho' he be inferior to the senators, has a very great influence on the state, and is usually applied to by foreign ministers.

The constitution of the government in other cities does not differ much from that of Amsterdam: the power is lodged in the principal magistrates,

The States General consist of the representatives of the seven United Provinces, who sit constantly at the Hague; and no Stadtholder, governor, or military officer, can sit and vote in the assembly of the States General. Each province appoints a president of this assembly in their turns, who is changed once a week. He sits in the middle of a long table, which will hold about thirty persons, the usual number of which the States General are composed; every province deputing what number of representatives they please; tho' all that are deputed by a single province have but one voice; and when the States General have resolved on any thing relating to peace or war, alliances or taxes, it must be sent to every province and city, which is a sovereign state, to be approved and ratified.

The Dutch usually raise annually between two and three millions sterl. in time of peace, out of which are paid their land forces, consisting of 25 000 men, foreigners as well as national troops, particularly Switzers, and Scots; and they have seldom less than fifty men of war in commission. Besides the troops already mentioned, the Dutch used to keep 15 or 20,000 more in the barrier towns, for maintaining of which they received the sum of 500,000 crowns per annum, out of the revenues of the Austrian Netherlands. Their taxes are raised by an almost general excise, and in time of war there is usually a poll-tax, a land-tax, and chimney or hearth-money, levied. But every province and city vary their taxes as they see fit, if they provide the quota demanded of them, the States General giving no directions as to the method of raising it; but tho' the Dutch tax every thing that is consumed at home, by eating, drinking, cloathing, &c. they take care that the duties on merchandize shall be extremely low both on importation and ex-

UTRECHT, one of the united provinces of the Netherlands, is bounded by the Zuyder sea, and part of Holland on the N. by Gelderland on the E. and S. and by another part of Holland on the W. being about 25 m. long, and as many broad. This is one of the most pleasant and healthful provinces in the united Netherlands, being firm ground, and very little bog and morass, as most of the other provinces are.

UTRECHT CITY, E. lon. 5. lat. 52. 7. cap. of the pr. of Utrecht, in the United Netherlands, sit. on the channel of the old Rhine, 23 m. S. E. of Amsterdam, and 25 m. N. E. of Rotterdam. A large populous well built city, the residence of a great many people of distinction, who resort hither on account of the goodness of the air, and the pleasantness of the situation, and have built several handsome seats in it. It is fortified, but not esteemed a place of strength, at least the inhabitants did not think fit to give the French king, Lewis XIV. the trouble of besieging them, but opened their gates to him when he invaded the United Provinces, anno 1672, and he kept his court in this city more than a year. Here the peace was made between the Allies and France, anno 1713, in the reign of Queen Anne. It is a very flourishing university, to which many English lads resort, whose relations are fanatically inclined, or in love with a republican form of government; but the students wear no distinguishing habits, or reside in colleges, as in England, but every one lodges where he sees fit. One inducement the English have for sending their sons hither, also, is the cheapness of their education; but as they may save something this way, on the other hand they lie under one very great disadvantage, namely, that there are no fellowships or preferments to be

UXBRIDGE, W. lon. 23 min. lat. 51. 31. a market town of Middlesex, sit. on the river Colne, 15 m. W. of London.

USBECK, or OUSBECK, TARTARY, the present BOGHARA, is bounded by Calmuck Tartary on the N. by Tibet on the E. by India and Persia on the S. and by a great desert, which separates it from the Caspian sea, on the W. What the exact limits of this country are, at present, is not easy to determine; but as it was the kingdom of the Great Tamerlane, it was once very extensive; and the kingdoms of India, Persia and Turkey, if not China, were then dependent on it, and from him the sovereigns of India and Persia derive their pedigree; but what remains of Usbeck Tartary or Bochara at present, was made tributary to the late Kouli Khan, who stormed and plundered their capital city Bochara. Usbeck Tartary is a fruitful country, and temperate climate, and well fit. for traffic, lying between Persia, India, China, and Russia; and accordingly it appears that Kouli Khan, their conqueror, found very great riches in the city of Bochara when he took it.

the pr. of Servia, on the S. W. being 200 m. long, and 100 broad, blessed with a temperate air, and fruitful soil, producing excellent corn, wine, oil, pasture, and all manner of European fruits; abundance of oxen and sheep, and an excellent breed of horses; but with all these advantages, very unhappy under the Turkish tyranny; for they are heavily taxed, and obliged to bring as many forces into the field as the Grand Signior requires, at their own charges; and tho' he suffers them to be governed by a native of the country, he appoints whom he pleases for their governor or prince, as he is called, without any regard to one family more than another, and deposes him as often as he sees fit. The only thing they are indulged in, is a free exercise of their religion, which is the Christian, of the Greek communion, which they apprehend they should not be, if they submitted to the Germans; and this makes them the more faithful to the Turks, and less inclined to submit to princes of the Roman Catholic communion.

WALCHEREN, the chief of the islands of Zeland, in the United Provinces, separated from the islands of N. and S. Beveland, by a narrow channel, and from Dutch Flanders by the mouth of the Scheld, and surrounded on every other part by the German sea. The chief town of the island, and of the whole pr. of Zeland, is Middleburg. This island is about 9 m. long, and 8 broad, lies very low, and is sub. to inundations, and not healthful; but it is generally fruitful, having good arable and pasture lands. Among other towns are those of Flushing and Terveer, which belong to the P. of Orange.

WEST-

WESTMANIA, a pr. of Sweden, having Upland on the E. and Wermland on the W.

WESTMEATH, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinster, bounded by Longford and Cavan on the N. by Eastmeath on the E. by King's county on the S. and by the river Shannon, which divides it from Roscommon, on the W.

WESTMINSTER CITY, forms the West part of the town which goes under the general name of London, but is under a distinct government. The dean and chapter of Westminster appoint the high steward, high bailiff, and other officers, who have the government of this city; whereas the lord mayor and aldermen have the government of that part of the town properly called London. In Westminster are the King's palace, and the houses of most of the nobility and persons of distinction in the kingdom; and here are held the high court of parliament, and the supreme courts of justice; but there is no bishop of this city. It elects two members of parliament.

WESTMORELAND, an English county, bounded by Cumberland on the N. by Yorkshire on the E. by Lancashire on the S. and by the Irish channel on the W. chief town Appleby.

WESTPHALIA, the North-west circle of the empire of Germany, bounded by the German ocean on the N. by the circle of Lower Saxony on the E. by the landgravate of Hesse, the palatinate of the Rhine, and the electorate of Triers on the S. and by the Netherlands on the W. being 200 m. in length, and from 150 to 200 in breadth, comprehending the duchy of Westphalia, the bishoprics of Liege, Munster, Paderborn, and Osnabrug, the duchies of Juliers, Cleves and Berg, the counties of Marck, Ravensburg, Lippe, Schwaenburg, Hoya, Diepholt, Oldenburg, Delmonhurst, Embden, Bentheim, Tecklenburg, Pyrmont, Lingen, Steinfurt, and Corbey Abbey, besides the towns of Aix la Chapelle, Dortmund, and many other imperial cities, which are sovereign states, and governed by their respective magistrates. The N. part of this circle is a great deal of it forest, a cold climate, and a barren soil. The best thing it produces is the bacon fed in their woods; but the southern provinces have a warmer air and a more fruitful soil.

WESTRAM, under the meridian of London, lat. 51. 15. a market town of Kent, sit. 44 m. W. of Canterbury.

WETER, a Swedish lake in the province of Gothland in Sweden, 90 miles long.

WETHERBY, W. lon. 2. 12. lat. 53. 55. a market town in the West Riding of Yorkshire, sit. 12 m. W. of York.

WETTERAVIA, or the WETTERAW, is the southern division of the landgravate of Hesse, in Germany, and lies along the northern bank of the river Maine, comprehending the counties of Hanau and Nassau.

WETZLAR, E. lon. 8. 15. lat. 50. 30. a city of Germany, in the cir. of the Upper Rhine and ter. of Wetteravia, sit. on the river Lohn, 28 m. N. of Francfort; an imperial city, or sovereign state, governed by its own magistrates. The imperial chamber, or supreme court of the empire, was removed hither from Spire in the year 1698.

WEXFORD, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinster, bounded by the county of Wicklow on the N. by the ocean on the E. and S. and by Kilkenny and Waterford on the W. [It is a pleasant maritime country, but the soil is for the most part coarse: it is chiefly inhabited by the descendants of the first Britons who reduced Ireland, many of whom still retain the language as it spoke in the time of K. Henry II. particularly in the bar. of Forth. It contains 315396 Irish Plant. acres, 11960 houses, 09 parishes, 8 bar. and 9 bor. and sends 18 memb. to parliament.

Wex-

WEXFORD, W. lon. 6. 25. lat. 52. 15. a port town, cap. of the county of Wexford, sit. on a bay of the Irish channel, at the mouth of the river Slaney; 58 m. S. of Dublin. [returns 2 memb. to parliament, is governed by a mayor, recorder and bailiffs, and gives title of earl to the noble family of Talbot.]

WEXIO, or WEXICO, E. lon. 14. 40. lat. 47. a town of Swedeland, in the pr. of Gothland, and ter. of Smaaland, sit. 31 m. S. of Weter lake.

WEYMOUTH, W. lon. 2. 34. lat. 50. 40. a port town of Dorsetshire, sit. on a fine bay of the English channel, 7 m. S. of Dorchester; sends two members to parliament, and gave the title of viscount to the noble family of Thynne.

WEIDAH, or FIDAH, E. lon. 3. lat. 6. a town on the coast of Guiney, in Africa, sit. 400 m. E. of Cape-coast castle, where the English have a factory.

WHITBY, W. lon. 7 min. lat. 54. 30. a port town of the North Riding of Yorkshire, sit. on the German sea, 13 m. N. W. of Scarborough and 38 m. N. E. of York.

WHITCHURCH, W. lon. 1. 25. lat. 51. 20. a borough town of Hampshire, sit. 10 m. N. of Winchester; elects two members of parliament.

* WHITEHART, a post house in the co. of Dublin, and pr. Leinster, in Ireland, sit. 14 m. N. of Dublin.

WHITEHAVEN, W. lon. 3. 16. lat. 54. 30. a port town of Cumberland, sit. on the Irish channel, 8 m. S. W. of Cockermouth, and 36 m. S. W. of Carlisle. This port is much frequented by the Irish, especially for coals.

WHITE-SEA, is a bay of the Frozen ocean, in the N. of Muscovy, sit. between Russian Lapland and Sannoi-da, at the bottom of which bay stands the city of Archangel. This was the only sea the Russians had any communication with till their conquest of Livonia.

WIBURG, E. lon. 9. 16. lat. 56. 20. cap. of the ter. of Wiburg in Jutland, sit. 120 m. N. W. of Copenhagen, sub. to Denmark.

WIBURG, E. lon. 29. lat. 61. a city and port town of Russian Finland, in the ter. of Carelia, sit. on the gulph of Finland, 70 m. N. W. of Petersburg.

WICCOMB CHIPPING, W. lon. 50 min. lat. 51. 36. a borough town in Bucks, sit. 12 m. S. of Aylesbury; sends two members to parliament.

WICK. See DUERSTEDE.

WICKLOW, a county of Ireland, in the pr. of Leinster, bounded by the county of Dublin on the N. by the Irish channel on the E. by Wexford on the S. and by Kildare and Catherlough on the W. [It is partly a fine arable country, and partly encumbered with many mountains; but its lower lands and rich bottoms are found to be a kindly and fertile soil. In some places have been discovered rich veins of copper, and other minerals. It contains 252410 Irish plant. acres, 7498 houses, 54 parishes, 6 baronies and 4 boroughs, and returns 10 memb. to Parliament.]

* WICKLOW, a sea port, in the co. of that name and pr. of Leinster, in Ireland, the shire town: it returns 2 members to parliament, sit. 23 m. S. of Dublin, W. lon. 6. 10. lat. 53.

WICKWARE, W. lon. 2. 30. lat. 51. 37. a market town of Gloucestershire, sit. 20 m. S. of Gloucester.

WIDIN, in European Turkey. See VIDIN.

WIGGAN, W. lon. 2. 32. lat. 53. 37. a borough town of Lancashire, sit. 29 m. S. of Lancaster; elects two members of parliament.

WIGHT ISLAND, part of the county of Southampton, and separated from it by a narrow channel is about 20 m. long and 12 broad. It consists of good arable and pasture grounds, hills and valleys, woods and champaign, and is equal to any part of England, of the same dimensions, either in the fruitfulness of the soil or pleasantness of the situation; but as there are no fortifications on the island, capable of sustaining a liege, it would lie pretty much exposed to the invasions of an enemy, if great part of the royal navy were not stationed at Portsmouth, in the same county, a little distance from it, and the general rendezvous of the men of war were not at Spithead, at the East end of this island. The narrowest part of the channel, which separates it from the rest of Hampshire, is called the Needles, at the West end of the island, through which ships pass, but with some hazard. Some general of the army is usually governor of this island, and it is a very profitable post. The chief town is Newport.

WIGTOWN, W. lon. 4. 40. lat. 54. 48. a borough and port town of Scotland, in the shire of Galloway, sit. on a bay of the Irish channel, at the mouth of the river Cree, 90 m. S. W. of Edinburgh.

WILKOMERS, E. lon. 25. lat. 55. 30. a city of Poland, in the D. of Lithuania, sit. 50 m. N. W. of Wilna.

WILLIAMSBURGH, W. lon. 76. 30. lat. 37. 20. capital of the English colony of Virginia in America, sit. in James county, between James river and York river, about 6 m. N. of James town, and 50 m. W. of Cape Charles. There are not above 40 or fifty houses in the town, tho' it be the seat of the government, where their parliament or general assembly meet, and their supreme courts of justice are held. Here was a college erected for the education of Indians, and well endowed; but it has not answered the pious design of the founders, the Indians expressing a very great aversion to be instructed in the sciences and in the learned languages. The reason that neither this nor James town are more increased in their buildings, is, that the planters in Virginia chuse to live in the country on their plantations, rather than in towns.

WILLIAMS-FORT, E. lon. 87. lat. 22. 45. a fort belonging to the English E. India company, sit. on the western branch of the river Ganges, in the pr. of Bengal, in the E. Indies, in Asia, 130 m. N. E. of Balifore, and 40 m. S. of Huegly.

WINCHESTER, W. lon. 1. 24. lat.

lat. 51. 6. the cap. city of Hampshire, sit. on the river Itching, 65 m. S. W. of London. This was anciently the capital and residence of the kings of the West Saxons, and K. Charles II. was so pleased with the situation of the place, that he built a magnificent palace here, but did not live to finish it, and none of his successors have thought fit to compleat it. It is the see of a bishop, and elects two members of parliament. There is a fine college and school here, endowed with a large revenue, founded by the venerable William of Wickham, who also founded New College in Oxford, whither the scholars of this school are sent when they are qualified for the university, and are entitled to fellowships there.

WINDISMARK, a division of the D. of Carniola, in the cir. of Austria, in Germany.

WINDSOR, W. lon. 37 min. lat. 51. 28. a borough town of Berkshire, 20 m. W. of London, most remarkable for the magnificent palace or castle, proudly situated on an eminence, which commands the adjacent country for many miles, the river Thames running at the foot of the hill. The knights of the garter are installed in the royal chapel. The town elects two members of parliament.

WINNICZA, E. lon. 29. lat. 49. 15. a town of Poland, in the pr. of Podolia, and ter. of Bracław, situate on the river Bog, 40 miles N. of Bracław.

YONNE, a river of France, which rises in Burgundy, and runs North through Nivernois and Champaign, passing by Auxerre and Sens, and falling into the river Seyne at Monteraufur Yonne.

YORK, W. lon. 50 min. lat. 54. the capital city of Yorkshire, sit. on the river Ouse, 180 m. N. of London. It is a large city, and has some good buildings in it, and during the winter, a great many people of quality reside here, for whose entertainment they have lately built a magnificent assembly-house. The cathedral is a noble Gothic pile, equal to any thing of the kind in England. It is the see of an archbishop, and gives the title of Duke to the king's brother when he has one; and elects 2 memb. of parl. The chief magistrate has the title of Lord-Mayor. It is not a town of great trade.

YORK, NEW, one of the British colonies in North America, which, if we comprehend the Jerseys, that frequently have the same governor, is sit. between 72 and 74 degrees of W. lon. and between 41 and 44 degrees of N. lat. bounded by Canada on the N. New-England on the E. the American sea on the S. and Pennsylvania and the country of the Iroquois on the W. being upwards of 200 m. in length from N. to S. but scarce 60 m. broad in any part. This country produces corn, and abounds in cattle, and a good breed of horses; but they are chiefly employed in the fishery for whales, as well as cod fish. They supply the sugar islands with flour, salt beef and pork, and salt fish, with horses and timber. They export a great deal of dried and salted fish to Europe, and bring logwood, whale oil and bone to England, and from thence are supplied with most of their cloathing and furniture, and tools. This is a royal government, the King appointing the governor and council; but they elect their own representatives or parliament men. The established religion here is that of the church of England, though other persuasions are tolerated, and have have their respective places of worship allowed them. The province lies a little exposed to the French and Canada Indians on the North; for which reason some forts have been built on that side; and on the South it is not a small force that can hurt them, having the sea for their defence, and a garrison of 400 men, in the city of New York, and usually some cruizers on the coast.

YORK, NEW, CITY, W. lon. 72. 30. lat. 41. cap. of the pr. of New York, is sit. on an island in the mouth of Hudson's river, about 14 m. long, and 3 broad. It contains about a thousand houses, well built with brick and stone, and standing on an eminence, surrounded with a wall, and other modern fortifications, makes a fine appearance. It has also a spacious harbour, with commodious kays and warehouses on them, and employs several hundred ships and vessels in their foreign trade and fisheries. The inhabitants consist of English, and the posterity of the Swedes and Dutch that were settled here before the English reduced it to the obedience of this crown, with several families of French refugees incorporated with them.

YOUGHAL, a large walled town in the co. of Cork, and pr. of Munster, in Ireland, sit. on the mouth of the river Blackwater, an antient corporation, governed by a mayor, and bailiffs, who, with the freemen, return 2 memb. to parl. The original inhabitants were a colony from Bristol, who still retain much of the old English dialect. This place had formerly more trade than at present. It hath a barrack for 2 foot companies, W. lon. 7. 50. lat. 51. 50.

YPRES, E. lon. 2. 46. lat. 50. 54. a city of the Austrian Netherlands, esteemed almost impregnable, and one of the barrier towns, but shamefully surrendered in the year 1744, by the Dutch garrison, within a few days after the French sat down before it; and with it the whole chateaux, comprehending the towns of Mount Cassel, Baileul, Rousselaer,

Z A

Poperingen, Warneton, Commines, and Warwick. This city had a good trade lately in the silk and woollen manufactures, and is the see of a bishop, suffragan to the archbishop of Mechlin.

YSSOUDUN, E. lon. 2. lat. 47. a town of France, in the pr. of Berry, sit. 18 m. S. W. of Bourges.

YVICA, sit. in one degree of E. lon. and 39 N. lat. a Spanish island (the least of the Baleares) sit. in the Mediterranean sea, between the province of Valencia, in Spain, and the island of Majorca, being about 30 m. long, and 24 broad; a mountainous barren country, but produces great quantities of salt.

YUNAM, the most S. W. pr. of China, in Asia.

Z A

Z AARA, or SARRA, one of the divisions of Africa, is sit. under the tropic of Capricorn, bounded by Bildulgerid on the N. by the unknown parts of Africa on the E. by Nigrita or Negroland on the S. and by the Atlantic ocean on the W. a barren desert, as the name signifies, and so destitute of water, that the caravans of camels, which pass over it from Morocco, to traffic with Negroland, are half loaded with water and provisions. As it produces scarce any thing to sustain life, there are no towns in it, but a sort of people like the Arabs, who live in tents, and being acquainted with the few springs there are, wander from one part of the country to the other, as they expect to meet with water and food for their cattle. They are not black, but of an olive complexion; their language Arabic, and their religion Mahometanism, supposed to be the descendants of those Arabs who subdued Africa soon after the death of their prophet Mahomet.

ZANGUEBAR, is a country on the E. coast of Africa, sit. in southern lat. between the Equator and the tropic of Capricorn, being bounded by the country of Anian on the N. by the Indian ocean on the E. by Caffraria, or the country of the Hottentots, on the S. and by the unknown parts of Africa on the W. comprehending the provinces of Magadoxa, Melinda, Quilba, Mozambique, and Sofala. Here the Portuguese have a great many colonies and settlements, and pretend that they have made many proselytes to Christianity among the Negroes, and claim a kind of dominion over the petty princes on this coast.

The Portuguese trade with them for gold, slaves, ivory, ostrich feathers, wax, and drugs; besides which, the country produces rice, sugar, and such fruits, as are usually found between the Tropics. The natives who have not embraced Christianity, are either Mahometans or Pagans.

ZANTE, E. lon. 21. 30. lat. 37. 50. an island of the Mediterranean, sit. 12 m. W. of the Morea, and 14 S. of the island of Cephalonia, being 24 m. long, and 12 broad, very considerable on the account of the little grapes it produces, called currants, or corinths, from their being cultivated formerly about Corinth, where there are now scarce any; most of the countries in Europe being supplied with them from this island. The natives are most of them Greeks; but the Venetians, to whom the island is subject, have introduced the Roman catholic religion here. The chief town is Zant, sit. on the E. side of the island, well fortified and defended by a castle, the residence of the governor, who is always a noble Venetian of the first rank. This island lies very much exposed to the attacks of the Turks, since the Venetians lost the Morea, anno 1715.

ZARA, E. lon. 17. lat. 44. a city of Dalmatia, sit. on the gulph of Venice, 60 m. N. W. of Spalatto, surrounded by the sea, and strongly fortified, and is the see of an archb. sub. to Venice.

ZARNAW, E. lon. 20. lat. 51. 30. a city of Poland, in the pr. of Little Poland, and pal. of Sandomir, sit. 63 m. N. of Cracow.

ZATOR, E. lon. 19. 30. lat. 50. a town of Poland, sit. on the river Vistula, 14 m. W. of Cracow.

ZEALAND, the chief of the Danish islands, is sit. at the entrance of the Baltic sea, bounded by the sea called the Schaggerack on the N. by the Strait called the Sound, which separates it from Schonen in Sweden, on the E. by the Baltic sea on the S. and by the Strait called the Great Belt, which separates it from the island of Funen, on the W. being of a round figure, near two hundred miles in circumference; the chief town Copenhagen, the cap. of the K. of Denmark, sit. on the eastern coast. The island of Zealand produces no bread corn, but rye, of which there is not enough to subsist the Inhabitants, and there is but little meadow or pasture ground; a fourth part of the island is forest, and reserved for the king's game, and a great deal more taken up in lakes and marshes, which, with the neighbourhood of the sea, occasions a thick foggy air.

ZEALAND, a pr. of the United Netherlands, consists of eight islands, which which lie in the mouth of the river Scheld, bounded by the province of Holland, from which they are separated by a narrow channel on the N. by Brabant on the E. by Flanders, from which they are separated by one of the branches of the Scheld, on the S. and by the German sea on the W. the chief of which islands is that of Walcheren, whereon the city of Middleburg, the cap. of the province, is situate. The land lies very low in all these islands, which renders them liable to inundations, and puts them to great expences in maintaining their dykes or banks, and occasions an unwholesome air; but the islands are generally fruitful, and produce good corn and pasturage; and by their fisheries and foreign trade, the people become exceeding rich, tho' there are not many manufactures in this province.

ZEIGINHEIM, E. lon. 9. lat. 50. 55. a town of Germany, in the land of Hesse Cassel, sit. 30 m. S. of Hesse Cassel city.

ZOLNOK, E. lon. 20. 28. lat. 47. 28. a town of Upper Hungary, sit. on the river Teyelle, 55 m. E. of Buda.

ZUG, one of the cantons of Switzerland, is surrounded by the cantons of Lucern, Zurich and Switz, and is 18 m. long, and 7 broad, more fruitful than some of its neighbours; for the country produces corn, and wine enough to subsist the inhabitants, who are of the Romish communion. There is no town in the canton; the principal village is Zug, pleasantly situate on a lake of the same name. In this, and the rest of the smaller cantons, the legislative power is lodged in the diffusive body of the people; every man, whether master or servant, above 16 years of age, gives his vote to the making or altering their laws, raising forces, levying taxes, &c.

ZURICH, a canton of Switzerland, is bounded by the canton of Schaffhausen on the N. by the canton of Appenzel on the E. by Zug and Switz on the S. and by Bern and Lucern on the W. being 50 m. long, and 40 broad, and is esteemed the richest of the cantons, in proportion to its territory, tho' it be not half so large as Bern; for here the people apply themselves to trade, and have several profitable manufactures.

ZURICH

Z U

ZURICH CITY, E. lon. 8. 30. lat. 47. 52. capital of the canton of Zurich, is pleasantly situated at the N. end of the lake of Zurich, 35 m. S. W. of Constance, and is one of the best built towns in Switzerland. The government of this canton is aristocratical, being lodged in the principal inhabitants and their representatives; the common people have no share in it, and their religion is the Presbyterian or Calvinism.

ZURICH LAKE, is 24 m. long, and 3 broad, and by it the people of Zurich have an opportunity of importing and exporting their merchandize, it having a communication with the river Rhine.

ZUTPHEN, a county of the United Netherlands, and the E. division of the province of Gelderland, is bounded by the province of Overijssel on the N. by Munster in Westphalia on the E. by the duchy of Cleves on the S. and by the Velue, another division of Gelderland, on the W. being 30 m. long, and 24 broad.

ZUTPHEN, E. lon. 6. lat. 52. 15. a city of Zutphen, in Gelderland, sit. on the river Yssel, 16 m. N. E. of Arnheim, and 8 m. S. of Deventer, supposed to have taken its name from its situation in the fenns, though now the country is drained; it is much resorted to on account of the healthfulness of the situation.

Z W

ZUYDERSEE, is a great bay of the German ocean, which lies in the middle of the United Provinces, having the islands of Texel, Flie, and Schelling, at the entrance of it, on the N. the provinces of Friesland, Overijssel, and Gelderland, on the E. Utrecht, and part of Holland, on the S. and another part of Holland on the W. in which there are a great many port towns; but the chief is Amsterdam, whose foreign trade is equal, if not superior, to that of any town in the world; and yet the Zuyder sea is so shallow, that it is with great difficulty the Dutch flat-bottomed vessels pass over it. The usual entrance of this sea is between the Texel and the continent of North Holland.
